"Bird" Wells, chief of police, capted a bird of beautiful plumage on the streets of Corvallis Monday. While spreading gravel near the Congregational church a Mongolian pheasant flew past him and alighted in some shrubbery about the Dalaba property, where, with the aid of several passers by he succeeded in capturing it.

1500 Privet hedge plants for sale by Frank Turner.

Take a look at our wool, winter weight, black and blue cheviot suits at $7.50, the best value in Oregon for the money. Nolan & Callahan.

On Friday evening last week the members and friends of the M. E. Church invaded the parsonage. Each brought some useful article. The happy evening was a complete surprise to Rev. and Mrs. Oberg. Games and refreshments were indulged in, and at the close a well filled purse was presented to Mrs. Oberg, who feelingly responded.

Geo. Coffee, of Monroe, died suddenly last Saturday afternoon. He attended a political meeting and leaving before it was concluded, went to the store of A. Wilhelm, and asked for a drink. Before the clerk could get it, Mr. Coffee gave a gasp, and died. It was a case of apoplexy. Mr. Coffee was a native of Ireland and was about 72 years of age. He served two years in the Mexican war. He leaves a widow and four children.

Taylor Porter, returned this week from Douglas county, where with W. H. Millhollen, he has been employed during the past month in building a large span bridge. Just before leaving there Mr. Porter was engaged in loading a pile driver hammer, which had been used in constructing the bridge, and in some unaccountable manner the hammer slipped against a crowbar which he was holding and resulted in severely injuring him, from the effects of which he is hardly able to get about.

A bill for $909.75 was presented to the county court at its recent term by ex-clerk Hunter, and the vouchers accompanying the bill indicated that during Mr. Hunter's incumbency, the said amount had been paid out by him for deputy hire. He desired to be re-embursed for the outlay, but the court concluded that Benton county was in no way responsible for the amount and the bill was consequently rejected. It is understood that Mr. Hunter proposes instituting legal proceedings to recover the claim.

Tomorrow, says the Oregonian of Tuesday, the month during which pheasants, grouse, quail, etc., may be sold on the markets, begins, and those who have been longing for "bird on toast" can have their longings gratified, their appetites lashed, and their purses depleted. A fine display of game may be looked for in the markets, as one dealer alone has notice of 500 pheasants which are to be shipped to him. Every one who sits down to eat one of these fine birds should remember gratefully Judge O. N. Denny, who introduced them into the state at his own expense.

W. E. Yates, prosecuting attorney for this judicial district, returned Tuesday, having been absent for several weeks attending to his official duties in the counties of Coos and Curry. He came up from Marshfield on the steamer Farallon and since his return has been engaged in recovering from a severe attack of sickness. He brings glad tidings of the effective work being carried on by McKinley workers in the counties visited, and says that some of the more enthusiastic republicans assert that Coos county will roll up a majority for the republican standard bearers.

On account of the large increase in attendance this year at the public schools it was decided at a meeting of the directors Monday night, to add another grade to the course. This new grade, the ninth, will be in charge of Principal Pratt, and results in a slight extension of the course of study, and temporary quarters for the pupils of the new department will be provided by the partitioning off of a portion of the room heretofore occupied by the eight grade. Miss Gussie Turney, on account of her six years of efficient work, will be promoted to the assistant principalship, and will have charge of the eighth grade. Her place as teacher of the sixth grade was filled by the election of Miss Mildred Linville, who has been in charge of the Mountain View school during the past month. The vacancy caused by the latter's resignation will be filled by her sister, Miss Bertie Linville. Miss Mattie Wright was chosen supernumerary teacher, to act during the absence, through sickness or other causes, of any regular teachers. The attendance at the Corvallis schools this year is unprecedented, and an addition to the present school facilities is a matter which will require attention from our citizens within the near future.

GETTING HOTTER.

Big Guns and Little Guns Going. The Big Political Campaign. What They are Doing.

Senator Driver speaks at Philomath next Wednesday night, at Corvallis Thursday night and addresses the people of Monroe Friday night. Dr. Driver has achieved an enviable reputation as a pulpit orator and those who have had the pleasure of hearing him in this campaign, say that he is one of the most forcible and eloquent speakers on the stump today. The Flambeau club will parade before the speaking in Corvallis.

Hon. D. R. N. Blackburn, of Albany, is addressing good audiences in Benton county this week. Good reports come from all the places he has thus far visited, and his plain, convincing presentation of the issues is leaving a good impression.

Mr. Ralph Moody and Mr. Allan R. Joy whose appointments appear elsewhere, are good speakers and will be worth hearing.

Col. Kelsay and Ben Hayden debated at Eugene last Saturday before a crowd that more than filled the court house. The colonel was at his best and made a spirited speech full of logical reasoning and proven facts. The republican cause was well well represented.

