

THE EUGENE CITY GUARD.

EUGENE CITY, OREGON. SATURDAY, APRIL 21, 1877.

Disposed Of.

A Radical exchange says that the negro will never again figure as a factor in the politics of this country. There is certainly no doubt but that the Republican party has all it wants of "negro equality," "human rights," and all that sort of thing. It is doubtful even if the few years of power and plunder it gained by enfranchising the negro is an adequate recompense for the creation of an instrument for its own destruction. It is an established fact, demonstrated beyond a question last November, that the influence it has exerted over the colored race since the right of suffrage was conferred on them has departed. Instead of each Democrat in the South casting three votes for every five negroes, the five negroes vote, and hereafter there will be the white Democratic vote to begin with and at least four out of the five negroes will vote with the former. So that they have jumped out of a moderately warm frying pan into a remarkably hot fire. The negro does, and will for all time to come, hold the balance of power in the South, but he is not likely to again go back to a party which has not benefited him in any way except by enfranchising him, and this in itself is no benefit. That the negro ought, through gratitude, to vote with those who enfranchised him, is very a nice theory, but gratitude is not one of the predominating principles in human nature. It is even more largely developed in the brute creation. And as the negro becomes better qualified to vote intelligently, he will look to his own interests, leaving gratitude to those who can afford to be grateful. Its lease of power made the Republican party too sure of continued success, and it spurned the negro, and turned against itself a tide which may, by an effort of the Democratic party, be kept against it for all time to come. The negro vote will never again, or at least not for many years, figure as an element of success to the Radical party.

A Washington dispatch to the press of the Eastern States says: "Hayes—like Washington—is calling around him good and conservative men without regard to party." Like Washington, indeed? We do not recollect that Washington made a negro a marshal or that he had more respect for a free negro than he had for a white German. Washington called good men around him, but they were white men—in those days there were enough white men, who were good, to fill all the offices, but under Radical rule the offices have been multiplied till there are enough to divide with the negroes.

William Lloyd Garrison is receiving an unusual amount of praise from the Democratic papers, which seem to regard him as one of the most prominent and influential as well as noble men in the country. Time works wonders. A few years ago those journals would have thought as much of committing suicide as puffing this old-fashioned abolitionist.

Which we copy from an Oregon patent outside. There is one wonder which time will never work. It will never enable an organ with government advertising to see things as they are—as Garrison, for instance, seems them. We regard him as neither noble, in the broad sense of the word, nor influential. But he can realize that, having gained the great object for which he spent years of labor, denouncing the Constitution and demanding its amendment or blood, the abolition of slavery, there is no occasion to enslave those who formerly owned slaves. And herein he shows far more sense and manhood than the writer of the above quoted item.

Come to Grief.

The proverb concerning the folly of an effort on the part of a bull to butt a locomotive off a bridge has gone to join its fortunes with that other one which previous to the late election in Louisiana declared that "figures won't lie." A bull recently made a bold stand on a bridge on a Virginia railroad and lifted the locomotive off the track. It crashed through the trestle work, dragging six heavily loaded freight cars down, and severely injuring the engineer. The wreck took fire and burned the cars and bridge.

Vick's Premiums.—At the State Fair Jas. Vick, of Rochester, New York, will offer the following premiums: For the best show of flowers, $40. For the best collection of cut flowers, $20. Second best, $10. Third best, $5. Fourth best, floral chromo. The flowers are not to be made up in bouquets, but exhibited separate and named.

Hayes—Returning Board Hayes—wants to re-organize the "old Whig party." Well let him. The Whig party was never in power more than four years in ten before it died, and after its resurrection it will never be in power. It was never popular in life and its rehabilitated corpse can not be very lively when dressed in the counterfeit garb of Radicalism.

SCIENCE IN PORTLAND.—Dr. Ralph Wilcox, Clerk of the U. S. District and Circuit Courts in Oregon, committed suicide on Wednesday morning by shooting himself through the head. Dr. Wilcox is widely known throughout the State, having for many years held the position of U. S. Commissioner and Clerk of the U. S. District Court at Portland.

L. Cass Carpenter is a fine-haired gentleman whose name should be handed down to posterity as a patriot who only needed to have lived a hundred years ago to have crowded Washington clear out of the hearts of his countrymen. He is collector of internal revenue at Charleston, S. C. but has submitted his resignation, as he says, because he will not be able to live in the State under a Democratic government.

STATE FAIR—SEVENTEENTH YEAR.—We have received the list of premiums to be given to exhibitors at the seventeenth annual exhibition of the Oregon Agricultural Society, which will commence at Salem on the 8th of October next, and continue six days. The premium list has been thoroughly revised and several new classes added. The different transportation companies of the State will carry freight and passengers at half rates, as usual.

