People are just now leaving town for the various resorts of the state, in hope of rejuvenating their debilitated constitutions. Many of them would find a permanent cure at the popular resort kept by Spencer. His baths, shaves and haircuts work wonderful changes.

While writing this item, the palate of the writer is being tickled by the exquisite flavor of a yellow Newtown pippin, grown last season by Henry Gerhardt, on his farm south of town. The apple, when left on our table was in a perfect state of preservation and its flavor had not been impaired in the least. It is truly a wonderful variety and to its many excellent qualities is largely due the credit of giving Oregon her worldwide reputation as an apple-producing state.

The west bound train for Yaquina Tuesday afternoon carried two very small and inexperienced travelers to the seaside. They were little Miss Hunt, the three-year-old of Chas. Hunt, and Miss Edna Irvin. They will be the guests during the season of the former's mother, who is occupying a cottage in Newport.

Duncan Monteith, writing to a friend in this city, states that there is a determined effort on the part of Warden McGuire, to enforce the game laws and to that end has appointed six deputies to look after the matter in this country. The letter further states that no favoritism will be shown and that offenders will be promptly punished.

The GAZETTE has several hundred subscribers whose subscriptions will expire on the 8th of September. Those who read this item will please notice the date their subscription expires, which is printed with their name on the first page of their paper, or on the wrapper. A month's notice is given that all may be prepared to settle promptly.

Tuesday Asa Tunnelidge placed a ladder against a decayed electric light pole, then climbed it to a height of 20 feet. The pole broke and down came man, ladder, pole and all in a heap, the man of course at the bottom. He was carried in an unconscious state to Dr. Lee's office, where his injuries were cared for and he is now getting along as well could be expected.

The following complimentary notice is from the Oregon City Enterprise. Prof. J. B. Horner, professor of literature and English at the State Agricultural college, and formerly editor and publisher of the Oregon School Journal, did active work to make the State Teachers' Association a grand success, which closed its session at Gladstone park last Saturday. The professor was accompanied by Mrs. Horner.

During the past six weeks, Rev. Martin Burlingame has been engaged in organizing new Sunday schools, and has met with splendid success. During this brief period eleven schools have been organized with a total of five hundred and ten pupils. With one exception the new schools are all in Benton county. The literature and funds for carrying on the work are contributed by wealthy members of the Evangelical association living in New York.

Mr. Ed. Ezekiel, representing Straus, Glaser & Co., of Chicago, manufacturers of the justly celebrated "Kast iron" clothing, was in town yesterday. Mr. Ezekiel only sells to one firm in each town and in Corvallis that firm is Nolan & Callahan. He says that these enterprising clothiers have placed a very large order for the fall trade, indicating that prospects for business have greatly improved since his last visit to Corvallis.

E. E. Stafford, manager of the Tacoma Athletic Baseball Club, has written the club of this city, stating that his players are to make a tour of the valley, and wish to arrange a game with the Corvallis team, to occur sometime between Aug. 19th and Sept. 1st. As many of the local hat-wielders are students who are away from town on their summer vacations, it is probable that it will be impossible to arrange a game between the dates mentioned.

J. Fred Yates returned Monday from Toledo, where he has been for the past week attending the circuit court for Lincoln county. He was one of the busiest attorneys there, and is said to have acquitted himself with credit in siding with the prosecution of McDowell. Sympathy, Mr. Yates says, was very largely with the accused, which, together with his age and other circumstances made the case for the state rather weak, and that a conviction was secured was to many a surprise.

Mail Clerk J. H. Penn, says Monday's Democrat, came near being smothered in smoke about 23 miles this side of Yaquina today. Mr. Penn found the car rapidly filling with smoke and upon investigation found flames bursting through the roof. He at once gave the alarm and stopped the train. A few buckets of water quenched what might have been a serious conflagration. There was no loss or damage to the mail; but the car was damaged some.

The Oregon City Enterprise has this flattering notice about the ladies band of this city: All praise and honor is due the Regina Ladies' Band of Corvallis, who so faithfully filled their place on the program, and made up for the deficiencies caused by the failure of the other bands to appear. The young ladies are entitled to a substantial recognition for their services, and another year they should have more than their traveling expenses paid. As amateur musicians they displayed considerable skill and their playing was well received.

Tuesday's train from the bay conveyed to Corvallis two unusually happy men. They were B. R. Job and M. M. Davis, who had been under indictment in Lincoln county for two years on a charge of "larceny of public funds," and against whom the charges had been dismissed at the present term of circuit court in that county. The charge against B. R. Job was dismissed without trial, but in the case of Mr. Davis, all the evidence was submitted when a motion for non-suit was granted and the jury instructed to bring in a verdict of "not guilty."

Dr. Price's Cream Baking Powder World's Fair Highest Medal and Diploma.

Frank Conover and Rosco Bryson returned Tuesday evening from a ten day's trip to Prineville. They traveled on bicycles and the distance, as indicated by their cyclometers, from Corvallis to Prineville via the McKenzie route, was 199 miles. They were in Prineville a week ago tonight, at which time the citizens of that place burned powder and made speeches in evidence of their approbation of the decision handed down by the supreme court in the Oregon Pacific matters.