A careful estimate of the business and professional men on Main street and their employees, shows their political standing to be as follows: For McKinley, 99; for Bryan, 45, and for Palmer, 5. Some of those accredited to Bryan may vote for McKinley, but the 99 for McKinley are sure.

Senator Davis in reply to the favorite popocratic wit that "the gold dollar has appreciated," directs attention to the gauge in the river to mark the rise and fall of water. The river rises and falls, but the gauge remains the same. Neither does the gauge cause the river's variations. There is a Corvallis man who might dispute the senator. During the last high water he was interested in watching the river. He wished to note the rapidity of the rise, so he nailed a shingle on the hull of the steamboat Three Sisters, lying idle at the wharf, close to the water. When he returned next morning his shingle was still just out of water. Later he met a friend who said the Willamette had risen 14 inches during the night. An argument ensued that grew into a bet, and the shingle man took his friend to the boat and showed him his mark. The friend suggested that the boat might have risen with the water and the shingle man finally "tumbled," paying the bet and treated half the town. He is supporting Bryan and insists that "the standard do move."

Butterworth at Albany.

A large crowd greeted Ben Butterworth at Albany Wednesday. He spoke in the afternoon at the court house square, and his magnificent speech was heard by thousands. A large parade proceeded to the meeting, marching through the principal streets. Horsemen, bicyclists and footmen, about one thousand in all, made up the procession, and thousands packed the walks to view them. A feature of the parade was a number of ladies headed by the Corvallis Ladies Band. About fifty from Corvallis went down on the morning train. In the evening a special train carried the H. & L. Band, Corvallis Flambeau Club, and 250 McKinley enthusiasts from Corvallis and Philomath. Arriving at Albany, the Flambeau club formed in line, and headed by the band paraded the principal streets. The Albanyites had made no preparations for an evening demonstration, but Corvallis, with one hundred men in line, made a splendid showing and brought forth many complimentary remarks from the interested onlookers who reviewed the parade for the interest her citizens manifested in the principles and candidates of the republican party.

When the parade was over every available seat in the opera house, where the speaking was to take place, had been taken and Corvallisites who went over to hear Judge Caples' address, were unable to gain access to the building, and so wandered aimlessly about town until the train returned at 11 o'clock. It was expected that Mr. Butterworth would speak for a short time, but owing to his having spoken in the afternoon in the open air, his throat was sore and he was unable to comply with the committee's request.

The man who eats because he is hungry, is thus far, on a level with the brute. The man who stops eating the moment his hunger is appeased is the wise man. Nature needs no more than she calls for. Continued excess brings about indigestion, dyspepsia, with loss of flesh, strength, sleep, ambition and mental power; and an accumulation of acids, pains and many dangerous local maladies. The stomach now can do nothing alone. We must appeal to some artificially digested food which can also digest other foods. That is to say, we must use the Stomach Digestive Cord.

The effect is prompt and cheering. The chronic pain and distress ceases. Appetite presently revives. Flesh and vigor gradually come back, and the sufferer recovers. But he must be careful in future. A trial bottle for ten cents.

O. A. C. NEWS.
President Miller arrived home from Grand Ronde valley last week. He reports very flattering prospects for good crops and thinks that fruit raising is going to develop into an immense industry, especially the raising of winter fruit.

The people of that portion of the state are at present taking much interest in the subject of sugar beets, and their adaptability to the soil of that section. A great deal of work along this line has been done at the experiment station, particularly in the department of chemistry; and from numerous samples analyzed, the juice of the beets were found to contain an average of 14.90 per cent sugar. As several beet growers claim to have raised beets that averaged 19, and even as high as 20 per cent of sugar, it will certainly justify the people of Eastern Oregon to investigate this matter fully and ascertain the ability of the land to produce, the cost of production, and the market value of the commodity.

It is not unlikely that a sugar factory will be established in the Grande Ronde valley, and should such an institution be built it would afford the farmers of that locality another much needed opening for the disposal of a portion of their produce at fair prices.

Throughout Eastern Oregon, President Miller found that the merits of the agricultural course of the college was not understood by the farmers and consequently was not appreciated by them as it ought to be. Their idea seems to be that instead of teaching the analysis of soils and their adaptability, the care of stock, dairying, and in fact the entire science of agriculture, the students merely learn to plow, harrow and do chores; and the farmer, through this misapprehension, sends his boy to the Agricultural college and generally insists that he take the mechanical course. The agricultural course is in fact the fuller course on general matters, and once its merits are better understood by the people of Oregon, the agricultural students will greatly outnumber those of any other course.

