WHEN THE MILLS SHUT DOWN.

O, 'twas glorious last November when the victors
 marched away,
 With red fire, drums, and banners in magnificent array;
 How their eyes with rapture sparkled, how each
 loyal heart grew warm
 At the thought of poor old Benny swamped by cyclones of reform!
 And how double extra jolly it would be to scotch and kill
 Our Wm. McKinley and his blamed old robber
 bill;
 But a different sort of feeling seems to penetrate the
 town,
 And gas don't count for glory
 When

The Mills Shut Down.

O, 'twas altogether lovely then to nag the G. O. P.
 And furnish season tickets up Salt river, don't you see?

Shaking up official puddings, sure, such happiness
 must bring,
 While Maxwell gives his hatchet just a little extra swing.

But hold! here comes another sort of music in the air
 That tells of empty stomachs and of pockets plucked and bare!

Where are those protection-killing now, those spouters of reason?
 Where, oh, where are those great reformers
 When

The Mills Shut Down?

Not the great and noble Grover, what a valiant knight was he,
 To plant his No. 11 squarely on "plutocracy."

And Adlai, the fearless, of the world and awful name,
 How his stirring deeds should echo—oh the trumpet blast of fame!

Now they'll turn the country over and then turn it
 back again,
 And scatter all the rascals from among the haunts of men!

'Twas a glorious prospect, truly, for many a thriving
 town,
 But it proved out so easy

The Mills Shut Down.

SONG OF THE TRAMP.

Tramp, tramp, tramp, the boys are tramping—
 Hundreds of thousands on the road;
 You can hear their weary tread,
 As they hunt for work and bread,
 In these "good times" by democracy bestowed.
 —Kansas City Journal.

PROPOSED EXTRA SESSION.

Governor Penney, it seems, has received numerous communications urging him, in view of the present financial stringency, to call an extra session of the legislative assembly for the purpose of passing a law for the stay of execution on all judgments for one year. The governor has addressed inquiries to the members of the legislature to ascertain the opinion of each on the subject. The general expression is against an extra session for one reason or another, chief of which is that the laws already on the statute books give the debtor almost as much protection as the proposed law. Almost all recognize the gravity of the financial situation, but argue that it is not on such a strain as to demand the interposition of a "stay" law. The law would primarily affect only a few debtors and it would benefit them only to a small degree—by no means to a degree sufficient to recompense for the odium which would thereby be cast upon the state, the expense of an extra session and the disturbance of business. There is a disposition among creditors to be lenient, in view of the situation, and undoubtedly the better way is to allow matters to drift along as smoothly as they will until confidence is restored. Any interference with the rights which creditors now have under the law will render money with which to discharge obligations very much harder to obtain. H. H. Northrup, member of the legislature from Multnomah, says: "It seems to me that such a law would have just the opposite effect from that desired. It would increase rather than relieve the financial stringency. It would drive capital from our borders and prevent investments from seeking our territory. It would be a confession by the official power of the state that its people are insolvent. Oregon has abundant resources and great wealth. To have it published to the world that no creditor could issue execution upon a judgment obtained in due course of law for a year would be to belittle our resources and to minify our wealth; to declare that our debts were greatly in excess of our securities, and to render the last condition of a meritorious, industrious and virtuous people far worse than the first."

Unless the democratic party make good their promises to the laboring classes of this country that party need not in future, as they have largely in the past, look to that class for support. Will they do it?

THE PRESIDENT'S MESSAGE.

The editor of the Atlanta Constitution, the leading democratic paper of the south, severely criticizes the president's message. It says:

"Mr. Cleveland's message favors and indorses the republican policy of repeal, and entirely ignores the democratic policy. If he is right the democratic party is wrong, and has been wrong for the past twenty years. If he is right, John Sherman and his republican colleagues are right, and it is eminently fitting that rampant force bill champion and gold mono-metallist, Henry Cabot Lodge, should, as he did, assume charge of the message in the senate, and move its reference to a committee with instructions. The duty of democrats in congress is plain and easy. They are not in a position to ignore the democratic policy put forth in the democratic platform. But democratic congressmen can not hold themselves above their party. The party in the south must be held together; it must continue to present a united front; but it cannot be held together if the people become convinced that the financial policy of the democrats is identical with that of John Sherman and the republican party."

