The Problem Solved.

Written for J. M. Nolan by an O. A. C. student.

'Twas in 1894, in that disastrous year

And stationers grand and glorious were

Gathered from afar and near.

The object of this gathering of the nations

Of the earth.

Was to rid them of the famine to which

Others had given birth.

The speakers of that day were counseled

By the scores,

And the wails resounded with their eloquence

As their faces they did deplore.

Each one had a reason for the famine in

His hand.

It was caused, in his opinion, by the Opposing party's hand.

And thus they talked and argued, but the

Remedy issue could see.

Said one, "What a set of paupers we all

Have grown to be!

And if you'll only pay attention the reason

I will show—

King Paulson, in his glory, with his scepter

Comes forth to-morrow.

And those who behind the times have fallen

In the buying of their clothes,

Are the ones who fall before him every-

Where he goes.

Now, to keep pace with Fashion in his

Ever changing speed,

With the present state of prices, and still

Our families feed.

Is a greater strain on our pocket books

Than we're able to withstand.

And consequently, as you see, we've formed

This paper's bid."

Then, amid the sounds of cheers, the

Speaker took his seat.

And all agreed that at last they'd found the Question they must meet.

Then from a distant corner, an old man

Arose and said,

"If this be the reason that the world doth

Cry for bread,

Then let us all be merry for the problem

We can solve.

And our partnership with famine at once

We will dissolve;

And an era of prosperity must dawn upon

Our night.

If, when King Fashion comes, we'll only do

The right.

Now, to keep up with the fashion and still

Have plenty at our door,

We must do our trading at J. M. Nolan's

Store.

If the very latest fashions we are longing

To procure,

With the very best of quality we can any-

Where secure.

With the very lowest prices to be found

Throughout the land;

In the very line of goods that are always

In demand.

In everything that man or wears, from hat

Clean down to sock,

Let us at once examine J. M. Nolan's new

Spring stock.

Then the wail and crier disappeared

Again from view.

And everyone in the assembly from Ameri-

Can to Jew,

Agreed that the vexing question by the old

Man had been solved.

So this grand and noble body was very soon

Dissolved.

And each individual member homeward

Took his way.

Rejoicing in having solved the question of

The day.

Corvallis Cycle Club.

The bicycle enthusiasts met on Wednesday evening in the law chambers of Hon. Jas. Burnett and perfected a permanent organization, adopted full and complete constitution and by laws and elected the following officers: President, Brady F. Burnett; vice president, Dr. R. J. Wilson; secretary, M. H. Kriebel; treasurer, Dr. Bowen Lester; captain, Will F. Keady; 1st. lieutenant, Caleb Davis; 2nd. lieutenant, C. E. Small. The colors adopted were orange and light green, thus paying a tribute to the honors won for the former by the O. A. C. athletes. The club insignia hasn't yet been agreed upon, but a tasty design will be selected from those to be presented at the meeting on next Wednesday evening.

This is a movement in the right direction and as we have a number of good wheelmen in town, it will give them an opportunity to receive recognition and to enter competitive races and, we hope, win fresh laurels from the field of athletes, in which our town is already well known. We wish all success and much pleasure to the C. C. C.

Incendiary Fires.

Last Monday night at 12:30 the fire department was again called out to extinguish a blaze that proved to be a barn owned by E. W. Fisher. Arriving too late to save it the attention of the firemen was given to the other property in the vicinity and the loss was slight. On returning to the hall the boys were enjoying a delicious cup of coffee prepared by the ladies when another alarm was turned in. With all possible dispatch the department reached the scene and found the barn owned by Mrs. L. Y. Wilson on 9th street completely enveloped in flames, which also proved a total loss. These midnight fires are getting together too numerous of late. The officers are endeavoring to capture the perpetrators, but so far have been unsuccessful, although they have two or three good clues to work on. Some people believe it is the work of tramps, while others give the credit to a few young hoodlums living in town. The latter idea is gaining credence daily and it will be no surprise to many if the present grand jury are called upon to investigate charges against one or two of the young rascals.

A Close Call.

Henry Wortham has purchased a "Duke" bicycle and commenced training preparatory to contesting for the championship of the United States. On Wednesday afternoon while out on his usual run for reductions—while wheeling along at a rapid rate just below the city, near the river bank, he passed a back in which were several handsome young ladies. As Henry is quite a ladies' man, of course he had to tip his hat, and the result was that he ran too close to the bank, and Henry and the wheel took a 12-foot drop into the waters below. The only damage done was a broken wheel and a bath for Henry.

