Death of M. C. Kerr.

Hon. M. C. Kerr, Speaker of the House of Representatives, died at Rock Alum Springs, West Virginia, on the 19th inst., of consumption of the bowels. Mr. Kerr was born at Titusville, Crawford county, Pennsylvania, on the 15th of March, 1827, making him consequently at the day of his death a little over forty-nine years of age. After having been admitted to the bar in Louisville, Kentucky, he settled in New Albany, Indiana, where he resided up to the time of his death. In 1856 he was elected for two years to the State Assembly of Indiana, and in 1862 was elected to Congress, and since that time he has been known as one of the master-minds of the day. He was an indefatigable worker for the advancement of whatever cause he undertook, laboring even at the risk and the loss of his own health. He was one of the pure and true men of this time and his loss will be felt not alone by the Democratic party, of which he was one of the acknowledged leaders, but by the whole nation.

The Letters of the St. Louis Nominees.

The communications by which Governors Tilden and Hendricks formally announced their acceptance of the nominations for President and Vice-President, have now been sufficiently long in the hands of the people for candid and reliable judgments to have been formed. After a very careful perusal, we have no hesitation in affirming that they are among the strongest and most convincing public documents that it has ever been our good fortune to see. Every dispassionate reader must be convinced that the writers are honest and able; that they are statesmen of the highest and broadest type. The issues of the campaign are treated in so earnest and vigorous, and withal so candid and skillful, a manner, that every one not blinded by prejudice and bound in party shackles must apprehend at once that the writers are men possessing the necessary qualifications for properly dealing with the National problem now demanding solution. The nature of the evils through which the country has been reduced to its present demoralized condition, is lucidly set forth, and the character of the antidote for the poison which is infiltrating every portion of the body politic is clearly and fully explained. Mr. Secretary Chandler and his coadjutors may well wish that the epistle they compiled for their candidate had been delayed until they had received a proper model for its form. They may console themselves, however, with the knowledge that for the status can never be mistaken for the living man. They might have made an excellent imitation, but they never could have breathed into it the breath of life.

Maine and the Cincinnati Ticket.

Much surprise is manifested that the Republicans of Maine do not more heartily endorse the nominations made by the Cincinnati Convention. The cause is, however, not far to seek, and by everyone must be acknowledged, as not altogether creditable to those concerned. Mr. Blaine was, undoubtedly, the most popular and prominent candidate whose name was presented to the Convention. The votes which he received and the manner in which single-handed he fought the combined opposition of all the other elements, conclusively proved him the ablest leader of the Republicans. Nor can it be gainsaid that the methods of the disaffected were somewhat unscrupulous, and that the abuse which was heaped upon him was unmerited from the source whence it came. Grant's tools, Conkling and Morton, did all they could by calumny and falsehood to destroy him. It need not be a source of wonder that the ex-Speakers' friends do not readily overlook and forget the treatment of him, to whom they looked with a reverence somewhat akin to that of an old-time Scottish clan to the chieftain at its head. The object of the ill-treatment is indeed magnanimous enough to cast the mantle of forgetfulness over the injuries he has received, and express a desire that those who have regard for him shall put their shoulders to the wheel and help along the Administration machinery. But it is evident that they feel no delight in a compliance with his behest. To gratify their leader many will do what he requires, but they cannot obliterate from their minds the memory of the insults and injuries which he has received at the hands of the party which they are now called upon to help, and the enthusiasm which is the only assurance of victory is wanting among them.

Orth's Retirement.

We are told that by the withdrawal of the Hon. Godlove S. Orth from the contest for the Indiana Executive Chair the Republicans of that State are full of trouble. We are not surprised to find that this is the case, nor does it astonish us that the perplexity is not confined to Indiana, but is spread among Republicans throughout the country. It is perhaps as hard a blow as they can have to sustain, during the continuance of the existing hostilities. To Mr. Orth personally we cannot refrain from tendering our sincerest sympathies. The blow to him is so severe that we should not be amazed if from its effects he were forever removed from the sphere of his political action. If not actually deprived of life he has been so severely wounded that it seems next to impossible that he can recover sufficiently to be again able to resume active work. He forgot the necessary injunction that he who would run a race must free himself from every burden. His conduct in the matter of our claims against the Government of Venezuela has been his ruin. With them, and the sins of the party composing his supporters, he was over weighted. The result is that this contestant, upon whom so many hopes relied so confidently that he was brought all the way from Austria to take his part in the race, has been, thus early, compelled to withdraw. Another of Grant's foreign ministers made ready for his grave. Sic eunt fata hominum.

