The dairy interest in this county is proving to be the most profitable that is persued. Last month the product from one of our creameries netted its patrons 321 cents per pound for butter fat, and seeing that the ideal cow will make over two pounds of butter per day, a farmer's income can be made to be quite respectable. The farmers's institute being held this week by the authorities of the agricultural college is a well attended meeting, visitors from both Yamhill and Multnomah counties being in attendance, Quite a surprise greeted Pres. Bloss and his co-laborers. The farmers here considered it the proper thing, seeing that the agricultural college had sent its talent down to tell our people how to farm, to show them in return what they do produce. The spacious dining room of Grange hall was turned into a show room where was put on exhibition the seasonable products of the county-cereals from the farm, grasses from the meadbws, wool from the herds, tiles from the factories, fruit and nursery stock from the orchards and nurseries, printing from the newspaper and job offices, bread, cakes and pastries from the farmer's kitchens graced the tables
