OREGON AGRICULTURAL COLLEGE NOTES.

The athletes of the college expect to give an exhibition at Brownsville in about three weeks, and a great time is expected.

The new term opened the first of this week and good work is expected all along the line.

The preliminary contest to pick out a delegate to represent the O. A. C. in the coming interstate oratorical contest will take place in the near future.

The receipts for the preparatory contest were quite small, but as it was necessary that a large number of complimentary tickets be issued it could not be helped.

The chapel walls are now graced by four fine etchings and engravings, being the present of the two main literary societies of the college.

The first meeting of the athletic association under the new officers was held last Saturday evening. Numerous reports from standing committees were presented and several new committees appointed.

Some base ball goods were ordered bought, and the ball ground is soon to be the scene of some exciting games. The first game of the season will be played on the 15th, against Albany college. It has been decided that during this season no games will be played other than with college nines.

THE LITERARY CONTEST. The literary contest on Monday evening, April 3rd, was a great success. Although not a very large audience was present, yet the house was comfortably filled, and all that were present went away well satisfied at the close of the contest.

The Madisonian society won, but it was by such a small margin that it took away all the bitterness of defeat from the Athenian society.

Among the audience were several of the regents, and the judges were Gov. Penney, Supt. McElroy, and President Campbell, of Monmouth.

The exercises opened with a selection by the O. A. C. band, which was rendered in a very creditable manner. President Bloss then came forward and briefly told what the contest societies were doing; their object in this contest, and their aims.

Otto Kruse, of the Athenian society, was then introduced by Miss Davenport, the president of the society. He recited "Masters of the Situation" in a very satisfactory manner, his delivery being forcible and his enunciation clear.

Miss Thornbury, president of the Madisonian society, then introduced Miss Cecile Taylor, who recited "No! No! No!" This recitation was excellent and to Miss Taylor is due much credit for the manner in which she delivered it.

The next exercise was a piano solo by Miss Hortense Grefox. This was especially well rendered and was greatly appreciated by the audience.

Miss Mabel Hardin, of the Madisonian society, came next in a reading entitled "Pyramus and Thisbe." It was well delivered, the humorous part being especially good.

Miss Gussie Casto, of the Athenian side of the contest, read a selection entitled "Death Doomed," although this was a very hard selection, by reason of the necessary changes in voice and expression, it was delivered in a painstaking manner and the pathetic part was especially well rendered.

A piano solo by Miss Vorhees came next, and was fully appreciated, being a fine piece of music and well rendered.

Miss Sadie Friendly then delighted the audience by reading an interesting and amusing essay, for the Athenian society, entitled "Story of an old Shoe." It was the adventures of a kangaroo shoe from the time it was on the back of an Australian kangaroo, until it was laid to rest in an alley of Corvallis.

For the Madisonian society, Miss Elith Lilly read an essay on "Libraries." This was quite instructive, and showed that Miss Lilly was thoroughly conversant with the subject.

The audience was then entertained by a vocal solo by Miss Jennie Gellatly, who sang "Under the beautiful Stars" with fine expression.

Miss McBride of the Madisonian society then recited "A Voice from the Poor House." It was well delivered and with great force and eloquence.

The next was a recitation by Miss Wyatt, of the Athenians, "The Face against the Pane." This simple little poem was very well recited.

Miss Ora Spangler now rendered a piano solo in her usual thorough style, and judging from the applause, it was greatly appreciated.

Next on the programme was a reading by Miss Addie Davenport, entitled "An Order for a Picture." This was excellent, both in delivery and expression.

Miss Edwina Avery, of the Madisonians, then read "Curfew must not ring to-night," in a most expressive manner.

The piano solo by Miss Hogue was very good indeed.

The essay by Mr. Newman Kelloway, of the Madisonians, on "Nothing," created quite a sensation. It was written in rhyme and in it almost every thing was hit, even his "scelliepy" Governor Penney.

The mandolin solo by Miss Marie Edna Snell, accompanied by Miss Plummer on the piano, also created a sensation, being so highly appreciated by the audience that it was almost impossible for them to understand that encore would not be allowed.