Five hundred people were present at the opera house last evening. They were counted by the Gazette man as they filed out one by one in disgust during the performance.

VOLUMES COULD BE WRITTEN. Filled with the testimony of women who have been made well and strong by Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription.

For all the functional derangements, painful disorders, and chronic weaknesses that afflict womanhood, the "Favorite Prescription" is the only guaranteed remedy.

It must have been the medicine for most women, or it couldn't be sold on any such terms.

Isn't it likely to be the medicine for you? Sold by druggists everywhere.

REPUBLICAN RATIFICATION.

A Rousing Meeting at the Opera House addressed by Hon. T. H. Tongue.

The opera house was filled to overflowing on Saturday evening to listen to the silver-tongued orator, Hon. Thos. H. Tongue, state senator from Washington county, who delivered an excellent address from a republican standpoint. Mr. Tongue is one of the ablest orators on the Pacific coast and carried his audience along with him in a speech lasting about two hours. Some noticeable features were the hearty applause from both sides of the house and the able manner in which the senator showed up the republican side of the question. The meeting was presided over by President W. E. Yates, of the Benton county republican club. After music by the Marine band and the republican club quartette, in a neat speech Hon. George Waggoner introduced the speaker of the evening in the following words:

Ladies and gentlemen, this is the eleventh meeting of the republican club of Benton county. This immense crowd present tonight illustrates how much can be done in a good cause. If there ever was a cause worthy the attention of every citizen interested in good government, it certainly is the one in which this club is now engaged—the republican party, of Benton county and state of Oregon. The speaker before us this evening is a man of whom we may well be proud; he is a man of state reputation. My long and intimate acquaintance with him justifies me in saying that his address on this occasion will consist of facts, and nothing but facts. Ladies and gentlemen, it is with great pleasure that I introduce to you the Hon. Thomas H. Tongue, who will now address you.

Lack of space forbids a publication of the speech in full, but some of its leading points are given below.

Mr. President, ladies and gentlemen—I am gratified as well as surprised at the large and intelligent audience that I find before me. Your presence here this evening betokens an interest in political problems of the day which now confront us, and which are placed in the hands of the political parties who have had the reins of government of this republic.

It has been the usual custom heretofore for voters of our country to wait until the candidate was nominated and then appear before them and present the doctrines and principles of the party to them to give these matters any notice or attention. Under the last administration of Mr. Harrison the people became dissatisfied and demanded a change; there was a disposition of negligence, and masses of the voters of this country, through negligence and want of attention allowed the democrats to get possession of this country, and to own its body and soul. The effect of that negligence is being felt. This year the voters of Oregon and the voters of this country are suffering from the result of that negligence, and are now reasoning upon these principles and issues for themselves so as to intelligently decide the great political question of the day. The presence of this large, appreciative and intelligent audience, consisting of the representative citizens of this community and Benton county deserves the highest commendation. I am not here to say anything against populists or demagogues, but against populism and democracy. There is only one great center around which our interests cluster. Our interests are identical. The interests of the democrats are the interests of the republican party. The people of this country have but one interest, that interest is financial. The political issues of the day are financial basis. It is a question of dollars and cents. The causes that affect one affect all. The farmer wishes a chance to market his produce. The policy of the party that will protect the industries in which he is engaged and afford him a market for his produce and a living for his family is the policy for him to adopt and support. There are three classes of productions in this country; the first class is those necessities that we produce, those which are produced in foreign countries, those which we can produce only by the protection placed upon the commodity to be imported so as to protect and cherish the industries here, producing the same.