H. B. Miller, member of the executive committee of the college board of regents, has been in town since Tuesday. Mr. Miller is manager of the Grants Past Sugar Pine Door & Lumber Company, one of the largest lumbering concerns in the state. To a GAZETTE representative he stated that business in his line showed a material improvement, this being especially true with regard to the large orders for fruit boxes that are being received daily. Mr. Miller says that shipments of green fruit will be unusually large this year, his firm having filled orders for five carloads of boxes to be used in the shipment of German and Italian prunes in their green state.

George Waggoner, jr., now a promising young business man of Prineville, was in Corvallis Friday. He called at this office long enough to shake hands with the boys, and left immediately for the Excelsior prune farm for a short visit with his father. The Democrat notes his arrival in Albany and adds the following: Mr. Waggoner brought Mr. Mitchell, the well known wagon man, across the mountains on an investigating trip. He reports the cave recently discovered near Prineville to be a wonderful concern. It is about thirty feet wide with a smooth floor and very regular walls and arched roof, sometimes fifty or sixty feet high. The cave is about thirty feet wide and runs in like a long hall. It has been examined two miles to the end in one direction and about a half a mile the other way, and is no doubt a wonderful cavern.

Business revival is noted along all lines of trade. A matter which perhaps emphasizes this fact more than anything else, is the recent appointment of the Central Planing Mill and Box Factory as agent at Corvallis for Smith & Smith, the Detroit lumber manufacturers. It is the intention of these gentlemen to keep their Corvallis yards well stocked. Here, all small orders will be filled promptly, but large bills will be filled direct from the mill at Detroit. As the Santiam lumber is regarded by all to be the best obtainable, it is a matter of congratulation to the people of this locality that Messrs. Smith & Smith have concluded to establish an agency here. Their first car load of lumber arrived this week, and is to be used by Adam Radin in the construction of the large new barn now being built on his farm east of town. The attention of our readers is called to the ad of Messrs. Smith & Smith in another column.

That Corvallis has a goodly number of citizens with a sporty turn of mind was proven last Saturday, when about a hundred of them hid themselves to Albany to witness the Ray-Trine footrace. Ray was their favorite to a man, and that many of them did not have to "hoof it" home is due to the fact that the Trine faction would not call them out at odds of two to one on Ray. The race was a 100-yard dash for a purse of $300 and gate receipts, and was won by Trine, according to the judges, in 10 seconds flat. While Trine was in condition for the race of his life, Ray was hopelessly overtrained, and looked weak on the track. The start was extremely awkward, Trine getting the advantage by about four feet. Ray made his effort at 75 yards and gained about a foot, but could do no more, and "Whiskers" crossed the tape a winner by three feet. If Ray were in good condition we believe he could vanquish the big man.

J. L. Castle had a surprise party Tuesday afternoon, but from the peculiar "French" he indulged in, the surprise was apparently not relished. On slighting from the train from Albany, he was met by Sheriff Osborn, armed with warrant for his arrest. The offense for which the Portland stock buyer was arrested was alleged to have been committed July 29th. The complaint was sworn to by Benton's stock inspector, R. C. Kiger, and charged Mr. Castle with driving sheep through the county without having them inspected, as by law required. On being arraigned before Justice Wilson, Mr. Castle produced a stock inspector's certificate, signed by C. M. Young, inspector for Lane county, showing that the sheep had been inspected July 24th, and with this clean bill of health, the sheep were entitled to be transferred to their destination without subsequent inspection. With this evidence before the court, the state had no case, and upon motion of Dept. Prosecuting Attorney J. H. Wilson, the matter was dismissed.

TWO YEARS FOR McDOWELL.

A Verdict of Manslaughter Brought in by the Jury After Being out all Saturday Night.

The McDowell-McCaleb murder case, which has attracted so much attention for the past five months in Lincoln and Benton counties, was terminated on last Saturday evening at seven o'clock, p. m., when District Attorney Geo. M. Brown closed his argument on the part of the state, at which time Judge Fullerton gave his instructions to the jury, which covered a period of nearly a half hour. As this was the first murder committed within the boundary of Lincoln county since its creation by the Oregon legislature in 1893, and as the different parties interested in the case were represented in three counties, Lincoln, Benton and Polk, the trial of this case was watched from beginning to end, by the citizens of these three counties, as well as other parts of the state, with much interest. The murder, which occurred on the 26th day of last February, five miles south of Summit, about seven o'clock in the evening of that day, was the result of a family feud, which had existed between John McCaleb, the murdered man, and his father-in-law, John McDowell, ever since McCaleb's marriage to McDowell's daughter some nine years ago.

During the progress of the trial, it was proven that numerous threats were made on the part of both McDowell and McCaleb as to the taking of each other's lives, the last ones being made by both parties on the day of the tragedy. On that day McCaleb was arrested for assaulting his wife, and the case was dismissed in the justice court.

