Testimonial.
Independence, Oregon, December 13, 1879.
Both myself and wife have been for some years afflicted with disease of the Kidneys, and had tried many remedies without obtaining any permanent relief. About three months ago we were induced to try a package apparently entirely cured both of us, as since taking it two weeks we have felt no symptoms of the disease. We can heartily recommend it to others similarly afflicted, as we believe it will do all that is claimed for it.
M. L. WHITE.
Astoria, Oregon, December 28, 1879.
I take great pleasure in testifying to the fact that for the past three years I have been suffering from Kidney troubles, and during the time have tried nearly every kind of kidney medicine in the market, almost without any relief. Having heard that the Oregon Kidney Tea possessed wonderful properties, I purchased a package and from the first dose obtained relief, and by the use of the one package feel completely cured.

General Hancock and Mrs. Surratt.

The Republican papers, in attempting to make political capital against General Hancock because he obeyed an order which condemned a poor woman to death, are making themselves appear very ridiculous in the eyes of all thinking people. There was not one of these scribblers who did not demand the execution of Mrs. Surratt. They stood ready to crucify any man who opposed her execution. The people remember this fact. The Catholic Sentinel, of Portland, edited by a man whose "Republicanism is unquestioned," has the following on this subject:

"The Sentinel loves fair play in politics as well as religion, and for this reason we regret to see a portion of the Republican partisan press endeavoring to create antipathy among Catholics to General Hancock on the false charge that he was cruel and unchristian in his conduct to the unfortunate Mrs. Surratt whilst she was under his charge ere she was wrongfully hanged.

The more this matter is ventilated the better it is for the brave soldier who only carried out the orders of his superiors, and it is both unjust and dishonorable to endeavor to tarnish the fame of a brave man merely because he represents a political party whose principles are not in accord with every penny-allyer who may be hired to traduce him.

Gen. Hancock had nothing whatever to do with the trial or the unjust sentence passed upon Mrs. Surratt, but as a military officer it was his bounden duty to see the sentence carried out irrespective entirely of his private convictions. Not to do so would have caused him to have been court martialed and to be dismissed from the service in deserved disgrace. But that Gen. Hancock done all his power to ameliorate the unfortunate condition of Mrs. Surratt is a fact capable of irrefutable proof. Bishop Keane, of Richmond, Father Walter of St. Patrick Church, Washington and many other priests who are familiar with the case all attest that Gen. Hancock carried out his instructions, and that the priests who attended Mrs. Surratt had every facility afforded them for the exercise of their sacred office in their ministrations for the unfortunate prisoner. The latter fact is established by the voluntary evidence of the priests themselves, whilst the sentiment expressed by Gen. Hancock himself on that lamentable occasion fully demonstrates his Christian charity towards the condemned woman: "I am carrying out the death sentence," said Gen. Hancock, "and it is the most painful act of my life. I would rather take my chances on the battle field, but I am a soldier and must obey orders."

In this view of the case we hope the Republican press which is interesting itself so singularly in trying to persuade Catholics that Gen. Hancock acted tyrannically toward Mrs. Surratt will save their sympathy for their Catholic brethren as it is wasted on the winds which political questions generally raise but which are quickly subsided as soon as the truth becomes apparent. If Gen. Hancock is not guilty of any other crime than this false charge, then, indeed, is his character spotless!

Loving a whole Family.

"I don't want to make any trouble but there is one man in this city who ought to be gibbeted!" began a blunt woman of forty five as she stood before the officials of the twentieth Street Station a day or two ago.

When they inquired for particulars she handed out a letter and said: "Observe the envelope. That letter is addressed to me. You will see that the letter calls me his jessamine, and he wants me to set an early day for the wedding."

When the captain had finished the letter she was ready with another, adding: "And this addressed to my daughter Lucretia. You will see that he calls her his rosy angel, and he says he can't live if she doesn't marry him. It's the same man."

"So it was, and his letter was as tender as spring chicken. That finished she handed out a third, with the remark:

"This is directed to my daughter Helen. It's the very same man, and in it he calls her his pansy and he says he dreams of her."

"Why, he seemed to love the whole family," remarked the captain.

"That's just it. I'm a widow with two daughters, and he was courting us all at once and engaged to the three of us at the same time. Oh! what wretches there are in this world."

"Yes, indeed. It's lucky you found him out."