The Hon. John B. Stoll, editor of the South Bend, Ind., Daily Times (Dem.), is an old-time democratic war-horse, and is of this opinion concerning the president's latest message:

"The government will, in the very nature of things, have to do something in regard to silver, and it seems to us that a man who is so ready to formulate opinions as Mr. Cleveland has been in the past ought to have been able to devise some plan that would have the merit of being practical and that would commend itself to that great body of people who are neither rampant silverites nor vehement declaimers in favor of an exclusive gold standard. What the cool, level-headed, unprejudiced people of this country want is some sort of arrangement that will give business the full benefit of the silver already coined and the bullion owned by the government as a part of our circulating medium, without impairing either the gold in sight and yet to come or the other form of a tested circulating medium. That's what the people want, and that's what congress should give them at the earliest practical moment."

Great Big Honest Old Tom B. Reed, of Maine, whom the democrats delighted to call "Czar" during his reign on the speaker's throne of the house of representatives, and whose opinion on the public questions of the day is second to none, speaks through the New York Press concerning President Cleveland's message like this:

"One can hardly fail to be impressed by the resemblance between the message today and that of the last democratic president who addressed a congress of his party in 1857. While the disaster is not the same, the expression of sorrow is very similar. Mr. Cleveland has set an example of short, single topic messages; but, while this message is very impressive, it is far from being adequate to the occasion. While my votes in the past show plainly that I agree with much that he says, I should not be doing justice to my own sense of the truth if I did not record my entire disbelief in the idea that the message states the underlying cause of our disaster. The cause of our misfortunes is simply this: Utter uncertainty reigns in finance and tariff, and in everything on which business can be based. If you remove one element of uncertainty there remains all the others. You cannot readjust the economic principles which govern a country without disaster, especially if that readjustment be violent and involve the wages and salary of every citizen."

The New York Herald sums up in a general way the condition of wage-earners of the United States in the following language:

"Fifty thousand out of work in Chicago, and thousands more will be laid off."

"Cincinnati workers in building trades have 5,000 men out of work."

"More than half the wage-earners in and around Pittsburgh have been laid off."

"Five thousand out of work in San Francisco and much distress prevails."

"Ten thousand men idle in Buffalo, owing to financial stringency."

"All trades in Philadelphia affected and many are laid off."

WASHINGTON LETTER.

WASHINGTON, Aug. 14, 1893.

Democrats in congress do not take kindly to Mr. Cleveland's departure. They do not hesitate to say that it was as much his duty to stay here and help his party to reach a decision on the silver question as it is the duty of members of congress to stay. Before leaving Mr. Cleveland spoke his mind freely to several prominent members of his party. He told them, among other things, that unless something unexpected occurred to make him change his mind he did not intend making any more appointments until congress had acted upon the silver question, and that he did not intend to stay in Washington to listen to the men who are more anxious to get a few appointments for their friends than to relieve the financial distress of the country.

Aside from Mr. Cleveland's disgust at the reception given his message by his party in congress, his bad health and his natural desire to be near his wife just now, there was another weighty reason for his departure, which can be fully appreciated by every proud man. From the time he arrived until his departure he was almost completely ignored by the senators of his party, less than half a dozen of them having paid him the courtesy of even a formal call. This was so different from what he had been led to expect by those who have been purposely misrepresenting things to him that he was at first furious, and later humiliated. Those senators whom he saw carried him no balm for his wounded pride, as they were practically unanimous in the belief that it will be impossible to get a bill for the repeal of the silver law through the senate, unless it embodies a substitute that meets the approval of the conservative silver men in that body. Truly Mr. Cleveland had reasons enough for leaving Washington in a hurry, although none of them were sufficient to excuse his departure.