The testimony of the witnesses on the trial of McDowell shows that McCaleb's children were with their mother at the house of McDowell, and that before going home that day, McDowell said that if McCaleb came for his children, he would kill him; J. W. Lawrence was seen to hand a pistol to McDowell on the day of the murder and was heard to say to McDowell that he had to defend himself. McCaleb had said during the day that the children belonged to him and he would have them.

McDowell and his wife and daughter Mary and McCaleb's wife all testified at the trial that McCaleb rode up in front of the house and said he would have his children or he would have blood, at which time, McDowell, standing in the front yard, shot McCaleb while sitting on his horse, and afterwards ran out and shot him two times with a revolver. The conversation was carried on between McCaleb, sitting on his horse in front of the house, and his wife, standing in the back porch out of sight. The witnesses all agreed as to the conversation, which took place before the shooting, except, to the words of "having blood," Chas. Hyde testified that no such threat was made by McCaleb.

McDowell himself testified that he was standing by the gate with his shotgun loaded with buckshot and one pistol ball when McCaleb rode up and called for his children; that he said he would have them or he would have blood; that he then shot him with the shotgun from the inside of the fence and then went out to the place where he lay and shot him twice with a revolver. The witnesses for the prosecution and defense all agree as to the number of shots and the conversation, except the threat as to having the children or blood, which was contradicted by the testimony of Chas. Hyde, Hyde being the only disinterested party, the rest of the witnesses present at the time of the shooting being members of McDowell's family.

The testimony of the coroner, Dr. Carter, shows that there were eleven wounds altogether found upon the body of the deceased.

The facts which were brought out both before the grand jury, and also upon the trial, were gathered in the main, and the theory of the murder was set up by J. Fred Yates, junior member of the law firm of Bryson, Yates & Yates, of this city, which firm was first retained to assist in the prosecution of the case. Afterwards Judge W. S. McFadden was called in to assist in the trial of the cause to take the place of Judge Bryson, who was called to Portland to argue the libel suit against the steamer Rosolute, for the railroad company. Though called into the case at the last moment, without being familiar with the facts until the same were disclosed by the testimony of the witnesses upon the stand, Judge McFadden rendered most valuable assistance in the examination of the witnesses and his opening argument before the jury was a most powerful effort.

The defense was made by W. R. Bilyear, of Albany, H. Denlinger, of Toledo, and Benj. Hayden, the pioneer criminal lawyer of Polk county. Owing to the fact that the murder committed was the result of a family trouble of long standing, and that the defendant was a man of almost seventy years of age, a cripple and in very feeble health, and an old soldier, a strong effort was made to acquit him. A great many witnesses were subpoenaed from Polk county, formerly the home of the murdered man, and the defendant, and also from the community in which they both lived at the time of the shooting, in Lincoln county, and the case was hotly contested throughout.

The jury retired about eight o'clock p. m., and at six o'clock a. m. Sunday, brought in a verdict of manslaughter. Owing to the extreme old age and very delicate health of the defendant, the sentence of the court was two years in the penitentiary, and that the costs of the prosecution should be paid by the defendant.

The jury was made up as follows: Daniel Grady, Thomas Coombs, Allen Fordan, John Fogarty, James Harrison, W. E. Horsford, Wm. Grant, D. Butler, A. Gordon, — Stafford, Silas Malay, J. W. Gray.

Prof. Hedrick, Ann Arbor, Mich., elected to the chair of botany and horticulture. George Coots was made first assistant and instructor in horticulture, and F. M. Hamilton, second assistant.

E. T. Perout was retained in charge of the photographic department at his former salary, $900.

The contract of managing Cauthorn hall and boarding the student, was awarded to J. P. Hoffman, he being the lowest bidder. Drawing, hereafter, will be taught by Prof. Perout instead of Prof. Berchtold, who will take up, in place of that branch, the classes in physics, formerly under the instruction of Prof. Shaw.

The resignations of Professors Letcher and Washburn were accepted.

At the time of going to press, the board was in session and will probably not adjourn before noon.

A SUBSCRIBER SINCE 1864.

Away back in the sixties, when T. B. Olmstead was editor and proprietor of the GAZETTE, L. G. Kline located in Corvallis. The new corner was not at that time possessed of much of this world's goods, but he had an abundance of vim, energy and business judgment. He began operations in a small way, gradually increasing his business as his capital would permit, until he eventually became the leading merchant of the county. During his long career in the commercial field of Corvallis he gained an enviable reputation as a prompt and reliable business man, and it was with much regret that many of his old customers learned of his retirement from active business life some ten years ago; having at that time acquired a competency. He has since lived in a quiet, unpretentious way, from the income of his investments. He has ever been ready to lend a helping hand to the needy and distressed, as many persons living in Corvallis will attest, who have received favors at his hands.

By looking over the old files of the GAZETTE, it will be seen that Mr. Kline was a liberal advertiser, to which fact may be attributed much of the success he attained while in business here. Mr. Kline was one of the GAZETTE's first subscribers, having first begun taking the paper in 1864, since which time he has been one of its constant readers. In fact, he has read the paper as long that he believes it would be almost impossible to keep house without it, and last Saturday he deposited two dollars for another year's subscription.