The new insectary is completed and ready for experiments in studying the life history of injurious as well as beneficial insects.

CYCLONE DAVIS' ADVICE.
Corvallis people will remember the "Texas Cyclone" who spoke here in behalf of populism, last spring. He was by far the best speaker that has visited this state in the interest of the populist party, and his tour helped materially to swell Vandenberg's vote. Mr. Davis is now a candidate for congressman in Texas and makes addresses daily. Regarding the presidential election, he says:

"Bryan and Sewall were nominated for the express purpose of breaking up the populist party, the former by the politicians at Chicago and the latter by Wall street. I have infinitely more respect for the republican party than for the democratic. If the republican party wins it will leave the populists intact, but if the Bryan free silver party win, it will destroy the populists. As between Sewall and McKinley, I prefer the latter. I advise all populists to vote for McKinley and Hobart."

Oregon populists can vote for Bryan and Watson, but Oregon has only four electoral votes. Watson has no show at all of being elected and Oregon populists who believe with Watson and Davis that the form is being used as a cat's paw and that the populist party should be upheld intact, will vote for McKinley and Hobart.

Exchanges, Please.
About every other day some of the wondering gentlemen, termed tramps by the impolite, step into the office and assuming a look of news hunger, ask politely for "a few exchanges." The uninitiated wonder at the catholic taste of these roaming readers, for they are not particular as to the politics, religion, character, ability, date or source of the desired papers. It is true they are fond of metropolitan journals, but this is only because of their size. The exchanges are usually given them and they bow themselves out of the office.

The ponderous editorial, the spicy local and the ads of the out-of-date newspapers, however, remain unread. The tramps use them as blankets, for nothing is so good as paper, for keeping out the cold, and the professional member of Bohemia's lower stratum have found this out. Many a good hot editorial has served to warm the weary limbs of wandering W's when they lay them down to sleep.

"I was troubled for a long time with an itching humor on the scalp," says Mr. D. P. Davis, N. O. Landing, Fla., "but at last, being recommended Ayer's Hair Vigor, I tried it, and a complete cure was effected. Everyone who has used it speaks well of this dressing."

A DAMP PROFESSOR.
A professor in the college knows an excellent story that he does not tell. He was in Eastern Oregon on business connected with his department, and while in Baker county, was entertained by W. P. Keady at a mining camp. Mr. Keady, with the best possible motives, showed his guest all the things of interest and pointed out a number of mineral springs. The professor, of course, sampled the waters freely, and discussed their various merits from a scientific standpoint. It was late when they returned to the hotel and after supper they retired.

Those waters, it seems, have a habit of not exposing their effect upon the human system, until they have been some time in the stomach. They then act very hastily and without any provocation. It was raining hard when the professor suddenly awoke and went out doors in his nightgown. Perhaps he wanted to take the "wet grass" cure, but anyway he went, and closed the door behind him. When he returned the door was still closed, and as it had a spring lock it remained closed. The professor knocked and shouted, but awoke nothing but his own feelings. The rain poured down. It was a cold rain and very wet. His nightgown was not water proof. The colder the professor grew outside, the hotter he grew inside. He wasn't a popocrat so he could not blame the money power.

A big stamp mill was working across the way, and while the professor was shivering at the hotel door, one shift of men went in and the toilers relieved, came out. The professor yelled to them, but the rumble of the mill prevented them hearing him. Soon a man came out with a lantern and passed the hotel. The professor spoke and started toward him. The man gave one look at the white-robed figure and hurried on. The professor saw his sole hope vanishing, so he ran. The man yelled, threw his lantern at the pursuing phantom and raced for the mill, the bedraggled college man after him, barefooted, in the mud.

His frightened observer hurriedly told his tale in the mill, and the men came out and captured the supposed crazy man. They took him to the mill, when he told his version of the matter. "His speech was greeted with enthusiastic applause," and he went to bed on an improvised couch of gunny sacks. In the morning one of the men brought his clothes over from the hotel. Mr. Keady had some more springs to show him, but the professor is no hog. He came home, and is busily engaged in not telling his mining experience.

The hair restored to natural color.

I have used many preparations for restoring hair to natural color, but never had satisfactory results till I used Zulu Yuller. It will restore any hair or beard to its natural color in three weeks. If it does not return your money, so you take no risk. People who have neglected it can get a sample package which contains enough to restore any one's hair to natural color, by sending 21 two-cent stamps, to pay postage, etc., to Wilson & Co., New Concord, Ohio.

The regular price is $2.50 per package. It does not restore your hair to natural color, or make any color of hair darker in three weeks, they will return your stamps. This proposition is so fair that thousands are using it. It is harmless, but never fails. Why can't big money be made by selling Zulu Yuller from house to house?
