The remains were buried in the Odd Fellows cemetery, and the clothing was taken to the family residence near Goshen. Recently the clothing was taken out of the trunk, and the fever started. Frank, the eldest son, was the first to take it. He died on Monday, Oct. 15th, and was buried the following day. The father, W. Thomas Walker, died last Monday, Oct. 22d, aged about 55 years. Two grand children, who were at his house, died the same day, one a girl, aged about 3 1/2 years and the other a boy, aged about 2 1/2 years. The name of the children is Bailey. The remains of Mr. Walker and his two grand children were buried last Tuesday in the Odd Fellows cemetery near Eugene, being five of the family who have been laid to rest there within a few months—four within one week—all victims of scarlet fever. There were five other members of the family down with the fever. All are getting better.

Probably a Fatal Accident. Mr. Coll. Garrett a young man about 28 years of age accompanied by Mr. James Cane of this county, last Tuesday evening about five o'clock attempted to cross the Willamette river at Peoria. Mr. Garrett was managing the boat but had never had any experience of much consequence in running the ferry. When they got into the middle of the stream the current was very swift and Mr. Garrett had hold of the wheel and was holding the boat sideways to the current so that nearly the full weight of the water came directly against the boat. The pressure was so heavy that the spokes in the wheel either broke or else pulled loose from Mr. Garrett's grasp which let Mr. Garrett pitch forward toward the wheel, one of the spokes struck his head just above the left temple and another one a little above and back of the left ear, both places the skull was crushed through to the brain. On Wednesday morning the young man was yet alive but not expected to live.

A large whale was killed by Indians off Cape Fattery a few days ago. They surrounded the animal with seven large canoes and literally filled him with spears, to each one of which was attached a bladder to keep him afloat. The whale lashed the water with his tail to a foam, but the bladders proved too much for him, and he soon succumbed and was towed off.

An Oregon Pioneer.

CLAYTON, ADAMS CO. ILL. October 23, 1883.

EDITOR GAZETTE:—I have been as far east as I proposed going when I left home, that was Springfield. I went there for the purpose of seeing Oak Ridge cemetery and Lincoln monument, and also to go through the State capitol, said to be the finest building in the United States; and so far as my own observation and inspection has been it certainly is ahead, as the estimate of cost now reaches the enormous sum of six million dollars, and will take two million more to complete the structure. As for the Lincoln monument and the tomb of the martyred president, it is simply a representation of the man and his deeds, that is to say sublime, grand, and beautiful, and think that definition is the best possible description myself or any tourist can give of it. As I walked around the vast pile of granite blocks, furnished by each State, it course it was natural for me to look for the block furnished by our own beloved Oregon, and at last the block was pointed out by the guide, with the letters "Or." cut upon it, and I told him that when letters at home would in no case mean Oregon, and expressed the wish that Or. be substituted in its place.

As to this country, (Ill.) its agricultural resources are immense, both in soil and production, yet in many essential features I am disappointed, as I supposed that after an absence of 40 years that on my return each homestead would be beautifully decorated with fine buildings and orchards and flower gardens and shade trees, and all necessary improvements far beyond my own rude conception of such things, but alas to my astonishment and disappointment, every State through which I have passed is behind the Willamette valley in all these improvements; and in the matter of churches and schools in the rural districts we are fully up if not ahead. As an instance, where I am now stopping, 16 miles from Quincy, in an old rich district, not a church in a radius of six miles, and not a Sabbath school in any neighborhood I visited outside of the towns and cities. Strange as this may seem it is nevertheless true. How proud I am to say that even Soap Creek can discount such a state of morals as this. But I find I am scribbling this letter much to long for your paper, and may be to long for any one to drag through, so I close by saying to all who have homes in the Willamette that think of changing localities, my advice is to "look before you jump."

Yours, rather homesick, T. CARTER.

Bro. Elias Wiser has been suffering from a felon on one of his fingers for some days. It is a very painful pet, and has occupied Mr. W.'s closest attention for several days. The other day, concluding that a poultice would help matters, he carefully proceeded to apply one, and found great relief from it. When his wife took off the bandage to apply a fresh one, she found that Mr. W. had poulticed the wrong finger. Imagination is a big thing.

Second Report of the Utah Commission.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 30.—The board of Utah commissioners have submitted their second annual report to the secretary of the interior. After making a statement of the former legislation of congress relative to bigamy or polygamy they say the duties of the commission appertain to matters of registration and election, and eligibility to office, while the punishment for the crime of polygamy is left as under the former law, to counts of justice. Under the anti-polygamy act the commission had good success, at the general election in August, 1883, in excluding polygamists from the polls, and so far as it was advised very few if any illegal votes had been cast in Utah since the commission took charge of registration and elections, in August, 1883. The enforcement of the present law against 12,000 polygamists, who have been excluded from the polls, shows that the act has been fully and successfully executed.

