Do not be influenced by circulars advertising cheap, old style bicycles. Any agency can furnish those at very low rates; but if you want a wheel, go to Conover & Keady and purchase one that will give you satisfaction. They can give you great bargains in the best bicycles manufactured.

Rev. L. Mailluchet has been appointed to the pastorate of the Catholic churches of Corvallis and Yaquina Bay. He came out from the bay Tuesday, accompanied by his sister, and will make his residence here. Esther Mailluchet is the gentleman, it will be remembered, who came out in advance of the Dakota colonists who are expected to locate in this country.

We learn from Mr. A. M. Weaver, who returned from the Big Elk country, that campers are quite numerous in that section. He was camped on the premises of Dan Murphy, which is adjoining that of Mr. Smith, the gentleman who was "married by mail" to an eastern lady several weeks ago. Considering the number of pretty girls in that locality, Mr. Weaver says there was no occasion for his having sent east for a bride. Putting it in his own words, "the burnt woods are full of 'em." B. S. Harris, brother of our merchant, and W. J. Ferrell, of Texas, remain near Harlan to chase chitons and slay other game.

THE OREGONIAN.

A very handsomely illustrated pamphlet giving a brief history of the Oregonian newspaper of Portland and a description of its new building, just completed, has been issued as a memento, not only of the Oregonian of the past and of today, but in a degree, of the city of Portland. In 1850, through the efforts of William W. Chapman and Stephen Coffin, two gentlemen who were for many years afterward leading spirits in the development of the city, a plant was brought from San Francisco and the first number of the Oregonian issued on December 4th of that year, under the editorial management of Thomas J. Dryer. The paper was to be a weekly, and the subscription price $7.00 per year. Mr. Chapman hired a man to go on horseback and deliver the first number as far as Corvallis (then Marysville) on the west side, with instructions to cross here and deliver it on the east side upon his return. The paper met with financial reverses from time to time. In 1860 Mr. Dryer turned the paper over to Mr. H. L. Pitcock in payment for his services as printer. Mr. D. having been appointed to office by President Lincoln. Mr. Pitcock has since been the business manager of the Oregonian, and it was due to his efforts that the paper was at length placed upon a paying basis. On the 4th day of February, 1861, the first number of the Daily Oregonian was issued. Among those who edited the paper after Mr. Dryer's time were Simon Francis, Amory Holbrook, John F. Damon, S. A. Clarke and W. Lair Hill. Mr. H. W. Scott took final editorial charge of the paper in 1877. Mr. Scott had come to Oregon in early boyhood, educated himself amid great difficulties, and, as the narrative states, was glad of an opportunity to show his willingness to work. Mr. Scott discusses with ability a wide range of subjects, and in editorial work of a general character he has few equals. He has a clear and forcible style and expresses his ideas without regard to popular notions. Altogether the people of this state have good reason to regard the Oregonian with pride.

THE OREGONIAN BUILDING.

The Oregonian's new building, of which the accompanying cut is a small representation, is the finest newspaper building on the coast, and it is one of the best occupied by any newspaper in the world. It is absolutely fire proof, being constructed throughout of stone, iron, steel, brick and terra cotta, and in all that goes to make up a perfect building it is one of the best constructed edifices in the western states. It will long stand as a monument to the enterprise of the men who built up in the northwest metropolis one of the now recognized great newspapers of the United States, and to the natural resources which have made it possible to build up such a paper in Portland.

Quite a number of young ladies and gentlemen of Corvallis are improving their time this summer by the study of geology. John M. Rea, who has made himself thoroughly acquainted with that branch of science having kindly consented to conduct the class, which meets at his home every Monday afternoon at 3:30. All those interested in making themselves acquainted with mother earth as she is seen in Benton county are cordially invited to join the class. Notice of other classes to be formed in the near future will be given due time.

The decision rendered by the supreme court recently in the case of L. J. Hill vs. W. J. Hill creates a curious state of affairs by leaving the respondent with two husbands. Mrs. Hill, who lives near Eugene, sued for a divorce in Douglas county circuit court, and was successful. She married another man soon after, but Mr. Hill, not wishing to lose his children, appealed the case to the supreme court which resulted in the decree being reversed and the complaint dismissed. Now the second marriage will be null and void.

