LIQUOR MANUFACTURERS AND LABOR.

We came across some very curious and interesting statistics a few days since in the Irish World which we condense for our readers. It has been intimated that the liquors which were worth to the manufacturers in 1880 $144,000,000 cost the consumers $700,000,000, says the S. J. Mercury.

What part of every $100 of this $700,000,000 went into the pockets of the laborers who produced it? About $2. Now compare this with the part of every $100 of the retail price of manufactured products in general in 1888 which went into the pockets of the laborers. It is found that $14 of every $100 of these articles reaches the laborer who produced them—seven times as much as labor receives in the liquor industry.

If the $700,000,000 spent for liquors had been spent in miscellaneous industries, labor instead of receiving $15,000,000 would have had $105,000,000 or a clear gain of $90,000,000.

But some of the industries pay much better than the average of the whole. For instance, of the retail price of hardware or furniture of every $100, $24 went to labor to produce these fabrics. Of every $100 paid to the retailer for boots and shoes, $20 went to the laborers who made them. If this $700,000,000 had been spent in industries as profitable to labor as hardware and furniture, labor, instead of receiving $15,000,000 would have been paid $180,000,000 or a clear gain of $165,000,000.

To put the matter in another light had the labor employed in manufacturing liquors been used in promiscuous manufacturing, instead of giving employment to 33,639 persons it would have given work to 235,823. Or if it had been used in manufacturing hardware or furniture it would have given employment to 404,268 persons. Thus we see at the first end of the liquor business the balance is all against the laborer. When we come to the latter end, his condition is made worse than the first. He pays for an article which "not enriches him but makes his family poor indeed" over five times its cost, and has nothing to show for it at the end of the year but poverty and crime.

THE EUROPEAN OCTOPUS.

There is no doubt that all the other European powers are in constant dread of the great half-civilized nation of Russia. This enormous power, moved by a central despotism without any accountability to its millions of subjects, is a constant menace to the peace of mind of all Europe. It has its tentacles reaching out in every direction, ready at any moment to draw in any weak nation needed for its aggrandizement. It is particularly watching Turkey on the southwest and Persia on the southeast, the first opening the way to the Mediterranean, the other to the Indian ocean. It will never rest until both these countries are swallowed and it gains an outlet in both these directions, unless in the meantime its own power is exploded into ten thousand fragments by interior revolution. What is a remarkable fact, is, that the head of this colossal political power is himself no better than a prisoner in his own dominions, in abject terror of assassination by his own subjects. His only safety in the past has been in the army. Now this branch is becoming honey-combed with nihilism. When this turns against him, no one can tell what terrible internal upheavings may take place within the very vitals of this strong and much-dreaded power of the north.

James G. Blaine knows what he is about and he will see that the United States loses neither dignity nor prestige in the settlement of the Behring's sea dispute. The probabilities are that the matter will be disposed of by peaceful measures, but if our ancient British enemy insists on war the result will no doubt be that Canada will become a part of the United States.

A CENSURABLE BLUNDER.

The Evening Telegram, of Portland, dated August 16, contains the following:

"The 6 o'clock west side Southern Pacific passenger train, (from Corvallis), on coming into the city last evening, came near meeting with an accident which would in all probability have proved very disastrous. The facts are as follows:

T. M. Stark, the tin roofer, bought from Seid Back one of the cottages standing in front of S. G. Reed's residence, on First street, and was having it taken from the site to a lot in South Portland. At 5 o'clock yesterday afternoon the mover had got the house into Whitaker street, on Second, and when the men quit work, to prevent teams from being injured, they obstructed the street with the heavy timbers used as trackage for the rollers to slide on. These timbers, for some unknown reason, lay across the railroad track which crosses Second street diagonally at that point, and extended on each side. There were several of them, and they were very heavy, being about six inches thick and ten inches in width. When the evening passenger came along, the engineer, looking out, saw the obstruction just in time to stop his train less than ten feet from the timbers. The train men then got out, and after removing the obstruction, the throttle was opened, and the train proceeded into town. The occurrence was witnessed by a number of parties, and, considering the fact that it is a grave offense simply to delay a train bearing the United States mail by placing ever so slight an obstruction on the track, it is to be wondered at that the timbers were put there. Had the engineer not seen the obstruction until a few seconds later, the engine and cars would have been thrown from the track, it is said, without a doubt, and as the side toward the river is an abrupt incline, the chances would have been great that someone would have been badly hurt, if not killed. Such carelessness is reprehensible, and deserves popular censure. It is intimated in official circles that the matter may terminate seriously for the persons who put the timbers on the track."

It is curious how the name David runs through the principal incidents in the life of the late ex-Judge Terry. He was named David, and he killed David C. Broderick in a duel. One of Broderick's seconds was David D. Colton, and the duel was witnessed by David J. Brewer, United States circuit judge of the eighth judicial district of Illinois. Terry was killed by David Neagle, and Justice Field's father and one of his brothers were baptized David.

BEST IN THE WORLD

Further Great Cures of Skin Diseases by Cuticura.

Boy one year and a half old. Face and body in a terrible condition, being covered with sores. Sulphur springs fail. Cured by Cuticura Remedies.

I have used your CUTICURA REMEDIES in two cases where it proved to be successful. The first was in the case of a boy a year and a half old. His face and body were in a terrible condition, the former being completely covered with sores. I took him to the Massena Sulphur Springs, but he did not improve any. I was then advised to try the CUTICURA REMEDIES, which I did. He took one and one half bottles of CUTICURA RESOLVENT, when his skin was as smooth as could be, and is to-day. I used the CUTICURA on his sores and the CUTICURA SOAP in washing him. He is now five years of age, and all right. The other case was a disease of the scalp, which was cured by washing with the CUTICURA SOAP and rubbing in the CUTICURA, one bottle of CUTICURA RESOLVENT being used. They have proved successful in every case where I have advised the use of them. It is surprising how rapidly a child will improve under their treatment. I recommend them for any disease of the skin as being the best in the world. This is my experience, and I am ready to stand by my statement.

An Unbearable Skin Disease Cured. I have been afflicted since last March with a skin disease the doctors called Eczema. My face was covered with scales and sores, and the itching and burning were almost unbearable. Seeing your CUTICURA REMEDIES so highly recommended, concluded to give them a trial, using the CUTICURA and CUTICURA SOAP externally, and RESOLVENT internally for four months. I call myself cured, in gratitude for which I make this public statement.
