THE WILTON TROUPE.—The Wilton Troupe played last Saturday and Monday nights to moderate sized audiences. The play on Monday night was that old favorite, East Lynne. The cast was judiciously distributed, and every part was well acted, and each performer deserves much praise. The child-actress, Little Laura, was excellent, and alone, was fully worth the price of admission. Mr. Wilton informs us he will play at Lane's Hall next Friday and Saturday evenings, when they will play "Leah the Forsaken," and "Cannille." We bespeak for Mr. Wilton, a full house for the troupe deserves it. There will be several accessions to the troupe before their reappearance.

Temperance.

EUGENE CITY, MARCH 2d, 1879.
EDITOR GUARD—I am in trouble, and I come to you for advice. Editors know everything, and it is in their line of business to impart information, hence I come to you for instruction.

Until recently I have been what is called a moderate drinker, that is, I would take from one to half a dozen drinks. I thought this was temperance, and that it was my business, and mine alone, and when the great Dr. Watts, came among us to lecture on temperance, I thought he had better be at home attending to his own business, and let me and others attend to ours, still I thought I would go and hear him and learn what he had to say. I went and listened attentively to all he said, and his facts and figures, enforced by his happy mode of reasoning, assured me that I had all along been in error, and that it was not only his business, but the business of the whole community whether I drank or not. In fact I became convinced that I was at least an inebriated drunkard, and that I was liable at any time to become a common sot. The arguments of the great lecturer were perfectly satisfactory to me, as they and subsequent lectures have been to more than one thousand others. It seemed to me that I could convince the whole world of the crime of drinking intoxicating liquors; accordingly I determined to join the great army of sober men and women, and enroll myself on the side of morality at the next meeting of the club. I consulted with a friend—my resolve was approved with delight. I was advised to prepare myself a little, and at the next meeting when I should give in my adhesion, I would be called upon for a speech, and that I could then electrify the audience and capture at least all my old associates—the moderate drinkers. I liked the suggestion and at once began my preparation.

To know the amount of liquor drunk by the people of the whole country was information of the first importance, and that knowledge could be obtained only through the report of the Commissioner of Internal Revenue. Accordingly I obtained a copy of the report and I found that intoxicating liquors alone pay an internal duty of $60,257,867 58, which is about one fourth of the entire revenue raised by the General Government annually. A fearful showing indeed.

Tobacco, the use of which can be of no possible advantage to any one, and is only second to whisky in its demoralizing effects upon those who use it, and to say the least is a dirty, filthy habit comes in next and presents the fearful figures of $40,091,754.67, making an aggregate of $100,479,622 25 paid into the Treasury from the production and consumption of these two poisons alone—a sum equal to more than one-third of the revenue raised by the government annually now. I had determined to abandon the use of tobacco as well as whisky, and spend the remainder of my days in persuading my fellow man to follow my good example, and I had no doubt of being entirely successful. But the thought occurred to me, if over one-third of our revenue is raised from these two articles, and over sixty millions from whisky alone, would it be just in me to deprive the government of this amount of means by persuading my fellow man to abandon its use and thereby stop its production, which must result in a deficit in the annual revenue of from $60,000,000, to $100,000,000 each year, clearly defeating resumption, and endangering the early payment of the public debt?

Now, sir, I know that I owe a great duty to the community in which I live, but do I not owe a greater duty to the government—the whole people of the United States? Is it not a patriotic duty to assist the government in raising the revenue necessary for its support? Is it patriotic to drink whisky and chew tobacco with that object in view?

Would it be disloyal and unpatriotic in me to stop drinking whisky, chewing and smoking my pipe, and persuade all my neighbors to do the same, and then go from State to State and persuade everybody else in this broad land to follow our example, and thus deprive the government of $100,000,000 annually? I could not plead inability to discharge my duty to the Government in this matter, for I am perfectly able to consume from a pint to a quart of whisky daily, and in warm weather to drink from one to two gallons of beer in the same length of time.
I confess I have some doubts as to what my duty is, and it is to clear away these doubts—to make my duty clear to myself that I come to you for advice.