The debate was "Resolved that the interests involved in the late civil war were of greater importance to the American people than those of the revolution." The first speaker was Mr. Lyonel Johnson, of the Madisonian society. The arguments he brought forward were logical and clear and his delivery was forcible.

The first on the negative was Mr. Clarence Depuy, who spoke eloquently, forcibly and right to the point.

The second speech on the affirmative was made by Miss Meila Dunlop. The whole speech showed deep thought and study; the gestures used were expressive and the arguments brought forward were good.

The last speech was to have been made by Mr. Marion Wood, but owing to sickness, his paper was read by Professor Lotz. The arguments in this paper were logical and straightforward, and there is no doubt that Mr. Wood had as good a speech as the other debaters.

Mr. John Fulton now sang a very beautiful song entitled "O ye Tears" in his usual expressive manner.

A very pleasing selection was rendered by the band, which was followed by a piano solo by Miss Dorothea Nash.

By this time the scale of points had been summed up by the judges and was read by President Bloss; it was as follows:

ATHENIAN SOCIETY. 2544 points. MADISONIAN SOCIETY. 2509 points.

ATHENIAN SOCIETY. 370 points. MADISONIAN SOCIETY. 375 points.

ATHENIAN SOCIETY. 523 points. MADISONIAN SOCIETY. 527 points.

ATHENIAN SOCIETY. 494 points. MADISONIAN SOCIETY. 494 points.

ATHENIAN SOCIETY. 1753 points. MADISONIAN SOCIETY. 1745 points.

It will be seen by this table that the Madisonians are the winners by two points. The largest number of points possible for either society to make was 1900.

The silver prize medal was then presented to Miss Thornbury by Miss Davenport. The speeches made by the losing and winning presidents were exceedingly complimentary and expressive of the good feeling between the two societies.

Governor Penney was then called upon for a speech. He said he had examined the programme, but had not noticed that the governor was down for a speech. He had noticed the appreciation of the audience for the contestants, and hoped they would have the same feeling for the judges. This contest reminded him of the "apple of discord" with every one striving for it; but he did not believe there would any enmity between the societies as there was between the ancient gods. In one respect the old times were better than the new, because at the annual fairs they had contests and prizes for intellectual productions as well as for live stock and agricultural products. In Greece the contests were for the best man physically and intellectually, and that was the reason that Greece was superior to other nations of her day. The governor was glad that President Bloss was following the example of ancient Greece, and hoped that soon from the college would come essays that would grace the pages of the magazines of the world, and speeches that would captivate intelligent audiences.

Supt. McElroy was called upon for a speech, but only made a few brief remarks. He said that one thing was certain, and that was that they were doing and would continue to do good work.

President Campbell, of Monmouth, was called forward, and made some very complimentary remarks. He spoke of the fact that this was the first college to take up this line of work. That the old colleges used to hold regattas, etc., but it was only lately that they had commenced to hold intellectual contests.

MABEL JENNESS. A Treat in Store for the People of Corvallis.

A lecture will soon be given by Miss Mabel Jenness on "Physical Culture and Artistic Dress." It is certainly a most favorable sign when four or five thousand people will listen spell-bound for two hours to a lecture on the hitherto much neglected subject of dress improvement, and correct methods in walking, standing and sitting. Yet so convincingly does this Mabel Jenness present her theme, illustrating her talk with a large number of beautiful costumes worn during the evening, that one who has heard her does not wonder that, following in her wake, the ash-barrels and waste-heaps of the land become a veritable "valley of Jehu" for the dried bones and torturing steels of the health and beauty destroying "Glove-fitting Corset."

Let every woman who wishes to know how to dress beautifully and hygienely, best Miss Jenness. The place and date of lecture will be given soon in the papers, and on window cards. Small circulars, giving dress stores, and correct methods in walking, standing and sitting, will be sent to those who wish to attend these lectures, but will be asked to retire the last ten minutes while Miss Jenness discants upon women's underwear.

Our agent will in a few days present you with a sample pkg. of our celebrated Fridge of Japan tea, which if given a fair test, you will use no other. Wheeler & Langley.

