The Carp.

As several gentlemen of this city have taken steps toward the introduction of carp into our streams, the following from a letter of Prof Baird, United States Commissioner of Fish and Fisheries may prove of interest to our readers:

"A portion of this year's appropriation is to be devoted to the introduction of the European carp, a species of fish eminently calculated for the warmer waters of this country, especially in the mill ponds and sluggish rivers and ditches of the south. This fish, often reaches a weight of six or seven and sometimes high as eight pounds. Its length varies from six inches to two and a half feet. The upper portion of the body is a golden olive brown, and the abdomen is a whitish yellow. Its flesh is excellent eating; and as game the fish is but little inferior to the trout. It inhabits the fresh water lakes and streams of central and southern Europe, whence it has been spread by man over the northern portion. It prefers quiet waters with soft and muddy bottoms, and spawns in May or June according to locality. The food consists of larvae of aquatic insects, worms, and soft plants, though the fish will eat almost any vegetable food in artificial ponds.

The carp is probably the most cunning of all fishes, though it can be easily tamed. It seems to learn the danger of hooks and baits, after a few of its fellows have been captured. Even the net, which is so effective with most fish, is often useless against the ready wiles of the carp, which will sometimes bury itself in the mud as the ground line approaches, so as to allow the net to pass over it; or it will maneuver, it will shoot boldly from the bottom, leap over the upper edge of the net, and to escape into the water beyond. The fish has also the peculiarity of living to a great age and it is said that carp exists in French ponds over a century old. It is tenacious of life, even when food fails and when removed from the water, and it carefully packed in wet moss so as to allow a free circulation of air, it will survive for weeks. Prof. Baird anticipates no difficulty in domesticating this valuable fish in America, since it can be multiplied at very little expense even in restricted ponds.

Merely Artificial.

N. Y. Herald. Crowds of visitors are calling daily at Bellevue hospital to see Thomas Coulter, the patient who is now the possessor of a nose which was but recently his middle finger. About three weeks ago the plaster of Paris bandage was removed from his face and a careful examination showed that the finger had grown fast to the former nose. Dr Sabine at once decided to sever the hand from the two joints which were thereafter to serve as a nose. During the two months in which the finger had grown to the face the blood had retreated from the arm and hand because of their peculiar position, leaving them as white as snow. Shortly after the operation the tube through which Tommy breathed was removed from its position in the larynx.

The patient is at present in a peculiar position. In order to have a shapely nasal organ the second joint of the amputated finger was crooked so that the elbow forms the tip of the nose. The end of the finger was stitched to the upper lip in a neat manner. The next step in the process was to remove pieces of skin from the cheeks and forehead and allow them to grow on the lacerated and stitched portions of the new nose. The consequence is that there are now no nostrils at present, and Tommy breathes through his mouth and ears. In order to avoid this inconvenient mode of exhaling an operation is shortly to be performed with a view to providing the new organ with nostrils. Coulter's articulation is good but his voice sounds as though he were speaking through a ram's horn. The surgeons in charge of the case are confident that they will be able to remove this impediment very easily.

TOADS A GARDENER'S FRIEND.—In Europe toads are carried to market and sold to the horticulturists, who, by their valuable service, are able to hold in check the multiplication of those insect tribes that prey upon their fruits and flowers. All that is necessary to secure their co-operation is to provide them with a cool and safe retreat by day with a convenient access to water, and they will go forth to the performance of their eternal duties, and guard and protect.

Gen J W Sprague will build a summer residence at Spokan Falls.

STATE NEWS.

Coyotes have recently killed sheep in the vicinity of Monroe. Astoria Engine Company is now out of debt, and in a most prosperous condition. Max Friendly has purchased Sol Kings interest in a steam saw mill at Corvallis.

Smith and Buffington, who were arrested at North Yamhill last week on a charge of robbing a livery stable have been completely exonerated. The good weather of the past few days has set the farmers of Polk county to work and it is expected that a large acreage of spring wheat will be sown.

A little child of Mr Deshields living in the Spokane country, fell into a tub of hot water a few days ago and was so severely scalded that death resulted. Mr Joseph Hume has purchased a site for a cannery near Astoria, below the large cannery. He expects to have a new cannery ready for business this season on the sites selected, 100 feet front to the deep water.

While Mr Videte and family were crossing Alsea river on a load of hay last week, his wife with a baby in her arms, were thrown off into the water and the little one drowned. Mrs Videte was rescued with great difficulty. From Eola: All the grain has been shipped from this place except about 500 bushels of wheat and 200 bushels of oats. Our roads are in sore disorder and in the need of repairing, as they wear and tear during the winter has been more than they could endure.

Gao Smith, one of the men working at the Corvallis saw mill, was seriously injured a day or two since by getting one of his feet badly mangled, and Harry Couchman, engineer at the same mill, fell down the stairs in the mill and nearly broke his back.

A Hillsboro correspondent writes: One of the finest lectures that has ever been the privilege of the people of Hillsboro and vicinity to listen to, was delivered by F A Bailey, last night on the subject of "Man." The M E Church was filled to overflowing and it has been estimated that fully 800 people were present. Yamhill Reporter: We had a lively day of it last Monday. Hon. J J Henderson made a call a day or so before for a lot of horses for the "Cellular" railroad in Eastern Oregon, and the effect was almost magical. Nearly all the afternoon of Monday, we could see them coming in singly, in pairs and in squads—some of them good, some not so good, and still others not quite so good as the later. Mr Henderson purchased 55 head of horses here, averaging 1130 pounds each, for which he paid an average of $143 a head.

