Moro, and we were therefore interested in certain incidents which gave us an insight into his character. After satisfying himself by observation that we could use our rifles with some effect, he made us a rather startling business proposition in the following words: 'You gentlemen shoot quite well with the rifle." "Yes; we have had some experience." "You desire to get samples of the clothing and arms of my countrymen for your collection?" "Yes." "Papa (General Arolas) told you, if you met armed Moors outside the town, to order them to lay down their arms and retire?" "Yes." does not understand my people as I do. They are all bad. When we meet them, do not ask them to lay down their arms, for they will come back again, and get them, and probably attack us. Just shoot as many of them as possible. You can then take their arms and clothing, and I will cut off their heads, shave their evebrows, show them to papa, and claim the reward for killing juramentados." He never really forgave us for refusing to enter into partnership with him on this very liberal basis.

The Century for September prints an article on "Life and Society in Old Cuba," being extracts from the journal painter of miniatures, written in 1859. Mr. Jenkins says:

When an acquaintance visits a private residence, cigars are handed round on a silver salver; if the visitor be an intimate friend, one of the young girls of the family, called a "donzallia," lights a cigar and giving it a few draws to get well lighted, gracefully presents it to him. If the guitar is brought in, as usually occurs (for there is one in every house), and the visitor plays, his cigar is kept lighted by the donzalia, and at each pause in the music she politely hands it to the guest. This may occur several times in an evening, and this friendly ceremony is pleasant enough when the cigar comes from the pouting lips of a rich Spanish beauty just ripening into womanhood, but in any case it must be thankfully accepted.

Roughly, our losses were 200, while thousands of the dervishes were killed and wounded Last night the Anglo-Egyptian army encamped at Agaiza, eight miles from Omdurman. Countless banners fluttered over their masses, and the copper and brass drums resounded through the ranks of the savage warriors, who advanced unswervingly, with all their old-time ardor. Our infantry formed up outside the camp. At 7:20 A. M. the enemy crowded the ridges above the camp and advanced steadily in enveloping formation. At 7:40 our artillery opened fire, which was answered by the dervish riflemen. Their attack developed on our left, and in accordance with their traditional tactics, they swept down the hillside, with the design of rushing our flank. But the withering fire maintained for 15 minutes by all our line frustrated the attempt, and the dervishes, balked, swept toward our center, upon which they concentrated a fierce attack. A large force of horsemen, trying to face a continuous hail of bullets from the Cameron Highlanders, the Lincolnshire regiment and the Soudanese, was literally swept away, leading to the withdrawal of the entire body, whose dead strewed the field. The bravery of the dervishes can Finally they broke and fled, leaving the field white with Jibbah-clad corpses, like a snow drift dotted spot. At 11:15 the sirdar ordered an ad ance and our whole force, in line, drove the scattered remnants into the desert to Omdurman. Among the chief incidents of the batthe was a brilliant charge by the Twenty-first Lancers, under Lieutenant-Colonel Martin. Galloping down on a detached body of the enemy, they found the dervish swordsmen massed behind, and were forced to charge home against appalling odds. The lancers hacked through the mass, rallied and kept the dervish horde at bay. Lieutenant Grenfelt, nephew of General Sir Francis Grenfelt, was killed, four other officers were wounded, 21 men were killed and 20 wounded. The Egyptian cavalry were in close fighting throughout with the Baggara horsemen. For a short period the enemy captured and held a gun, but it was brilliantly retaken.
