

CITY AND COUNTY.

BRIEF MENTION.

This week has been a busy one for the University students.

The highest price paid in CASH for Hides, Furs, Deer Skins and Chickens, at the store of S. Rosenblatt & Co.

For a safe and careful lawyer we would recommend Judge Walton. Go and see him if you want advice.

Most of the University students from a distance have left for their homes. We understand that nearly all of them will return next year.

Among the visitors present at the commencement exercises we noticed Gov. Thayer and wife, Judge Strahn, Judge Boise, E. P. McCormack and Mrs. W. H. Odell.

Business men should not forget that blank notes, bill-heads, statements, letter-heads, and every description of commercial printing are neatly and promptly executed at the GUARD office.

Sportsmen's Club.

At a meeting Tuesday evening last the following committee was appointed to arrange for the third and final shooting match between the Eugene Club and Creswell Club: J. B. Underwood, E. J. McClanahan, H. C. Humphrey, H. N. Craun and Jos. Neihoff.

It was resolved that after shooting the two clubs should have a picnic basket dinner on the grounds and a short address by Hon. C. W. Fitch. Grounds selected on west side Springfield bridge.

After dinner a prize shooting match at glass balls will be had free to all. Fifty cents entrance.

J. E. Stevens was selected captain of the Eugene team. Good music will be in attendance. Shooting will commence at 10 A. M., Saturday the 26th. The Creswell Club will be in attendance, and a good July time may be expected. A general invitation is extended to all. Bring your baskets well filled. Committee on glass ball shooting: Jap Stevens, Frank Belschaw and Henry Hudsonston. Prizes will be announced on the grounds.

Mrs. D. F. Smith.

It is seldom our people have had the pleasure of so chaste and elegant an entertainment as was given by this lady last Wednesday evening. We would fail in our effort if we should attempt to offer a compliment. The correspondence in another column will show the judgment of our people. The letter to Mrs. Smith was signed by every person in town who had an opportunity of doing so, but lack of space prevents us publishing the full list of names. We bespeak for her a full house this evening.

SHOOTING MATCH.—Last Saturday the Eugene and Creswell Clubs held their 2d shooting match at Creswell. In the glass ball match the Eugene club proved not inferior by a score of 41 to 32. This settles the glass ball shooting as the Eugene club has won two straight matches. The Eugene team also won the rifle match by a score of 187 to 174. This makes a tie between the two teams on rifle shooting, and they will next Saturday decide the contest, near the Springfield bridge.

CROSSED THE MOUNTAINS.—Mr Geo. Milliken came across the mountains by the McKenzie route, one day last week, bringing several head of horses with him. He reports the snow about ten feet deep on the summit, but it has a hard crust on, and he experienced but little difficulty in making the trip. We understand that parties have also crossed over the Middle Fork route with horses.

SOCIAL REUNION.—The reunion of the Laurean and Estaxian Literary Societies of the University, last Monday evening, was a very enjoyable affair.

Commencement.

Wednesday's Exercises.

The third commencement exercises of the University of Oregon was ushered in on Wednesday last by an able and eloquent address before the University societies by Rev. C. J. Burchard, President of the McMinnville College, his subject being "Force of Character." His address was characterized throughout by strength and force of thought and delivered in a very able manner.

In the afternoon the graduating class of 1880 planted their class tree. The exercises consisting of an excellent poem written by Mr. A. T. Hawley, (the poem will be found elsewhere in this paper—Ed.), and rendered in an admirable manner by the accomplished elocutionist, Mrs. D. F. Smith, and also a very appropriate address for the occasion by Prof. Coudon. The class tree was a Sequoia Gigantea, one of the species known as the Big Trees of Calaveras. After the exercises of planting the class tree, the audience adjourned to the University auditorium for the purpose of listening to the first annual exercises of the ALUMNI ASSOCIATION.