Since coming into power the democrats have taken no steps in the direction of tariff reform of which we have heard so much. In fact they have done very little, and I am glad of it. It seems that they are trying to keep as quiet as possible. They remind me of a story I heard in regard to a woman in Chicago who lost her husband and advertised for him. I don't know why she did—whether she thought more of her husband than the women in Oregon do, or whether men are scarce, but in Oregon they don't do that way, if they lose their husband they let him go, and get another, but anyway this lady advertised for him. Well, in a few days an undertaker came to the house and said "Madam, I have found your husband. I dragged him up out of the lake; he is at the morgue and I wish you to come down and identify him." So she went down and looked at the body lying on the slab at the morgue and said "Yes that is my husband." She desired that he should have an elegant funeral befitting his position in life, so she looked through the stock of caskets and selected one which she was told would cost her $500, and a shroud that was worth $200, and ordered them sent up. Accordingly they were sent and placed in the room where the body of her husband lay, and her little daughter desiring to take a last look at her papa, concluded she would go in and imprint a last kiss on his lips. Entering the room, she approached the body and in order to carry out her intentions she found it necessary to remove the bandages from around the head. When she did so the lower jaw dropped, and a set of false teeth fell out. The little one knew that was not her papa, so she ran in and said "Come mamma and see, this is not papa;" and sure enough it was not. The lady, not caring to pay for some one's funeral, who was not her husband, ordered the undertaker to remove the body, and swept out of the room, leaving the undertaker alone with the corpse and his own reflections. There was that $500 casket; that would cost a sorry figure going at second-hand, and that $200 shroud thrown away. The undertaker in a fit of desperation began to pace the floor, and finally worked himself into such a state that he concluded that he would take his spite out on the corpse. Walking up to it, he shook his fist and said "You infernal rascal, what an elegant funeral you might have had if you had only kept your mouth shut." And so I find that the democratic party is trying its best to keep its mouth shut.

Ben Harrison Camp.

Ben Harrison camp of Sons of Veterans was mustered last Friday evening in the hall of Ellsworth post No. 19, G. A. R. Capt. Brown, of Salem, had been detailed as mustering officer and was assisted in the installation ceremonies by members of the post. Twenty-five members were mustered all of whom appear to be enthusiastic in the work and if the first meeting be taken as a criterion, Ben Harrison camp will be one of the best in the state. No cause is more inspiring than the work the members are engaged in that of perpetuating the noble deeds of their ancestors and assisting them in alleviating the sufferings of old veterans caused by wounds and exposure received on the field of battle in defense of our flag and our country. The officers elected and installed were as follows: Will H. Bloss, captain; Mac. Hemphill 1st lieutenant; B. W. Johnson 2nd lieutenant; 1st sergeant, C. H. Pearce; W. Becker, q. m. sergeant; E. Erwin chaplain; Geo. Clark s. of c.; Wm. Kerr p. c.; O. L. Clark s. of g.; W. S. Clark c. of g.; L. W. Oren chief musician; Geo. Webber 1. g.; E. R. Doughty, R. Erwin, C. E. Small, camp council.

Tommy Jones has completed his first year's course in the Purdue college of pharmacy at Lafayette, Indiana, and returned home Wednesday to remain during the summer vacation. Tommy was never a heavy-weight and the months spent in hard study has not had the effect of increasing his avoirdupois.

W. E. Dunn spent Sunday with friends in this city. His wife, who has been ill for some weeks, is improving.

THE CUP PRESENTATION.

Matters Pertaining to the Improvement of the College Assembly Hall.

Last Monday evening the championship cup presented to the football team of the Oregon agricultural college by the citizens of Corvallis was formally presented. This cup, costing $125, is of elegant and appropriate design, manufactured of sterling silver by Tiffany, and is to remain in the college as a trophy of past victories and not to pass out of its possession with possible defeat. Judge W. S. McFadden addressed the team on behalf of the citizens in his usual pleasing manner. He emphasized the scriptural saying that the glory of young men is in their strength and that a healthy body is necessary to a healthy intellect.

Noting the inscription he said he thought the engraver had made a mistake in adding the figure "4" after the year "1893." "The fathers of the revolution referred with pride to their Banker Hill and Lexington," said the judge. "You may speak of your Monmouth, Albany, Portland Juniors, Portland University,—but, ah, there is where the engraver made the mistake. You met the enemy and they were yours, (with one single exception)."

In his response, Half-back Burnett, captain of the team, thanked the people for their tribute and interest they had manifested in their behalf. He also paid a high tribute to Manager Will H. Bloss. Mr. Wallis Nash made a few remarks on the subject of athletics, and in referring to the brutality of football said that the young men should be the best judges of that themselves and that he would venture to say that after the Portland game, had the young men been asked to play again they would gladly have accepted. During the evening Mr. W. Gifford Nash played several selections that were thoroughly appreciated. The ladies' mandolin and guitar club were the recipients of numerous compliments for their excellent music.

This was the first occasion on which the college assembly hall had been lighted by electricity and the effect is to lend much more attractiveness to the hall. The students deserve much credit for their energy in raising the necessary funds to wire the hall and purchase chandeliers. The acoustic properties of this assembly hall are better than those of any other auditorium in the city, and it was for this reason that it was selected for the Redpath concert which occurs on
