The captain shook his head and closed his eyes. Steve moved away after a few minutes to look for other Confederate wounded, and two hours later the officer's dead body was carried out with others to make room for the wounded. When morning came and the dead were gathered for burial, Steve Brayton found many that he could identify. In deed a full half of his own company nad been wipeu ont, and among inem was Ike Baxter. But great as was the Confederate loss, that of the Federals was severe. History has said of that first real cavalry fight of the war that it was terribly brief in duration and appalling in its list of dead and wounded. It was almost night of the day following the fight before the last of the Federals moved off and left the field. And how changed was Rest Haven, and what a misnomer the title which had been given to it in the years of peace! Cinders and ashes showed where the houses had stood. Across the plain, furrowed by shot and shell and hoof, its snow white carpet now spattered and blotched by a thousand blood stains, they had dug long trenches and covered in the dead. Trees had been cut down, bushes uprooted, and over acres of ground was strewed the wreck of battle.