The exercises of the association were opened by a greeting song by Messrs Stowell, Woody, Gilbert and Stowell, Mrs. A. W. Stowell presiding at the piano, which was rendered in the admirable style so characteristic of those gentlemen. The Alumni are to be congratulated on their splendid selection of musicians for the occasion. The class of 1880 was then introduced by R. S. Bean, president, and the address of welcome delivered by J. C. Whiteaker. We have no space to notice the address in full as nothing but the publication of it entire could do justice, but suffice it to say that seldom has a more eloquent or finished address been delivered on such an occasion and we only regret that we have no space to publish it in full.

The principal address was delivered by Geo. S. Washburne, of the class of 1878, and was profound, showing the greatest care in its preparation, and during the entire time of its delivery, the audience was held spell bound, each fearful lest they should lose some word or thought of the speaker.

The rendition of an instrumental piece on the piano by Mrs. A. W. Stowell was exquisite and well received by the audience.

The essay of Miss Julia Adams as read by R. S. Bean, was a very finished production and it was unquestionably one of the best of the evening. Miss Adams in its preparation displayed a great deal of originality and her closing appeal for women was forcible and pointed and certainly met with a hearty response in the minds of every one present.

M. S. Wallis completely outdone himself in the Annual. Keeping the audience convulsed with laughter as he caused each member of the association to pass in review before him, especially was this so, when he recommended the many virtues of himself, giving as a reason why the class of 1878 should be considered the first class, because he was a member, and telling the audience that so perfect was he in every virtue, that even the good mothers of the town in rearing their children, hold him up as a standard by which they should be guided.

The exercises closed with a song by the choir entitled, "Farewell, thou lovely Forest Glade." We think that the association may well be proud of their first annual reunion for it was a complete success in every respect.

Thursday's Exercises.

The chapel of the University presented a charming appearance on Thursday the last day of the ceremonies set apart exclusively for the graduating class. Graceful festoons of evergreens were draped over both entrances. Magnificent vases of lilies, roses, and other flowers, were disposed along the aisle, and to crown all, an intelligent, appreciative and sympathizing audience filled every nook and corner of the spacious hall. At 10 A. M., President Johnson introduced Rev. A. P. Anderson, who delivered a brief and appropriate invocation to the Throne of Grace. After music by the string band Mr. John W. Bean delivered an oration having for its theme, "Representative Men." Mr. Bean displayed great familiarity with the best and noblest examples of his class, and deduced from a comprehensive survey of the subject the lesson that the history of such men furnishes examples to be imitated just in proportion as their lives have tended to the public good, and shunned when the contrary is shown. Ease and elegance of delivery marked Mr. Bean's effort, and gave promise of future excellence.

Mr. Whitney L. Boise was introduced and discoursed on "Wrecks." Dealing at first with the material world, earth, ocean, air, he drew vivid pictures of the wrecks of matter. Then passing to the contemplation of the human soul, "the saddest sight," he said, "is a man who has become a wreck." We have no space to reproduce even an outline of his remarks. Couched in vigorous language they reflected great credit upon the use which he has evidently made of his advantages.

Miss Ione J. Cranfill read a well written essay upon "Influence of Imagination on the Character." Miss Cranfill's effort contained much that was graceful, intelligent, and refined, and was delivered in a charming style. Like her classmates who had preceded her, she was the recipient of many floral tributes, among which was a noticeably beautiful silver and epergne. And here let us say that throughout the entire ceremonies the well pleased audience seemed to vie with each other in manifesting their appreciation of the young ladies and gentlemen who compose the graduating class of 1880.

Mr. Charles F. Clarke chose for his theme, "The Ideal and the Real." Mr. Clarke has a noble presence, a finely modulated voice, and posesses in a marked degree the elements of the orator. We shall not attempt to give a synopsis of his remarks.

Mr. Oren C. Aubrey played "Home Sweet Home," on the piano forte, with great precision and delicacy of touch.

Mr. Alfred Coolidge chose "The Reunion" for his theme. His oration was an eloquent picture of the restoration of friendly relations between the North and South and a passionate appeal for the completion of the work of fraternalization.

Mr. Edward P. Geary's theme will be suggested by the title of his oration, "Westward." In diction and delivery it was one of the successes of the day, and elicited many flattering encomiums.

Miss Agnes M. McCormack read an essay on the "Conservation of Waste." It was thoughtful and scholarly, and delivered in an exceedingly graceful manner. The young lady received a perfect floral ovation.