S. F. MERCHANTS EXCURSION.

There is just now going on a readjustment of business relations pretty generally all over the country. There are various disturbing elements and into what channels trade will finally settle it is impossible to determine. The freight rate problem, among other things, is agitating the commercial interests of the Willamette valley and Southern Oregon in this state, but it is hoped that it will shortly be determined to the best advantage for all concerned.

This question has very much to do with our relations with San Francisco in a business way. Corvallis, Albany and other cities reached by the Oregon Pacific traffic lines have received immense benefits from trading with San Francisco, and those lines have acted as one check to extortion by the S. P. company. If, now, the Oregon railroad commission will do its duty and inaugurate an equitable rate on the S. P. lines the San Francisco market will be opened to more extensive territory in Oregon.

The conditions are now such that the San Francisco merchants feel justified in making an effort to obtain a more extensive interchange of products with this state and to this end a delegation will arrive in Oregon Saturday evening on the steamer Willamette valley. The excursionists number twenty-five members of the San Francisco board of trade, six representatives of news papers, and 150 other residents of the Golden Gate city. They will pass the Sunday on Yaquina bay where the people have arranged to give them good entertainment. The services of the Marine Band of Corvallis have been secured for the occasion.

The Business Men's Association of Corvallis and the firemen will have charge of the entertainment of the party in this city. At a meeting of the firemen Wednesday evening the use of the firemen's apartments were tendered the Business Men's Association, for the entertainment of the guests. A committee, consisting of C. E. Small, S. L. Kline, B. W. Johnson, J. W. Will and Frank Conover, were also appointed by the firemen to act as a reception committee.

At a meeting of the association last evening, S. L. Kline, S. N. Wilkins, A. Hodes, N. H. Wheeler, T. Graham and J. H. Harris were appointed a committee of arrangements; finance committee, N. H. Wheeler, Z. H. Davis, and John Simpson. The Mayor and councilmen of Corvallis, Prof. Lotz and Dr. Applewhite, of the State Agricultural college, Messrs. E. W. Hadley and C. T. Wardlaw, of the O. P. R. R. Co., and members of the Corvallis press were invited to act with the association in the entertainment of the guests. The party will start eastward from the bay Monday on the regular O. P. train, and will be met at Philomath by a delegation from this city. Upon their arrival the members of the S. F. board of trade will enter carriages for the city and take luncheon. In the afternoon they will be driven about and given an opportunity of seeing the city. As the stables will not be able to furnish the necessary number of carriages for the occasion, those having private conveyances will confer a favor by placing them at the disposal of the committee of arrangements.

The party will take a special train for Albany at 5 o'clock p. m., where arrangements have been made to entertain the members in a becoming manner. From that point they will visit Salem, Eugene, make a trip to the front on the O. P., and return to the bay in time to take the steamer which sails for San Francisco August 4th.

Harrisburg will soon find herself without a bank; in fact it is practically so today. A notice has been placed on the door of the building requesting depositors to withdraw their money.

The business of the bank is being closed up as rapidly as possible, and in a few days the doors will be closed. This action has been brought about by the continued sickness of Mr. Rampey, the banker, but it will be only temporary if he can regain his health.—Harrisburg Courier.

An application has been sent to the comptroller of the currency asking that the Linn County National bank be taken from the hands of the receiver for the resumption of business. The required amount of money, about $100,000, will be raised and other conditions will be met, so that the application will undoubtedly be granted. The movement is one that will be of general benefit to the community.—Albany Democrat.

Rev. and Mrs. Brynne, who have been conducting union revival services at the Evangelical church, now hold street services each evening on the street before the regular services at the church. The singing is conducted by Prof. W. W. Davis, and the services are joined in by a number of Albany church members. Last evening they used tambourines, strongly resembling the singing of the salvation army.—Albany Herald.

Charley Lee, a Chinaman formerly a domestic in the household of B. W. Wilson, went to his native country two or three years ago, but returned to Corvallis a few days ago. He had some difficulty in landing at Portland but he says a statement from his former "bossy man," to the effect that he was a "merchant," settled the business with the Portland custom-house officials.

RESOURCES OF OREGON.

(San Francisco Journal of Commerce.)

