terment.

Hon. Geo. A. Waggoner while rusticating at the Bay last week was out gunning with his fine Winchester rifle one day and espied a'fine sandhill crane, sometimes called a "shitepoke," and with a steady nerve and correct eye, (to hear him tell it.) drew a fine bead on the bird and fired. The leaden missile'sped on its way of death and destruction, but the bird lazily folded up its long legs and soared away unharmed. Not so with an unsuspecting cow which happened to be grazing on the tide land in that vicinity. The bullet struck the water, and, (to hear George tell it), glanced off in an entirely different direction, a distance of at least one-half mile, struck the aforesaid cow in the neck with sufficient force to break her neck. The cow "gave up the ghost," and George was shortly afterward hear ily thanked by the lady who owned the dead brute for "Killing her oldest cow." He did the handsome by paying a good price for his game, and was for several days to be seen retailing "nice yeal" to the Yaquinaites. Now the query is thow much did the cow weigh, and how long was George in finishing his all but pleasant job of retailing?" His sales, we at 9 A. M. Bishop Hargrove of Tenn. prehe credibly informed amounted to eight lbs. per day. His next exploit with his "trusty rifle." (?) will be in the mountains, when we expect to hear of him shooting over hills and into canyons, killing deer, bear, elk and other small game by the score.