Mr. Charles K. Hale took the opening sentences of the "Declaration of Independence" as a theme and discoursed eloquently upon the beauties and blessings of our system of Government.

Mr. Jacob F. Hill chose "The Day and Night of Time" as his topic. His address was replete with fine thoughts.

Mr. Adolphus F. McClaine discoursed upon "Foundations." His address was received with marked attention and received many merited encomiums.

Miss Nettie McCormack read an essay entitled "The Golden Mean," bringing the morning exercises to a close in a manner highly gratifying to the audience and more than creditable to herself. Excellent jokes were in terms of high praise of Miss McCormack's effort. During the morning the string band discoursed some fine music and at the close of the exercises the Eugene City Brass Band in full uniform added greatly to the pleasure of the occasion by some fine selections.

THE CLOSING HOUR.

At 3 P. M., the Chapel Hall presented a beautiful appearance filled as it was to overflowing with the good people of Lane county and other parts of Oregon. Countless bouquets held in reserve for the young ladies and gentlemen who were to speak the parting words lent a parting like appearance to the spacious hall. Modest, but elegant attires and happy cheerful faces added greatly to the charm. The City Band played an inspiring air and President Johnson introduced Mr. George Nolan, who delivered an oration on "The Desire of Power." Mr. Nolan's effort was replete with picturesque imagery and fine thoughts. He drew vivid contrasting pictures; on the one hand a Napoleon aspiring to universal dominion with no higher aim than the satisfaction of a pernicious ambition, on the other the benefactor of his race aspiring to power as a means to benefit his race.

Mr. Owen Osburn clearly showed the drift of his mind and the direction of his ambitions in a well considered address on the subject of "Free Trade." We shall hear of this young gentleman as a leading politician some of these fine days. He is a fair speaker and will make a "worker" in committee rooms.

Mr. William H. McDaniel spoke upon "Labor and its Compensation." The address was compact, thoughtful and scholarly, replete with good, so in sense and we regret we cannot give it entire. He scouted at the idea that in this country there is nothing to do and plenty of time to do it in. As for the howls about capital and its exactions which fill the air and rattle the ear, he was disposed, and rightly so, to consider them unavailing. The key note of his excellent discourse which of itself was a splendid encomium upon the spirit which he has caught from his Alma Mater may be summed up in his intimation to the chronic growlers: "If you have met with reverses, go somewhere and do something to earn a honest living and the so called troubles of the day will be at an end." Mr. McDaniel gave utterance to the "frozen truth." We commend and congratulate him.

Miss Manerva Starr, as did indeed all five of "the sweet girl graduates," looked radiant in her white robes and although suffering from severe indisposition radiated a charming essay upon the theme, "Our Ship that sails to Day." Fine in diction and elevated and refined in sentiment Miss Starr's essay was among the pleasantest features of the ceremonies.

Mrs. W. H. Abrams favored the audience with a finely executed rendition of the "Mocking Bird," giving as an appropriate prelude a few bars of Aunt Lang Syne.

Mr. Laban H. Wheeler chose "Civil Progress" as his theme. His views of the subject revealed a strong tendency to a desire, if not a belief in the coming of a time when the battleflags

"shall be furled in the parliament of nations, the federation of the world."

Let us hope that his most sanguine desires may be realized.

Mr. Clifton A. Waa took "Behind the Scenes" as a subject. His discourse was among the best of the day. Before the footlights, in the full glare of day, in the artificial sham and shows of fine society are seen only the qualities of the man and the woman. In the quiet walks of life, by the couch of suffering in the signal tokens of misfortune we see things as they are. Not wealth, not rank, but the performance of duty stamps and makes the truly great soul.

Miss Eva S. Rice discoursed of "Self Help." Her effort was an admirable one delivered with much grace, dignity and self possession and full of useful suggestions. "There are," said she, "many persons who are always looking to all sorts of reformatory measures for their own relief instead of relying upon self help. They do not realize that no earthly person can help those, who do not help themselves." In Miss Rice's admirable address is furnished fresh evidence of the admirable spirit which, under the present management of the Oregon State University, will inspire the men and women, who will be sent out into the world from its pleasant portals. In these later days of habit and drivel the influence for good which teachings, such as were reflected in Miss Rice's address, exert, is not, or at least, ought not to be counted against dollars and cents.

