Then the fish are full and rest quietly until ding of a Southern Oregon agricultur- from Newcastle to Seattle in one week morning. I find that cranes sometimes al fair. destroy the fish. Imagine a crane standing on the margin of a carp pond asleep with one eye open and the fish, when they have not been fed in the evening, must go out foraging on the banks for food. The crane slyly watches his opportunity, and as the carp Monmouth. comes along down goes the head of the crane and up goes the fish-fifty cents worth of pisciculture is taken in at ev-ery swallow. If you feed in the evening this destruction is avoided. Besides this, if the fish are fed in the morning, they are sluggish the rest of er girl's hand morning, they are sluggish the rest of er girl's hand. the day, and you scarcely get an opportunity to see them. The carp is a vegetarian, and may be succesfully raised anywhere that frogs prosper. They do not eat flesh of any kind. Their favorite food is boiled cabbage, though they eat lettuce, peas, potatoes and beans snow storm about the middle of this for taxes. As no bidders apeared the fatten them quicker than anything else.

Carp have one peculiar habit that I have not observed in other fish. In winter they "hole up" or kettle up. From one hundred to five hundred put their heads together and in this position sway to an fro until they burrow themselves in the mud. In this condition they lie all winter, and in cut off all but the thumb. Spring, when they come out near the spawning season, seem to be very hungry, and it is necessary to keep them quiet that they should be well fed until the eggs and slashing is being done on almost every farm.

A little boy named Collins had the are all hatched. The impression that they spawn two or three times is not correct, at least I do not think they do, and I will give my reason for my opinion at some future time. Carp ponds do not need to be very deep. There should be one deep place for is also necessary that the water should the mud and the other shot by a duck borhood of thirty thousand tons of last be backed over the top soil as they like hunter. to feed in the submerged vegetation.
