The Case of a Cold.

A cold is a departure from health, and should really be attended to at once. Do not let it cure itself. Get rid of it soon. Do not feed it though, but starve it. One cold after another nearly always ends in thickening of the mucous membrane of the bronchial tubes, and before you are aware of it you become the victim of winter cough.

The morning tub (cold, I mean) is a very sure preventive of colds. Never overclothe nor overheat yourself. The neck should be kept cool. Keep away from fires indoors if you are subject to colds.

Cough, if not the result of simple laryngeal or bronchial catarrh, may mean a very serious departure from health; and the sooner one sees a doctor in such a case the better. Do not be afraid to consult him. Remember, it is only those that delay who suffer in the end. I do not advise you to rush to a physician with every trifling ailment, but it is better to be sure than sorry.

Many people would benefit much by taking cod liver oil for a month or six weeks at the changes of the season. Probably the diet would have to be lowered a little, and an occasional mild aperient taken.

Getting thin is another serious departure from health. One generally loses weight in winter, and regains it in summer; but a slow and steady decrease in weight calls aloud for medical interference.

Want of sleep and restless nights are symptoms which cannot be overlooked. The cause must be found and removed. The trouble may certainly arise from overwork and trouble combined, but in most cases the stomach and digestive organs are the roots of the evil.

Nervous people worry most, but they also work most. Well, the question one is inclined to ask himself when he feels something wrong with his health is: "Am I overworking myself?" I would answer thus: If you really enjoy working it cannot injure you very much; but, on the other hand, if it is forced work, and you find little pleasure in it, then it will tell on your constitution.

But many people cannot afford rest. Well, but wonders can be done by taking exercise; by breathing only fresh air night and day, in doors and out, and by careful regulation of the diet. In conclusion, let me entreat of you, as you value your happiness not to neglect first departures from health. The story of the reservoir has really a moral for every one of us.—Family Doctor in Caswell's Magazine.

There is a prominent lady in Philadelphia who has written for private circulation a little social tract, in which she takes the view that very little mischief would happen in the world that does happen if men would stay home evenings with their wives. Intemperance, crime, divorce, and even political corruption, she attributes to this cause.

Miss Brown—"Can't you spare me a little more money this week, pa? That is a dear, good father." Brown—"How much do you want, child?" Miss B.—"O, only enough to buy cloth for a bathing suit." Brown—"Of course, my dear, of course. Here is a quarter."—New Haven News.

"Why, John," said his wife impatiently, as she opened the door and found him still in bed, "you promised faithfully last night that you would get up in time to go to church with me." "I meant in time for evening service," explained John, turning over luxuriously.—The Epoch.

A negro preacher addressed his flock with great earnestness on the subject of miracles as follows: "My beloved friends, de greatest ob all de miracles was 'bout de loaves and de fishes. Dere was 5,000 loaves and 2,000 fishes, and de twelve 'postles had to eat dem all. De miracle is dey didn't bust."—New York Globe.

Western papers are discussing the vital question "What makes a man's trousers bag at the knees?" and none has thought to advance the theory that it is because the man wears the trousers. We don't know of anything that will make a man's trousers bag at the knees quicker than wearing them.—Norristown Herald.

"I see by the papers that Maude Jenkinson has made a great strike in that play, 'The Gauzy Spectre.'" "Yes; but I hear she has met with a severe loss." "What was that?" "Why, she left $2,000 worth of diamonds on her bureau in her hotel." "And they were stolen, eh?" "No, she found them just where she left them, and, of course, nothing was said about it in the papers."—Springfield Union.

"The bulk of my fortune I wish to bequeath to my scapegrace nephew, George," said the dying man. "Why, it was only yesterday he called you an old skinkflint," said the lawyer. "I'd cut the boy off." "That's all right," replied the testator. "You make me enough about wills to know that if I leave him all the money he won't get a cent of it."—Harper's Bazar.

Dr. Diagnosis—Why, young fellow, your liver is torpid, your circulation is sluggish, you are too fat for your years, your eyes are dull and heavy; you must take some exercise in the open air every day. What is your business? Patient—District telegraph messenger. Dr. D.—That's what I thought. Now, you must get out of doors and walk a little every day, or you'll die, doctors or no doctors.—Burdette.

How She Secured a Bargain.

There is a good moving story which has just gained publicity regarding some rather prominent furniture dealers in Chicago. The firm alluded to had a very elegant parlor set of solid mahogany and the finest upholstery. It also had duplicates in veneered wood and cheap plush in the store-room. The outfit, which was worth about $200, was displayed in the front windows, and marked: "This elegant parlor suit only $27." One day a mild, meek-looking woman came in, examined the furniture and fixated. She took a receipt for her money, left her address, and was bowed out by the smiling salesman, who assured her that "the things would be sent right over." In due time the wagon arrived at the young woman's house and backed up in front of the door.

"Hold on," said the purchaser, "don't unload yet." Then she climbed on the van and made a very peculiar examination of the load. At last she said to the driver and his assistant: "I'll go back with you to the store. These are not the goods I purchased." And back she did go, despite entreaties, and assurance that "everything was all right." When she walked in she was not the mild-mannered creature of two hours before.

"You've tried to swindle me," she cried. "I brought one set of furniture and you have sent me another. Now, I want what I have paid you for. How do I know? Because in every article of that set you sold me I stuck a pin while you were not looking. Now, I'm going to pick out my property and see that you take it over. If you don't there'll be trouble."

