THE LONDON STRIKE.

The great strike, which ended last week in London, is the greatest ever known in that city's history. It started among the dockmen, who are a shiftless set of men employed from day to day by the great dock companies.

THE COTTON SEED.

Was there ever, says the Banker's Monthly, such a history as that of the cotton seed? For seventy years despised as a nuisance, and buried or dumped as a garbage, then discovered to be the very food for which the soil was hungering.

A POLITICAL MONTH.

October will be the political month of the present year. During its course the most important eastern states will hold their general elections, and the new states will choose their first array of officials.

The political statisticians and prophets of the country will watch closely the elections in New York, Virginia, Ohio and the new states. While the national administration is hardly long enough in office yet to be judged by the people, something of its popularity will doubtless be noticed especially in the new commonwealths, where clear republican majorities are expected.

ONE of the most striking suggestions concerning the proposed world's fair for 1892 is to have a fleet sail from Spain, visit San Salvador, then New York; then have the exhibition opened by the baby king of Spain. Queen Isabella pawned her jewels that Columbus might fit out an expedition.

In Salem on last Saturday a couple of fellows were arrested for committing a robbery in a dry goods store the night previous. The manner in which a clue was obtained by the police was that one of the burglars wore a pair of clean socks.

Worthy Lecturer of the State Grange John Simpson, has organized a sufficient number of granges in Washington to warrant the organization of a state grange, thus removing Washington from the jurisdiction of Oregon, and the state grange organization was perfected at LaCamas, in that state, on the 10th inst.

A valuable historical paper is to be published in the Overland Monthly for October. It is an account of the famous descent on the Cascade settlement, by the Yakimas and Kikikits in 1856. This fight was the first in which General Sheridan, then a newly commissioned second lieutenant, was engaged. The paper is a full and accurate narrative of the three days' fight, told on the authority of two survivors, D. F. Bradford and L. W. Coe. Illustrated from Mr. Coe's sketches and from photographs.

It is said that the unexpected success of the Tillamook Headlight since it passed into new hands has been a source of envy for half the editors of that region: A year or so ago the paper was on the verge of bankruptcy, and could have been bought for eight or nine dollars. Since then it has sprung into the thousands, and its proprietors have netted a small fortune. All this money came—not from subscriptions, not from the advertising patronage of the county—but from timber land notices. During the year a craze for the acquirement of such lands has run through the northwest, and in Tillamook county hundreds of claims have been taken. The notices are printed for ten weeks, and the charge is ten dollars. The Headlight frequently carried 150 to 200 of these advertisements, which meant a weekly income of $150 to $200. The regular revenue about paid expenses, so all this was clear money.

Work on the eastward extension of the Oregon Pacific railroad is now being pushed vigorously forward, says an Albany ex. Tracklayers and graders are being sent to the front. Wm. M. Hoag was in the city yesterday arranging for the details of the work. M. Schmidt, of the Yaquina hotel, has purchased an outfit in this city for the boarding cars and the same was shipped to the front. Beginning this week daily trains will be run to the end of the track. Bridge Superintendent Miller, of the Oregon Pacific, was out on the line to the front yesterday, gathering up timber and material and preparing for work, and will go out this morning with his carpenters and bridge builders and establish his camp at the old engineers' camp, four miles beyond the end of the track, and commence active operations. His framing yard and supply station will be at Mill City. Work will be pushed ahead as rapidly as possible.

THE BAY CITY ENDANGERED.

FIERCE FIRES RAGING IN THE TIMBER ALONG THE COAST—RELIEF ASKED FOR.

About 4:30 o'clock on Tuesday afternoon a telegram was received in Corvallis over the Oregon Pacific line stating that forest fires were raging in the timber around Yaquina City and that the town was endangered; it also asked for aid in the shape of fire apparatus. Albany was appealed to also. In a very short time a steam fire engine and some hose with a few firemen were placed aboard a special train and in fifteen minutes were in Corvallis where more hose, that had been taken to the depot, with more firemen, was taken on, and away the train flew. Whenever the straight track was reached the speed was nearly a mile a minute. At Harris the train, bearing steamer passengers and fruit for the valley, was passed.

After a run of 2 hours and 10 minutes (including 6 stops which took 40 minutes) the threatened city was reached, being 72 miles from here. By this time the flames which had spread over hundreds of acres had died down on account of their being no breeze, and the services of the fire apparatus were not needed. The fire burned all around the bay, destroying a couple of China houses a half mile this side of Yaquina City, with other out-buildings, amounting in value to about $250. It also burned the steam saw mill owned by Henry Byerly, situated in Alexandria. The machinery, planer and several thousand feet of lumber, were destroyed. The loss was about $5,000. At Newport the flames had crept down close to the town and destroyed two small residences on Newton Thompson's place valued at $250 each. The new Catholic church and the school house situated in the suburbs were saved. The firemen were cheered on their arrival, and were sumptuously cared for free of charge at the Yaquina hotel, accommodations having been provided for by Manager Hoag. The next morning they returned to the valley. All along the line of the railroad fires are raging in the forests and evidently the smoke which now overhangs this city comes from them.

THE YAQUINA WATER WORKS.—The Oregon Pacific company has about completed a large reservoir in the canyon north of the warehouse at Yaquina and 136 feet above the level of the dock. They will lay a six inch iron main from the reservoir to their shops, warehouses, etc., giving the place a first class water works plant. Hydrants will be put in at convenient points, and hose carts and hose provided for fire protection. A large amount of iron water pipe was brought up this trip by the Willamette Valley. An inexhaustible spring above the reservoir will give an ample supply of water.—Republican.