EVENING TELEGRAM.—On Monday of this week the Portland Evening Telegram made its first appearance. It introduces itself as follows:

The Evening Telegram enters upon the field of journalism as a candidate for popular favor. Of course its success will depend upon its worthiness. The intention is to make it not only an acceptable newspaper, but one that will be desired and sought after. No subject will be excluded from its columns that possesses any public consequence. Without being fastened to any particular political party, it will seek to be just and truthful in whatever it may have to say in reference to the policies and measures of such organizations. It would be difficult as well as useless to take no note of such matters, where in everyone to some extent is interested. It is the partisan intensity, personalism, bitterness, insincerity and vicious practices in politics that occasion disfavor and aversion. The Telegram will labor for the prevalence of the rule of right and the best management of public business at the least expense. The welfare of our community, the success of all worthy enterprises, and the enlargement of the general prosperity will at all times command its attention, and be a purpose in whatever ability there may be employed in conducting it. Anything further by way of introduction is perhaps unnecessary, as it is to be hoped that each day's issue may commend itself to kindly recognition.

THE ST. LOUIS FIRE.—The recent burning of the Southern Hotel in St. Louis, by which about fifteen lives were lost, seems to have been the result of bad management. J. E. Russell, chief engineer of the hotel tells what he knows about the fire as follows:

He says he left the engine room about 11:30, leaving an assistant in charge, and went to his room on the 5th floor near the baggage elevator. He was aroused about five minutes past 1 o'clock by shrieks of women. He hurried out and found the hall filled with smoke which came from the freight elevator, but saw no fire; started for the south part of the house to descend by the steward's stairway; was obliged to crawl on his hands and knees to prevent suffocation, the smoke was so dense. There was a number of women on the 5th floor crying piteously for help, whom he tried to follow him to the lower floor. So he did, and others were too distracted to, apparently. Finally he reached the dining room floor, passed into the kitchen and descended to the basement. Here he found the smoke very dense, and that the pumps connected with the engine had been in operation, and that some of the employees had been throwing water on the fire, which at the time was blazing furiously in the store room. A nozzle had been blown off before he reached the basement. Another was put on and he then put the pumps at work again, and turned the steam on the fire. This was continued until the fire became so hot and had spread so far that all were obliged to flee for their lives. They made their exit from the basement, under the rear part of the building and emerged on Elm street, conclusively showing that efforts were made to subdue the fire before the guests in the house were aroused, or any attempt made to notify them that the building was burning. It seems pretty certain, at all events, that the hotel was known to be on fire by the employees from twenty minutes to half an hour before the fire department was notified. Russell also states that there was a pile of mattresses in one corner of the store room, a lot of loose hair, and about five feet from them on the floor, a box in which the stock of matches was kept. He thinks the mattresses and matches had a good deal to do with the origin of the fire.

1,000,000 Bottles OF THE CENTAUR LINIMENTS have been sold the last year, and not one complaint has reached us that they have not done all that is claimed for them. Indeed, scientific skill cannot go beyond the result reached in these wonderful preparations. Added to Carbolle, Arnicin, Mentha, Senecol Oil and Witch-Hazel are other ingredients, which makes a family liniment that defies rivalry. Rheumatic and bed-ridden cripples have by it been enabled to throw away their crutches, and many who for years have been afflicted with Neuralgia, Sciatica, Caked Joints, Weak Backs, etc., have found perfect relief.

Mr. Josiah Westlake, of Marysville, Ohio, writes: "For years my Rheumatism has been so bad that I have been unable to stir from the house. I have tried every remedy I could hear of. Finally, I learned of the Centaur Liniment. The first three bottles enabled me to walk without my crutches. I am mending rapidly. I think your liniment simply a marvel."

The Centaur Liniment, Yellow Wrapper, is intended for the tough, fibres, cords and muscles of horses, mules and animals. READ! READ! Rev. Geo. W. Ferris, Manokill, Schoharie county, N. Y., says: "My horse was lame for a year with a fetlock wrench. All remedies utterly failed to cure him and I considered him worthless until I commenced to use Centaur Liniment, which rapidly cured him. I heartily recommend it. It makes very little difference whether the case be 'wrench,' sprain, spavin or lameness of any kind, the effects are the same. The great power of the Liniment is, however, shown in Pull-evil, Big-head, Sweeney, Spavin, Ring-bone, Galls and Scratches. This Liniment is worth millions of dollars to Livestock men. Farmers and those having valuable animals to care for. We warrant its effects, and refer to any farrier who has ever used it."