I want to reform—to stop drinking whisky, chewing and smoking tobacco. Can I do so and be a patriotic citizen? There's the rub.

Letter From the Palouse.

PIKE CREEK, W. T., Feb. 17, 1879.
EDITOR GUARD—We are having a fearful winter. The Fall was remarkable for beautiful weather, but December 6th, it turned very cold, and froze the ground to a depth of 20 inches, with but little snow. On the 8th of January the weather moderated and commenced snowing, and is still snowing. There is full four feet of snow on the ground at this date, and no indications of a thaw. Sheep and cattle are dying by the hundreds. Out of one band of 900 sheep here, 600 have died, and the rest are dying one by one. There is not one foot of bare ground in all this Palouse country, at this time. The only question that interests the people at present is, how long will stock live without food? Our coldest weather was 8 degrees below zero, which lasted about 30 days. This winter has discouraged many immigrants, and I think that you will hear of many of them leaving when winter breaks, but if you see your correspondent you will have to come up here.
Young Vulgamere, late of your county had his feet badly frozen recently, which necessitated the amputation of three of his toes.
Mr. House, late of Mohawk, Lane county, died here on the 14th of February.
The only thing to break the monotony of the winter is the sleighing of the dears.
P. G. LEMLEY.

Our Long Tom Letter.

LONG TOM LANE CO., MARCH 3d, 1879.
EDITOR GUARD—The citizens of this section of Lane county are progressing notwithstanding the inclemency of the weather. Jas. R. Joabs saw mill is running daily (Sunday excepted), assisting the pole cutters in removing the evergreen fir brush, that the good health of the country may be restored.

Considerable improvements have been made in the American Bottom the past year. Two new school houses have been erected which are a credit to the settlers in this vicinity—and school districts formed according to law,—in which they are holding an election to-day, for the election of directors and clerks. One of these buildings is located near Ellmakers—the other is located near the residences of Richard Jones, and Emory Ranches'. At the latter school house there is an organized debating society which makes a display of their oratory once a week, and enlightens the people upon the various subjects agitating the minds of our Representatives in Congress. Last week they discussed the question that has been lingering before Congress the past year—that is, in substance, "Which have the people the greatest right to complain of, the Tariff Excess, direct and indirect tax, or the Assumption Act. The side of the Assumption Act gained the victory, so I presume that subject will not annoy the minds of our National Representatives when they are advised that the question has been settled between the placid blue waters of the Long Tom and Cayotte—and beneath the foliage of the evergreen fir in the far Northwest.

Our people have another flourishing organization at the same place that convenes twice a month, which although early in the season for this latitude, bloom like a rose, in the shape of a Good Templars Lodge; where our much esteemed compeer friend, Thos. Holland, presides over the deliberations of the body with dignity, in the official capacity of Grand Worthy Chief. By the way, Thos. makes a good moderator. Our worthy young friend, Archie M. Richardson, wields the pen with grace, pride and dignity over the secretary's table. Hon. R. B. Hayes is likewise always on hand to take a part, and to see that the machinery is in working order. I tell you now it is a way institution. Byron Ellmaker does the drawing and forging for the concern.

The farmers are late and behind with their plowing and seeding.
Stock is generally poor. If the weather remains stormy much longer, many is the cow that will lose their hide; and many will be the sheep that will surrender its place, and its body become food for the crows.

REGULAR.

"A Widow and Her Child."—A singular instance of superstition came to light not long since, which is thus related: Going into a neighbor's house, one day last week, I found one of the children suffering from a severe cough and expressed my opinion that it was a case in which medical assistance should be obtained. The mother of the boy agreed that it was very bad, but said that before calling in a doctor she intended to try a cure that she had long used in similar cases, and never found to fail. On being pressed to communicate the prescription, she gravely informed me that the charm consisted in Helle's Honey of Horehound and Tar and that it could be obtained at all druggists. Price 60 cents and $1. Great saving by purchasing large size. Depot, Crittenten's, 7 sixth avenue New York City.
