Warden Fox reminded the prisoner that all convicts are required to do some kind of work, and offered him his choice of occupation in the Penitentiary. Cowley chose the shoe for the scene of his labors. There are two barbers' chairs in the receiving room. Into one of these Mr.

Cowley climbed and a convict cut his long, grizzly hair close to his head, and shaved his long and well combed, clerically-trimmed beard snd whiskers. There are three bath-tubs in the room, Mr Cowley stripped and sat in the one that was filled with lukewarm water. The clothing he took off was bundled up, and put in one of the thousand boxes that are kept for that purpose. When he emerged trom the bath the