Mr. Abraham S. Rosenthal chose the historic utterance of Galileo for a theme. He acquitted himself admirably. His address was philosophic, earnest and able and throughout gave ample evidence of a high ambition not to let the close of the speaker's college days be "the be all and end all" of his career.

Miss Mae Underwood then discoursed some most exquisite music upon the piano forte when the President introduced the valedictorian Mr. Thos. C. Powell. We regret that lack of space and time precludes the possibility of giving this fine effort entire this week. We are promised it for our next issue. Suffice it to say that it furnished indisputable evidence that the President, the Faculty and the Regents of the University have, by their wise administration, their paternal care and their earnest, honest efforts endeared them all as the pupils and discharged their duty, which is the highest encomium which could be passed upon them. The theme of Mr. Powell's oration was the "Spirit of the Age." It was well handled and gave promise of future honors in the world for the young gentlemen.

We have given a few words to each of the graduating class of 1880. The best evidence which they could furnish of assiduity in study, of opportunities improved, of duty faithfully performed would be the publication in book form of their farewell addresses. They are far above the average. The best evidence which they can give in the future of the value of the instructions they have received, of the labor they have performed will be to conform their lives to these teachings and labor hereafter as they have in the past. They have the reputation of their Alma Mater in their keeping. We do not believe they will ever let it suffer.

The President at the close conferred the degree of Bachelor of Arts upon Mr. Thomas C. Powell and of Bachelor of Science upon each one of the other members of the class.

The Band played and the exercises closed. The Graduating Class of the University of Oregon for 1880 were surrounded by their friends and congratulated with fervor. Joy went with them. May their lives be as pleasant as were the last days of the scholastic year. They seemed like brides of the earth and sky. The beautiful amphitheatre which the University grounds overlooks, never looked lovelier, never seemed more like the Vale of Tempe. If now and then

"A passing cloud obscured the sky." It only served to vary and intensify the beauty of the almost matchless panorama. The halls of the University were silent. Upon the wall of one of the class rooms some graduate remembering a line of his Latin had written,

"Vale, longum vale."

We tell him that drawn by an irresistible spell wherever his feet may wander "Rediit post longum intervallo"

And whether he does or not, in his heart of hearts as he turned from the friendly shelter of the walls which have been his scholastic home, so long, we know that a voice, unheard save in the secret chambers of his soul, was whispering: "Foran et ole olim meminisse juvabit."

Cottage Grove Items.

A correspondent at Cottage Grove sends the following items under date of June 10, 1880:

Workmen still busy on the road. Weather pleasant and business quiet.

The flag for the Fourth of July grounds has arrived, and is a beauty in every particular.

Up to the present time of writing no arrests have been made by our police. Something strange; don't it!

Quite a number of young folks left town yesterday to attend the commencement exercises at the University.

We were again treated to an entertainment in the hotel by a minstrel. The same was much enjoyed by all present.

The Oriental meat market, Messrs Wharton & Beidler, props., has been fixed up and now presents a handsome appearance.

A small fire was discovered last Sunday morning in the kitchen of the hotel. A few buckets of water extinguished the flames.

The following gentlemen constitute the delegation to the Grand Lodge of Good Templars, which meets in Albany this week: Samuel Veatch, Wm. Cathcart and Harry Halciton.

A new bridge will be constructed across the Mill creek, the lumber being already on the grounds. The same will be 25 feet wide with a foot-bridge on the side, and will greatly improve the southern part of our growing city.

Geo. Shields of this place, was badly hurt one evening this week by the discharge of a gun, (consisting of paper and powder) the contents striking him in his hip. He was among a party of gentlemen who intended giving an entertainment in the school house, about three miles from town. From last accounts he is getting along nicely.

Dr. J. C. Gray's dental rooms are now ornamented with a sign. The Doctor is in for anything that will tend to improve our fast growing city. Dr.