It is thought that discrimination between those Mormons who practice polygamy and those who do not, while not likely to have much effect upon elderly men who have already a plurality of wives, must have great weight with the young men of the territory, many of whom are ambitious and aspiring and would not like to voluntarily embrace political ostracism. The very existence of a law disfranchising polygamists tend to destroy their influence, whenever it is understood that discrimination is to be permanent. The fact also that it will be necessary to the preservation of the political influence of the people's party (as the Mormons style themselves) to have a large body of their members who are not polygamists, must tend to weaken the practice of polygamy, for every Mormon who takes but one plural wife loses three votes for his party—his own and those of his two wives, woman suffrage being established by law in Utah.

Concerning plurality of wives, the report says that a doctrine and practice so odious throughout Christendom should have been upheld so many years against the laws of congress and the sentiment of the civilized world is one of the marvels of the nineteenth century, and can be scarcely appreciated even by those familiar with the world's history.

In relation to the difficulties of government control or suppression of religious fanaticism, the report says that certainly no government can permit a violation of its laws under the guise of religious freedom; and while congress may not legislate to a mere matter of opinion, yet it may denounce and punish as crimes those actions which are in violation of social duties or subversive of good order. The right of congress to suppress this great evil is undoubted. It is equally plain that the dignity and good name of this great nation among the nations of the earth demands such congressional action as shall effectively eliminate this national disgrace.

The commission renew the recommendation contained in the report of November 17, 1882, notably the one regarding the enactment of marriage laws by congress, declaring all future marriages in the territory null and void, unless contracted and evidenced in the manner provided by the act. If the next legislature shall fail to adopt measures in conformity with the provisions of the act of 1882 for the suppression of polygamy, the commission will be prepared to recommend and congress certainly will not be disposed to delay, the adoption of such stringent measures, compatible with the limitations of the constitution, as may be considered necessary for the suppression of this great evil.

The report refers to various municipal elections, and says the most important election was that of August 6, 1883. The total number of votes cast in this contest was 11,969, against 29,923 at the last November election. The principal falling off was on the part of the gentiles, or "liberal party." In November the total vote of the people or Mormon party was 23,089; liberal, 4884. In August, 1883, the vote of the people's party, 20,508; liberal 1433. From this it appears that a large number of liberals refrained from voting, a fact much to be regretted, for the reason that it is believed that by proper efforts and good management one or more non-Mormons might have been elected to the legislature, who could have had an opportunity of putting a majority on record.

In conclusion the commission say that recently some ten suits were instituted in the third district court of Utah by Mormons against numbers of this commission, complaining that they had been unjustly deprived of the right to register and vote. These are understood to be test cases, designed to contest the constitutionality of the Edmunds act, as well as the legal construction which should be put upon its provisions. The suits are still undecided, and are likely to be appealed to the supreme court of the United States.

It has been asserted that polygamous marriages have increased since the passage of the Edmunds act. On the contrary we have the opinion of many Mormons and non-Mormons that they have comparatively decreased since the passage of the act. After diligent inquiry we believe the latter conclusion is correct, but the Utah legislature will have an opportunity of satisfying the country on this particular point, or passing such public marriage acts as that which we have suggested to congress. By this, and such other legislation as we have indicated, they will give the government assurance of their loyalty and patriotism, and avert a contest that cannot but result in their discomfiture.

We consider it proper to commend the zeal of the governor of Utah in his efforts to enforce the laws.

DIED.

NEUGASS.—In this city on Monday, October, 29th after a short illness, Simon Neugass, in the 60th year of his age. Deceased was born Feb. 26th, 1883, in Frankfort on the Main, Germany, and for the past 26 years had been a resident of Corvallis. He was a man of many excellent qualities, a genial companion, a kind neighbor and a beloved father. He leaves a wife, son and daughter to mourn their loss.

A short time since and the subject of this notice was the ornament of his family. He stood at the head of his dear ones as husband and father, and from that high position he has fallen suddenly and forever. His intercourse with the living world is now ended, and closed forever are those lips on whose friendly words we have so often and so lately hung with transport. From the darkness which rests upon his tomb there proceeds a light in which it is closely seen that those gaily objects which men pursue are only phantoms, the bubble which seemed to have so much solidity has burst and we again see that all below the sun is vanity.

His remains were taken to Albany on Thursday for interment in the Jewish cemetery near that place and were followed by a large number of sorrowing friends.

R.

SRCLAIR.—In Monroe, Oct. 19, 1883, Ethel Ione, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Wymon Sinclair, aged three years and five months. She was only sick a few days, the disease being scarlet fever.

Calm on the bosom of thy God, Sweet Ethel, rest thee now. Even while with us thy footsteps trod His soul was on thy brow.

Fresh roses lay thy hand, Buds on thy pillow laid; Haste from this brighting land, Where flowers so quickly fade.

Before thy heart could learn In waywardness to stray; Before thy feet could turn To dark and downward way.

Lonely are the days, and sad the hours, Since the sweet smile is gone; But Ethel, a brighter home than ours In Heaven is now thine own.