The Corn Crop in the West.

Let us get the testimony of these men. "Hello, old fellow, how's your corn?" "Bully." "How much will it yield?" "Dampfino; had six pens last year and fattened ten piles of hogs. Got twelve piles in the fence corners for this crop." [Note—A pile of hogs averages from ten to fifteen head, according to size.] "A Hundred miles further west." "How is your corn?" "Stalks a little short, ears rather brief at one end, cobs unusually small, grain exceedingly nutritious. Eight rowed corn does fine here." "How much will it yield?" "Can't tell exactly; got two spring wagon loads on a single acre." "Three hundred miles." "Hello, old fellow, how's your corn?" "Pard, she's not copious, I struck out early this morning, with two days ration of grub and dam's couldn't eat an antelope blood raw. I'm left pard net a nubbin in my haversack—but do you see that sunset? Ain't she scrumptious? This is the country for corn, I tell ye,—no weeds no out-worms, no murrain, no poll evil, no scab, no foot rot, no bone spavin, no fistula, no colic, no hog cholera, no chickenpox, no measles, no chills, no titt-r worms, no hay fever, no book peddlers, no sewing machine agents no mother-in-law, no nothing, no nothing, nowhere Buck Horn Bill over yonder in Bust Head Hollow, had out a patch and he'd nussed it along and blowed powerful on it but him and me fell out one Sunday, and I im-majinitly cut off his water and left his corn as dry as a contribution box, and dam's bleave he's got his seed. Two rowed is the boss corn here, Pard, do you see that sunset asman-in' of these mountains in all their gorgeosity?"

Cold Law.

Yesterday afternoon a young man named John Wilson brought suit in Justice Cary's court for wages which were due him by his employer, Richard Smallman. The amount sued for was $35, and as Wilson was well liked the courtroom was crowded with friends who were more than anxious that he should win the suit, as they believed that Smallman had tried to swindle him. The case was progressing quite favorably for the plaintiff, when the defendant's attorney, in cross examination, asked: "How old are you?" "Will be twenty-one in April next" said the plaintiff.

The defense moved a nonsuit on the grounds that the plaintiff was a minor. "Is it possible that you are not of age?" asked the court surveying the young man through his spectacles. "Gee-a I ain't," was the reply. The case is dismissed, a minor can't sue or be sued."

All hands rose and crowded towards the door, the plaintiff among the rest. "Hold on," shouted the court "you have twenty six dollars cost to pay in this case."

"Guess you'll have to wait till till April, Judge, and then bring suit."

A roar went up from the spectators and the boy kept on with the air of one who had the cold law on his side. The court scratched his head a few moments and remarked that he guessed the young man's interpretation of the statute was correct.—Carson Appeal

Beecher on Grant.

N. Y. Sun. "It takes a man four years to learn how to be President," says the Rev. Henry Ward Beecher. Grant did not learn it in four years, nor in eight years. He never would learn how to be President. The enormous corruption of the administration increased and multiplied during his second term. He was surrounded in the end by bad men as he was in the beginning. And when he returned from his long absence, prominent in the company that welcomed him back were some of the most notorious of the plunderers known to have defrauded the Government while he was in office.

Gen. Grant, if again elevated to the White House, instead of showing the advantages of experience, would only manifest an increased contempt for the usages of the Government and for the will of the people. The Executive Mansion and all the Departments of the Government would swarm with public robbers. Washington, Jefferson, Madison, the Adamses and Jackson did not require four years to learn how to be good Presidents; and we hope and expect to see the opponents of a third term nominate a candidate who will not require four years to learn how to be a good President.

Curious Law Case.

There is a famous case on the books of a Norman hotel-keeper and the customer who ordered a six egg omelette prepared, but he went away in a hurry without paying for it, and when he returned fifteen years later offered the landlord six francs, being for the original cost of the eggs and the interest thereon, compounded. The landlord claimed a fabulous sum, alleging that the six eggs would have produced so many chicks, from which would have issued so many hens; that with the product of these innumerable fowls he would have bought, which in so many years would yielded so much money, which being invested, etc. The court, however, nonsuited the landlord because the eggs had been broken for the omelette, and so could not have been hatched.

BUTTER THIRTY-FOUR YEARS OLD.—It is just thirty-four years since a large crock of butter was suspended by a rope into the well on the farm of Abraham S. Mylin, of Willow street. This old custom was a good one for keeping the butter fresh, but this particular lot was destined to never be eaten, for the rope broke, and for thirty four years it has rested securely in the bottom of the well. One day last week the well was cleaned and the butter again brought to light. It was found to be as white as snow and hard as adamant. It will not be eaten, but will be kept as a relic, and it certainly is one of the most peculiar cases in existence.—Exchange.

Denn Blanchard, of Ranier has contracted for a new tug boat to take the place of the Jane West (not related to the Wide West). The new boat will be fast and a beauty.