All of Oregon may now be reached by the lines of the Union Pacific from San Francisco, while the western and eastern sections of that state, including the Willamette valley, can be reached by the Oregon Pacific and Southern Pacific. One of the great resources of this section next to wheat-growing is wool growing. In California here we produce about 35,000,000 pounds every year, but the encroachments of the wheat farmer and the fruit raiser are driving the sheep men of the state farther and farther back every year. While this is the case Oregon's clip is steadily increasing, and the field for further production is practically illimitable. The annual production is now about 16,000,000 pounds, and the value of wool, mutton, pelts, etc., yearly is not less than $3,500,000. It is now comparatively easy to divert this rich and growing trade to San Francisco. The wool is of the very best quality, some of the merino having good staple and resembling the Australian. Coarsened wools have been so improved by crossing that while the strength of the original is retained it possesses greatly increased fineness and softness, and there is in it noticeable an entire absence of hair. Oregon can grow wool enough to clothe the nation, while San Francisco can handle the trade in it, and given the proper capital and proper skill, we can manufacture it here and sell the products all over the union. There is no reason, too, why the woolen manufactures of Oregon, such as are not consumed in that state, should not find a market here and hence be distributed abroad. How such industries grow may be seen from the example at Rheims, in France, where in ninety years the manufacture of merino has grown from nothing to employ 60,000 workmen and 200,000 spindles. The sheep and the wool of the world are not increasing according to the needs of consumers, so that there is in Oregon an illimitable field for work in this matter. That the field has been open to San Francisco capital and enterprise is due to the recent freight reductions.

Hotel Corvallis is now under new management, Mrs. M. M. Armstrong, who has so successfully conducted the Royal restaurant having assumed charge on Wednesday. There is not a particle of doubt about the way in which the patrons of this resort will be treated, for as a successful caterer Miss Armstrong is second to none. A good thing to do is to take your wife and bathrobe for Sunday dinner and get the best in town.

Lewis Dyer was arrested at Albany on Tuesday by a deputy United States marshal for perjury in swearing at the Oregon City land office. There were no improvements on the piece of land he had filed upon, which was also filed upon by another settler. It is claimed Dyer jumped the land which had a house on it. J. W. Brown, Dyer's father-in-law, was arrested on a similar charge. Dyer and Brown waived examination before the United States commissioner and each was held in $200 bonds to await the action of the federal grand jury. Sam Brown, a son of J. W., has since been placed under bonds for his appearance to answer a charge of perjury in the same matter. Chas. Thompson, the complaining witness, was fined $5 on Wednesday for using obscene language toward them in denouncing them as claim-jumpers.

A WOMAN'S REMEDY FOR INFLAMMATORY RHEUMATISM.

I am an old sufferer from inflammatory rheumatism. The past winter it came on me again, very acute and severe. My joints swelled and became inflamed, sore to touch or almost to look at. Upon the urgent request of my mother-in-law, I tried Chamberlain's Pain Balm to reduce the swelling and ease the pain, and to my agreeable surprise it did both. I have used three fifty-cent bottles and believe it to be the finest thing for rheumatism, pains and swellings extant. D. E. Carr, 1235 Harrison St., Kansas City, Mo. For sale by T. Graham, druggist.

DOWN GO THE RATES!

The Union Pacific now leads with reduced rates to eastern points, and their through car arrangements, magnificently equipped Pullman and Tourist sleepers, free reclining chair car and fast time, make it the best line to travel. Two trains leave from Portland daily at 8:45 a. m. and 7:30 p. m. The rates are now within the reach of all, and everybody should take advantage of them to visit the world's fair and their friends in the East. Send for rates and schedules of trains, and do not purchase tickets until after consulting Geo. F. Eglin, agent, Corvallis, Oregon, or W. H. Hurlburt, ass't gen'l passenger agent, U. P. Portland, Oregon.

Another gold discovery has been made here, says a Baker City dispatch. It is really $20 gold pieces this time. D. H. Crouter and family, who occupy the residence of Judge D. B. Schofield, yesterday found a number of tin cans on a joint in the cellar under the house and among them was one containing fifty $20 gold pieces. The money belongs to Judge Schofield, who now resides at Grants Pass. Before leaving this city about two years ago he made up cash and claimed that he was $4,000 short. This discovery accounts for $1,000. Of late years the old gentleman has been quite feeble and his memory poor. He has been apprised of the find.