The Rouhester, Minn., Post says: "The convention at St. Louis recommended the next Democratic National Convention to abolish the rule requiring a two-thirds vote for the nomination of a candidate for President. The rule is a good one and they will make a mistake if they abolish it." The Toledo, Ohio, Blade says: "True to his Southern instincts and training, Roger A. Pryor opposes the repeal of the two-thirds rule in Democratic conventions. * * * The real reason of the adoption of the rule was to enable the Southern slave oligarchy to bind the Democratic party to its chariot wheels. That rule enabled the South to dictate the candidate. * * * Now a little knot of ex-Confederate officers located in New York city are willing to operate the machine. The old oligarchy has changed headquarters; that is all the difference." Both these papers carry the names of Hayes and Wheeler at their mast-heads,—it hip pockets may be thus figuratively represented,—and to show how well they agree we make these extracts. The Blade, born in sin, cannot forego the opportunity to exhibit its venomous fanaticism and sectional hate; and in its frantic zeal shows not only a disregard for facts, but an immense contempt for the Cincinnati platform. The two-thirds rule was adopted to defeat a Southern man—Col. R. M. Johnson—and from that time to the present it has been the rule of the party—not of an oligarchy. The Cincinnati platform says: "We sincerely deprecate all sectional feeling and tendencies." But the hope of the Blade is, like all the organs and leaders of the Republican party, to keep alive "sectional feeling," hence the terms "Southern instincts," "Southern slave oligarchy," "ex-Confederate officers," the "old oligarchy," and similar terms, with the "war record" of its candidate and the "ex-Confederate" and "rebel" record of every Democrat, are the stock in trade of the Republican papers for the present Presidential campaign. They believe like the Fremont, Ohio, correspondent of the Blade that Hayes' "war record" will do more to elect him than a "hundred financial platforms." Now, if the Republican party is sincere in its professions, why does it depend upon the "war record" and "bloody shirt" more than honesty, decency and common sense? A "united South" is dreadful! It indicates sectionalism! But a united North, with two-thirds of the votes of the Union on one side, has no sectional tendencies in the estimation of the Republicans, so long as it is united to plunder and oppress the "South." Let Radical journals refer to their platform occasionally, for decency's sake, if for nothing else.

Gov. Gustav Koorner, of the New York Independent Conference address leads him logically to the support of Tilden, and he invites his Liberal Republican German associates to follow him in his support.

We do not read of any accusations to the ranks of Hayes from the Democracy, but we daily hear of Republicans influential in their party, who turn their backs on it to support Tilden, the Reformer.—New York Sun.

ELECTION RETURNS.

Review of the same for Lane County.

To the Editor of the Guard:

I am almost afraid to begin upon this subject—the field is so extensive that an endless letter might be easily written about it, and then not do it justice. But just to let the people know that somebody is acting without regard to principle, I will scrawl a few lines, at least.

In the first place I would like to ask Democrats why Thompson had 88 majority, Higby 6, Walton 60, Whiteaker 68; Scott, Rad., 23; Burton, Dem., 11; Hayes, Dem., 8; Joel Wary, Rad., 337; and Hale, Dem., 131.

Now, between Thompson and Higby there is a difference of 94 votes; between Whiteaker and Scott 101, and between Wary and Hale 468 votes; can this difference be accounted for on any construction of principle? Is Whiteaker, who was elected by 68 majority, any more of a democrat than Cruzan, who was defeated by 52 votes? a difference on the democratic legislative ticket of 120 votes. Let us agree that the offices of judge, clerk, sheriff and other county offices are not political, and are outside of party lines, so as to account for the 468 see-sawers (this is a new word, I believe) between Wary and Hale, but on a question of principle—where one vote might change the political cast of the U. S. Senate and affect the destiny of our State and the United States for years, or forever, how are we to account for the 120 waverers that shifted from Whiteaker to Scott or Bond, or elsewhere than to Cruzan? My guess is there are 468 men in Lane county who do not take or read a newspaper—who never heard of Belknap, Habetkopf or Beecher, and who would vote for any one of them for President without asking any questions; this will explain why Wary received 337 republican majority, and Hale 131 democratic majority. Whiteaker, as all must confess, is an able and a prudent man, and on him the party could unite, and did probably—yet it is clear that he did not get the full strength of his party; strange as it may appear, some men voted for McClung who have been professed democrats through life; and some radicals may have voted for Whiteaker, but I doubt it; they are too well trained for that; but the barons hang loosely on some—aye, many—so-called democrats, and while they come to the "scratch" nothly, they are led away into the radical camp by Hon. J. B. Underwood and his strikers; their votes are traded for on the most flimsy pretences, because they, said democrats, do not read, do not think, or have no principles. I am aware of the fact that there are soft democrats, hard democrats, democrats with principles, policy democrats and so-called democrats. The bed-rock and soft democrats differ as to policy, but not on principles; the policy democrats have no principles that will stand the test of an uncertain strain; the so-called are the kind who do read the papers, who believe Ben Underwood to be politically honest, and Henry Ward Beecher pure; and who do not know that Belknap was bribed, or that Joel Wary bought his votes for less than 25 cents each, indirectly. For the latter class we do not write—they will never see us. For policy democrats there is little hope; they live in the sunshine of the party, but in the hours of trial or danger they are docile as lambs.