So far the silver fight in the house has been mostly between democrats, although several republicans, among them Grosvenor, of Ohio, and Henderson, of Iowa, gave Representative Harter, of Ohio, a few disagreeable minutes when he asserted that the condition of the workingman in England was as much superior to the condition of the workingman in Ohio as a berth in heaven is to a cot in purgatory. The free silver democrats also prodded Harter at several points of his speech. Mr. Harter said that Senator Sherman instead of being abused for the grateful thanks of the whole people, because he got the best there was to be obtained for the country out of a bad situation. But the portion of his speech that was the most irritating to the silver men was where he said: "The workingmen are appealing to congress for bread, and the silver men are offering them not a stone, but dynamite, and instead of a serpent a whole bundle of them—a boa"

ITCHING AND SCALY

Dreadful Skin Disease 9 Years. Doctor's Medicines Useless. Cured by CUTICURA for $4.75.

I feel it my duty to tell you my experience with your CUTICURA REMEDIES. I have been troubled for over nine years with a dreadful skin disease. When I first felt it, there appeared a few small red spots on my breast, and it kept on spreading slowly. It started the same on my back, between my shoulders. A few days after the spots turned gray, and began itching. Small scales would fall off, so it continued spreading all over my body. I tried all the patent medicines I could think of, or get hold of. I also consulted doctors. Yes, they would cure me in a short time, but they always failed. Then I gave it all up, thinking there was no cure for me. Some few months ago, I noticed your advertisement in the Tacoma Morning Globe. Thought I would try the CUTICURA REMEDIES, and, my surprise, three boxes of CUTICURA, one cake of CUTICURA SOAP, and three bottles of CUTICURA RESOLVENT cured me entirely. My skin is now as pure and white as that of a child. I send my photograph. I have many friends in Chicago and St. Paul.

constrictor, a rattle snake, and a copperhead, all rolled into one in the shape of a financial system."

It is plain to be seen that the speeches in the house are for home consumption. Since the first day there has not been a quorum present, and the same condition is expected to continue during the fourteen days the debate is to last. No votes will be changed, and if the votes were taken now instead of at the close of the debate the result would be the same.

The senate has done nothing, and it is understood that at the last meeting of the finance committee the silver men who control that committee, made it plain that no bill would be reported from the committee for the repeal of the Sherman law, without a substitute that would be satisfactory to the silver men. A committee of democratic senators is now engaged in trying to bring about a compromise. Republican senators are waiting to see what the democrats propose doing.

Representative Breckinridge, of Kentucky, has become involved in a very ugly scandal, by the filing of a suit against him for $50,000 by Madeline V. Pollard, for breach of promise of marriage. She charges that he seduced her when she was seventeen years old and a student at Wesleyan Female college at Cincinnati, and says she had two children of whom he was the father, and that after his wife's death, in 1892, he promised to marry her, but postponed it from time to time, meanwhile continuing his relations with her; and that on the 18th of July, 1893, he married another woman. Breckinridge brought Miss Pollard to Washington and secured her a government position, from which she was dismissed for having publicly made disgraceful remarks about Gen. Sherman at the time of his death. Mr. Breckinridge has his bride here now. Nice state of affairs for a bride to be called upon to contemplate before the end of her honeymoon, isn't it?

The Eugene Guard thinks that if Governor Penney would call a special session and club the members into passing a law to curb extortionate freight rates he would deserve the gratitude of the people. Some members would be in favor of an extra session if it could be known in advance that the legislature would repeal the laws authorizing the jute mill and soldiers' home appropriations. Others would want the mortgage tax law re-enacted, so there is small hope that the session would be a short one.

It is safe to bet that the Oregon sheep will vote early and often at the next election. The sheep industry, with the wool pulled over its eyes, will shout "Bah!" to the tariff-tinkering idea that is killing it.—Klamath Star.

Mrs. J. H. HORSNIDER, 152 Pacific Ave., Santa Cruz, Cal., writes: "When a girl at school, in Reading, Ohio, I had a severe attack of brain fever. On my recovery, I found myself perfectly bald, and, for a long time, I feared I should be permanently so. Friends urged me to use Ayer's Hair Vigor, and, on doing so, my hair

"I have used Ayer's Hair Vigor for several years and always obtained satisfactory results. I know it is the best preparation for the hair that is made."
