CROSSING THE COAST RANGE.

ONE HUNDRED AND FIFTY MILES OF SCENIC TRAVEL IN WESTERN OREGON.

The above heading would not be so interesting to the traveler if it had been the Alps in Switzerland or the Andes in South America, but however it is quite interesting for one who has reared on the great American plains...

After finding our way through the above named ruggedness we are traversing the Grande Ronde Indian reservation containing 96 square miles or 15,360 acres.

On leaving the agency or Indian school we are ascending the mountain approaching a vast area that has been visited by fire seventeen or eighteen years ago...

The wanderer at last succeeds in reaching the summit and begins to descend, passing through a small village which stands amid this desolate fire district awaiting the arrival of travelers to and from the beach.

Its original name was Dulph and it comprised a toll gate, postoffice, one general merchandise store and a hotel.

Leaving the above named village the road leads us through small valleys where bee culture is the principal occupation of the mountaineers, although sheep and cattle do well as grass and water are abundant the year round.

In traversing these valleys we cross brooks and rivers teeming with trout and salmon, until the descent is made into Tillamook valley, a prosperous agricultural and dairy district.

After paying a short visit to Netarts bay and other points of interest along the coast and strolling here and there over the beach hunting curious shells that have been washed up by the angry waves...

Overlooking the beautiful Willamette valley we gaze upon the Cascades with our eyes turned toward Mt. Hood which stands and overlooks its competitors and wears a cap of perpetual snow.

Now we are leaving the mountains, which have well paid us for the journey to the beach and return through beautiful and picturesque scenery.

How glad we are to see the plow shares turning the fertile soil and making ready for the sowing of grain.

ASH BARREL PHILOSOPHY.

The Comedy and Tragedy of a Household Recalled by Its Receipts for Debris.

An ash barrel overflowing with household refuse is a very tempting object, but a volume of philosophy is stowed away among the curious debris of this fat receptacle on the curbstone.

Peeping from beneath a broken fruit dish is the tiny toe of a dilapidated patent leather boot.

A battered, torn and glassless silk hat of a date long past next comes to light.

What a jumble of broken objects are overturned by the juddering hook—a young girl's glove; a bunch of wilted roses, with a card attached (compliments of Dick Dooly); a fragment of mirror, with the end of a spray of forget-me-nots painted on its silver surface...

Some scraps of paper are blown upward by the strong autumn breeze. They are fragments of a letter.

Here is another scrap of paper, with a girl's scrawl on its much soiled surface: "Dearest Harry—never thought—care for me—very happy—call soon—your own."—New York Recorder.

Now a Chinaman kills a Chicken. One might imagine that the Chinaman who gorges himself with broiled rats and bird's nest soup would not eat any kind of meat prepared in any manner, but such is not the case.

John will go to the coop and stir the feathered prisoners up with a stick. If he finds one that cackles and flutters about in a lively manner he will buy it.

Having made a selection he takes the chicken home alive, gets out a dirty little image, kneels before it, makes some queer motions with his hands, mumbles a few words, takes from a shelf or drawer a knife with a double edged blade which is extremely sharp, and with much ceremony whisks off the head of the fowl.