This brings me down briefly and, I hope, understandingly to another question: as to why men did "scratch"? Were the candidates good democrats? Were they honest? Are they capable? Do you believe they are faithful to the constitution? I have never heard the honesty or democracy of one of them questioned. As to their capability there might be a question, or a doubt, but is Bond better qualified than Redford, or is Scott superior to Cruzan? I doubt it.

But suppose the candidates were not capable, then who is to blame? Let us consider. Is it vanity in ignorant men that induces them to venture upon the uncertain sea of politics or is it an oversight of other illiterate ones that puts such crabs afloat upon an angry and fickle flood without balist or helm to carry our treasures safely along the stream of time and land them unimpaired in the hands of posterity a hundred years hence? Or is it the work of a few designing men to have incompetency thrust forward, so that the control of the whole arrangement may be in the hands of that favored few? If candidates are incompetent these questions will arise and be discussed accordingly; and then the burden falls on the nominating conventions—which should never nominate a man incapable or dishonest, and if men who are not capable force themselves upon conventions, then such men may expect defeat and injury to the party.

There is no honor in aspiring to a position we are not qualified to fill, or the duties of which we are not able to honorably discharge. Whether men are faithful to the constitution or not depends upon their knowledge of that instrument; if a man has never read either the State or United States constitution he cannot tell what he thinks of either, and if he has read it he may have an opinion that does not amount to much, unless he is able to understand its force and effect upon the laws and upon the administration of our government.

Were our candidates capable, honest and faithful to the constitution? If so then it then it was our duty as honest men to vote for them; and to use all honorable means to elect them; if such was not the case, then they should not have been nominated. Then where is the fault? I will not attempt to answer. The men who put them in nomination or the candidates themselves may answer, or have judgment entered against them in case of default. But this I do know: that there are competent and honest democrats enough in Lane county to fill all the places and offices of honor, trust and profit necessary in the county, and there are democrats enough to elect them; but, as a rule, men who would honor the position do not seek it; it is the man seeking honor (?) who forces himself upon his friends and upon conventions, to be honored with defeat or subsequent disgrace.

The local storm is over. In November we will be called upon again to answer at the polls; and that a pity that will be, as the chances to "scratch" will not appear where there is but one name on a ticket. Then Lafayette Lane will have a good square vote and a majority. I predict, of 150 votes in Lane county; yet he may be traded off, or traded on for the nominee of the Cincinnati convention, for when men become so debased, so contemptible, as to trade votes—the dearest boon to freemen—they are fit for "treason, stragems and spoils," and deserve good positions in chain gangs and penitentiaries. I venture to say that the man who will sell or trade on his vote should be disfranchised as unworthy to exercise the right of voting. Yours truly, A. B. C.

Another Opportunity for the Relief of the Afflicted.

The Surgeons of the National Pacific Institute, located in Indianapolis; Pacific Division, Alhambra Building, Bush Street, San Francisco, have yielded to the many requests from their patrons and friends in Oregon and Washington Territories and adjoining regions to visit Portland. The former visit was highly satisfactory and encouraging, many of the patients then accepted for treatment being now entirely cured, while nearly all are greatly benefited and in a fair way of recovery. Three or more of the Surgeons will be at the Cosmopolitan Hotel in Portland, Oregon, from Monday, the 28th day of August, until Saturday, the 2d September, 1876, six days inclusive.

They will have with them a great amount of surgical apparatus, appliances, etc., and competent assistants and workmen to change fit, and make such apparatus as may be required. They will come especially prepared to treat all surgical cases: Paralysis, all kinds of Deformities of the Face, Spine and Limbs, Dislocated Joints, Diseased Eyes, Catarrh, Private Diseases, Piles, Fistula, etc. All who wish to avail themselves of the advantages of the Institute, without the long journey to San Francisco or Indianapolis, should do so at this time. No cases will be undertaken without a fair hope of relief. It is needless to say the Institute is entirely responsible, and the largest and most popular of the kind in America, curing thousands annually. Remember the time and place, and come early. Send to the Institute for circular.