Royal Baking Powder

ABSOLUTELY PURE

Our little notice in the GAZETTE of March 24th advising the city tax-payers that they can prevent the purchase of the present incompetent Corvallis water works by taking legal steps to do so, seems to bring forth the wrath and indignation of the young man of the city council who dubs himself "A Councilman," in a labored article in the "Times" of last week.

This young man, as a prelude to his impudence, should have related how he became a councilman? Whether it was by vote of the people, or whether "log-rolled" in by appointment?

From the article he produced no one would judge him a councilman, and certainly no one would have any reason for seeking his counsel.

After his senior real estate partner was elected to the council a more modest young man than he would have declined the appointment of the junior member of the same firm.

He should explain to the people how it is to their best interests to have the city council composed considerably from the members of one family or firm. The city council for several years has been controlled too much in the interest of "clans" which augurs no good to the people generally.

In order for them to accomplish such results the principal owner in some business house gets into the city council, and it also happens that their principal clerk secures a membership therein, and by a little wire-working the principal member of some real estate firm, who all work as one mind, is induced to run as another councilman; after the election the junior member is also appointed to fill a vacancy, by the joint influence of the combination they all work together as a unit having no variety of opinion as to final results, which may be fun for them, but is a bad combination for those not in the ring.

Hereafter the voters should look to it and see that a considerable membership of the city council is not made up from the members of one or two houses. We remember a few years ago when the council was composed to some extent in that way they proceeded to hatch out and vote the franchise of the almost defunct street railway to the remainder of the owners in the respective houses and their relatives. These receiving the franchise incorporated the street railway and voted themselves a majority of the capital stock of the company to pay themselves for the valuable franchise which the council had just given them, they becoming the principal owners and controllers of the street railway for the franchise, who then procured a number of citizens to subscribe small amounts of the capital stock and pay it in, which together with six or seven thousand dollars which was borrowed from outside sources was invested in the street railway. This in some measure explains why the street railway is in financial embarrassment. If those parties who subscribed so much stock and gave in return for it cash or franchise should pay in cash for their stock like other stockholders, the street railway might be in a more flourishing condition.

The dominant power of the council today is made up to some extent in similar manner, and are trying to spend $28,000 of the city's money for an antiquated water works that any man, if he wanted to build new water works fully up to the improvement of the present time, could not afford to give $10,000 for.

Before proceeding to contract for said water works the council had an engineer make an itemized list in detail of the several things composing the water works. This engineer states in his report that he values the works new and in so doing his total estimate amounts to a little over $24,800, valued as new material. A large portion of the material has been in use long enough to be half worn out, and some of it is probably worn out. Some of the items in said water works said engineer valued fully up to the retail price, and much more than they could be bought for in large quantities. Will that councilman(?) who is so prolific with his innuendoes explain to the people why he is so anxious to give $28,000 to the water company for a second hand water works which on an average is more than half worn out and which the city's engineer says could be put in place new for $24,800. O! Yes! But may we say that the water company has a franchise and if valued at the same rate the street railway people sold their franchise to themselves an unconscionable associates, the water works might be valued at $40,000, or more.

The last three lines of city ordinance No. 20 which gives the water company their franchise expressly says as follows: "Provided further, that nothing in this ordinance shall be so construed so as to grant any exclusive right or privilege of conducting water into this city." He may again urge that the water company claims a contract with said city to furnish water to the city for fifteen years which has seven or eight years to run which the water company claims is exclusive. The ordinance above referred to says it is not exclusive, besides the courts have repeatedly held that under such circumstances a city can not make any exclusive contract for a water company to supply its water for so long a time, but that such a long-time contract is a monopoly and void.

Our young genius is fearful that some thing may "prevent the will of the people being accomplished." He apprehends that the "moss-backs" may do so. According to his ill-arranged vision, that may happen. While we do not deprecate well directed youth who exercise their opportunities in a courteous manner, because we all wish we were young again; yet this so-called coun-man may possibly be one of that class of venal youth who start out in life before their "mamas hardly know they are out," and possibly before having earned a dollar by their own exertions so as to know its value, and soon become like the "wood-viewing the ox" until they imagine themselves as big as the ox and so wise that all other persons in the community are termed "moss-backs" who dare to exercise an opinion of how he shall spend his money different from the espee-arrogant dictation of that youth.