There was no trouble and the little woman is looking for some sharp merchant with a similar "bargain" on hand.—Chicago Herald.

Dr. H. H. P. Mate Farwell.

An old hunter in Mexico gave to the author of "Summerland Sketches" his experience with a favorite hound, which exhibited feelings that would honor humanity.

"You have no idea," he said, "how they get used to you if you are alone with them for weeks together; the worst of it is that it comes so awful hard on a fellow to lose a creature of that kind."

"I bought a fine Scotch deerhound in Baltimore in '66. I had him nearly eight years and I tell you, sir, I felt like shooting myself when I lost him. The Mexicans poisoned him because he wouldn't let them come near my smokehouse at night."

"No square, straightforward poison, either; for it took him a whole week to die. It just went through me like a knife to hear him whine, and perhaps I ought to have put him out of his misery, but I was thinking of all the scrapes we had helped each other out of—we had frozen and starved together all over Texas and Arkansas—and I couldn't kill him while there was the ghost of a chance of his pulling through."

The voice of the old rough became inarticulate at the recollection. He had spread the dog's couch at the side of his own bed, and patted his shaggy coat till he lay silent and motionless. But late in the evening when the logs in the fire-place had flickered almost to their last, the hound raised his head and placed it on his master's arm, looked into his eyes and sank back dead, like the last pressure of the human hand, "a farewell mutely spoken but hard to forget."—Youth's Companion.

A Lesson in Etiquette.

A young man stood in a doorway on Saturday evening. Another young man and a young woman passed. "Hello, Mary!" called the young man who stood, loudly, to the companion of the young man who walked. That young man stopped walking, deposited his girl in another doorway, came back to the other young man and gave him an unmerciful beating. "What did you do that for?" demanded the vanquished one as soon as he had a chance to speak. "You insulted the lady. I was with," was the reply. "I didn't do anything but say 'Hello, Mary' and, anyway, don't you know that she's my sister?" "Yes, I know that, but you had no right to attract attention to her on a crowded street by hollering at her. Do you suppose that the crowd knew that you are the brother? What would they think of a girl thus rudely accosted?" It was a severe lesson in street etiquette.—Buffalo Express.

Society Conversation.

The flimsy foundation upon which so-called "society" conversation and wit rest nowadays received a good illustration yesterday in a parlor of a hotel in this city. The group was composed of several elderly ladies of dowdy, aged portly, whose fresh cheeks and bright eyes showed that the goddess of health and they were on more than speaking terms, and one young woman whose charms of face and form indicated slight need of acquaintance with cosmetics or with medicine. Two gentlemen joined the ladies.

"O, come here," cried out the youngest, pointing to her smiling elders, "I want to show you two people who have never taken quinine."

Everybody immediately laughed aloud, and when the mirth had subsided enough so that speech was again possible one of the gentlemen cried out: "How inconsiderate!"

"Then they all laughed loudly again. What at?"—Minneapolis Journal.

A Supposititious Case.

A woman on Lafayette street east rushed out the other day and informed a policeman that she had seen a big dog crawl under her barn, and she believed the animal mad. The officer went around by way of the alley, after peering by the usual crowd, and after peering and peering for some time he shot three bullets under the barn to scare the dog out. After the third shot a movement was heard, and presently the long end of a colored man crawled into view. After backing out and brushing the dirt out of his eyes he added:

"Was it me you was shooting at?" "I supposed it was a dog under there," replied the officer.

"Wall, sah, don't you ever 'spose no mo'?" "It's dangerous." And he showed a bullet hole in his cap and another in his coat as proofs of the accuracy of the officer's aim. He had crawled under after a rabbit which had escaped from a neighbor. "It's all right," he said as the officer apologized, "but don't you 'spose no mo'?" You just kept right down to cole facts. Dis 'sposin' around 'at what gits pussions into serus trouble."—Detroit Free Press.

Consumption Cured.

An old physician, retired from practice, having had placed in his hands by an East India missionary the formula of a simple vegetable remedy for the speedy and permanent cure of consumption, bronchitis, catarrh, asthma and all throat and lung affections, also a positive and radical cure for nervous debility and all nervous complaints, after having tested its wonderful curative powers in thousands of cases, has felt it his duty to make it known to his suffering fellow-men. Actuated by this motive and a desire to relieve human suffering, I will send free of charge, to all who desire it, this receipt, in German, French, or English, with full directions for preparing and using. Sent by mail by addressing with stamp, naming this paper, W. A. NORRIS, 820 Powers' Block, Rochester, N. Y.

LIFE OF GENERAL SHERMAN!

By Gen. Howard and Fletcher Johnson.

The last of the great war heroes. He died honored and beloved by numberless personal friends and by millions of his countrymen, who will read with delight his early life. His grand war record, at Bull Run, in the Army of the Cumberland, at Shiloh, Memphis, Vicksburg, Chattanooga, Knoxville, Missionary Ridge, Atlanta, and in the immortal "March to the Sea," whose grandeur and glory has never been surpassed in the world's history.

With each copy of this book will be given a new and very superior Steel Plate Portrait of the General, made from a photograph taken just prior to his last illness and showing him in his General's uniform.

The work will contain about 600 pages, superbly illustrated by portraits, battle scenes, etc., from end to end. The book should find a place in every patriotic home in the land.
