College Printer Keady, after two ineffectual attempts to get away for a much-needed rest, has about concluded that printers are among the unfortunate, ones excluded from Elysian fields, whose labyrinthine mazes are beautiful with sybil grottoes, sparkling fountains, trailing vines, mock-eyed wood nymphs, evoked by the thrilling melodies of the reathred songsters of brilliant plumage, and where the perfumed atmosphere, laden with the scent of wood violets, forget-me-nots and wild thyme begets fanciful thoughts and refreshment to the wearied body and overtaxed mind.

Wednesday evening about half-past nine O. B. Connor while returning on his wheel from town to his home in Williams Addition, ran into Wm. H. The president of the First National Bank of this city last week so far forgot his early lessons in geography that he overlooked the fact that Lane county was not a portion of Benton. In his effort to cover the entire field of commercial enterprise, and enlarge the usefulness and reserve fund of his bank, he took a chattel mortgage on a Lane county crop, and filed it in this county, serenely going on with his daily routine of checking up the boys in his counting room, entirely oblivious of the fact that the security he had taken such care to provide and prepare, under his own eagle eye and judicial acumen, was entirely worthless. And he would have been none the wiser had it not been for the courtesy of Recorder Gellatly, who accidentally discovered it, and informed Mr. Woodcock. When the recorder, under a great effort, on his part, succeeded in obtaining admission to the bank after it had closed on Saturday last, informed Mr. Woodcock, it is said such an oppressive stillness prevailed that the snapping of the bank's eyelashes could be distinctly heard as the boom of heaven's artillery, preceding a Kansas cyclone. It was extremely touching to observe the sympathy displayed by Wiles, Lilly, Bryant and Clark toward the extremely technical, accurate and exacting bank president.

It is Best to Advertise.

A short time ago a young man of Oregon City bought a pair of socks containing a note saying that the writer was an employee of Kenosha, Wis., knitting works and wanted a good husband. She gave her name and requested the buyer if an unmarried man to write with a view to matrimony. The young man who found the note considered the matter in all its phases and decided to write. Awaiting the answer with anxiety he was rewarded with a curt letter stating that the girl was the mother of two children, and had been married four years, and that the letter he had answered had been written over so long ago. It was a "sock" dolager, and the young man correctly concluded that the merchant who sold him the socks didn't advertise.—Welcome.

Attorney A. C. Woodcock, of Eugene, has purchased a $9000 Benton county farm near Monroe. Mr. Woodcock certainly knows a good thing when he sees it. Hereafter this gentleman has been accused of being an astute politician and an uneasy aspirant for fame along the dizzy heights of political glory. But a change has occurred. On his banner he inscribes, "Labor Omnia Vincit." At once we read of his pitching bundles for the thrasher on one of his farms in Lane county, and following, in quick haste, the purchase of the Benton county farm. Possibly he may be taking lessons of Farmer Geer.

This is what the Oregon Agriculturist has to say about our prune-growers: "One trouble in Benton county is that a very large majority of the prune-growers have never taken the Rural Northwest or any other paper of its character. They have not kept abreast of the times. There are a few strictly up-to-date men in the prune business in Benton county, but most of them know it all about prunes to such an extent that they are finding out what they don't know in the costly school of personal experience." The idea conveyed by the above is that the Agriculturist "knows it all," and wants to impart its knowledge to our fruit men.