We did not expect to get into a newspaper controversy but as our young friend gave so many logical reasons which induced him to consent that it was in the interest of the city to purchase the old water works we had to notice some of them. Yes, we came to this country some years before that verdant youth was dreamed of being born, and with many other pioneers have helped in our feeble way to develop this country. With others helped to take the first active initiatory steps to permanently locate and paid considerably to build the present brick college building after the church had surrendered it; assisted in taking the first active steps to build our present new district school house; encouraged the building of the new court house, and in fact all other public improvements. We are proud to be termed "moss-backs" along with those people who have helped to accomplish these grand results. That young adventurer has not swelled up large enough to be able to see that the present ill-constructed and worn water works are not a public improvement, but to buy them with the city's money would certainly be a public calamity in every sense of the term. We believe that quite a number of the present city council have been misled as to the wishes of the people to buy said old water works, because outside of the present city council, the owners of the water works, an occasional relative and the owners of the electric light works, we think that not over a dozen taxpayers in the city can be found who favor buying the present water works at the exorbitant price under discussion. The owners of the electric light works expect after the water works are purchased that the next step on the program will be to unload the electric light works on the city council at a big price. The people are waking up to the idea that there are some pretty "big deals" being hatched to jump onto the public purse.

The steps which the city council have taken towards purchasing the water works seem not to be warranted by law. If any they can retract their steps with consistent propriety and without violating good faith.

That gentleman who imposed his article through public print as "A councilman" had as well sign his name next time because his feet are so large and tracks so plain that it is impossible to conceal them with his vicious innuendoes or under a non-de-plum. And the public as a rule have little consideration for people who endeavor to hide their comment on public matters under a pseudonym.

M. S. WOODCOCK.

J. A. KNIGHT.

The long and woful suffering of Mr. John August Knight terminated on Sunday last, April 21, at 1:30 o'clock, in the last moment of death. Heart disease was the fatal enemy and for two weeks his dissolution had been anticipated to occur at any hour. Mr. Knight was born in Dresden, Germany in 1824 and was consequently 69 years of age. He learned the trade of cabinet maker and undertaker in his native land. He emigrated to the United States in 1847; came to California in 1851 where he resided until 1867 when he came to Oregon and settled in Corvallis. Here he engaged in the cabinet and undertaking business which he successfully conducted to the end of his life. He was a member of Barnum Lodge, No. 7, I. O. O. F., of 30 years standing, and was regarded as "the father of Barnum lodge," having been one of its oldest and most faithful champions. During war times, when its members were scattered and public interest gravitated to another direction, Mr. Knight worked by personal solicitation, get members enough together to hold meetings within the limits of the law, and by this means he managed to preserve the charter of Barnum lodge, and keep the society alive that was in after years and at the present day is a proud institution among the histories of the world. Mr. Knight's christian life was identical with that recounted above, he having been a member of the first Presbyterian church of this city for the past 28 years. His funeral occurred on Monday last, from the Presbyterians church, under the auspices of Barnum lodge and his remains were laid to peaceful rest in the Odd Fellows' cemetery. A wife, and a daughter with her husband are first in the list of mourners, but the community at large are affected with sorrow at the loss of an honored pioneer and a sterling, upright, christian citizen.

In connection with the name of Mr. Knight, there is a bit of historical reminiscence that is worthy of note. Away back at the beginning of the war or before, the citizens of Corvallis were about to hold some kind of a public meeting, at which they needed a flag, nor could one be bought for the occasion. In true patriotic spirit, however, those stalwart pioneer hearts were not to be daunted by obdurate deprivation. Mrs. Knight, assisted by other ladies of the community, went to work and made a flag, and succeeded by hard toil in getting it ready to be floated upon the occasion, referred to. That was the first "Star Spangled Banner" that had ever been hoisted in Corvallis. It has been treasured in the Knight household to this day, and on every occasion requiring the flying of the stars and stripes that flag has been seen waving proudly from the breeze from the flag pole at the front of Mrs. Knight's place of business. The little incident emphasizes the patriotism of the man who thus honored the emblems of his adopted country's principles.