"Yes, it is. If I hadn't he might have married the whole caboodle of us. If Lucretia hadn't opened one of my letters, and if I hadn't searched the girls' pockets while they were asleep, we'd have thought him an innocent lamb."

"And do you want him arrested?"

"No I guess not, but I want this matter to go into the papers as a warning to other women. Just think of his sitting up with me Saturday night, Lucretia on Wednesday night and Helen on Friday night, and calling each of us his climbing rose! Oh! sir, the women ought to know what a deceiving animal man is."

"Yes, he is pretty tough."

"It has learned me a lesson," she said as she was ready to go. "The next man that comes sparking around my house has got to come right out and say which he's after. If it's the girls I won't say nothing, and if it's me it won't do 'em a bit of good to slam things around and twit me of burying two husbands."—Detroit Free Press.

EMIGRATION FROM CANADA.—It is a curious fact that, while some English statesmen are trying to persuade their countrymen to make or mend their fortunes by emigrating to Canada, and the Canadian papers are warmly echoing the cry, quite a considerable portion of the Canadian population manifests its dissatisfaction with its environments by moving across the border. A Canadian journal, the Sarnia Observer of June 23d, remarks: The startling fact that nearly 60,000 Canadians entered the United States at the single port of Port Huron during the past eight months is found in the official returns of the Collector of that port: We have taken the trouble to inquire into the accuracy of the return, and find that it includes only those who went into the country as actual settlers, no account being taken of those who were merely passing through en route to Manitoba or the Northwest. This frank report of the actual condition of affairs is in entertaining contrast with the brilliant picture which Lord Beaconsfield painted a year or so ago, in which a vast body of American citizens were represented as abandoning possessions in the United States and seeking the rich grain fields of Canada. His Lordship got things a little mixed.

As ordinary observer of telegraph dispatches will not fail to notice the partiality displayed in political reports. The bulk of the dispatches is against Democratic interests. Reports are falsified, altered or suppressed, and many times they are manufactured. We are compelled to wait for Eastern exchanges.—Clackamas Democrat.

Seven Statements by Mr. Tilden.

New York Herald.
Ex-Gov. Samuel J. Tilden, riding from Yonkers to New York yesterday afternoon said to a Herald reporter, to whom he was speaking about politics: "I never was ambitious for the Presidency. I did not care for the nomination when it was given me in St. Louis. At that time I offered it to another man. "Who was that man?" "Mr. Seymour."

"Did you not seek the nomination made at the hands of the Cincinnati Convention which has just nominated Hancock?" "No, I did not seek it."

"The letter of declination that you wrote to the New York Delegation, Governor, has received various interpretations on all sides. I am to infer from what you say that a belief much entertained in some circles that it had a double meaning has no foundation?" "If it has been construed to mean anything else than what is set forth in the words in which it is written the Press is to blame. My friends in the Convention knew perfectly well that it meant just what it set forth. The New York Delegation were advised of it. The last thing Mr. Daniel Manning, the Chairman of the Delegation, did before he left for Cincinnati was to call on me and receive the verbal indorsement of what it contained."

"Do you approve of the choice made by the Convention?" "I approve of it entirely and without reserve."

To put the question more directly then, Governor, was Hancock the man you favored for the nomination?" "Yes, he was."

"Do you think the ticket will be elected in November?" "The Democrats, in my judgment, ment, will probably win. The ticket has every reasonable prospect of success."

"Will you devote any time or labor to advancing the interests of the Democratic campaign this summer?" "I hardly know how to answer that question. I will certainly give support to the ticket. I will give it my cordial support."

Had a Sure Thing.

Some men are too stingy to live, that's a fact, and it is almost indisputable that the generosity of such men is always in inverse ratio to the amount of their wealth. In Portland, Oregon, the other day an old clothes dealer found $4,000 in greenbacks in the lining of a coat handed him by mistake in place of an old one he had just purchased from a miserly capitalist.

The next day the dealer returned and stated the facts. Instead of handing the conscientious man at least a fourth of the money, what did the old skindint do! He gave him instead the princely reward of $2 50 in short weight quarters.

When the honest old clothes man got around the corner he said to himself, softly, "Magnificent idea, that of returning him counterfeit notes for the amount. 'Twill just give me time to get out of the state." And he went serenely off to buy a steamer ticket with the $2 50. Thus virtue is its own reward.—S. F. Post.

When Hancock is President.

The Philadelphia Times, sagaciously accepting Hancock's election as a foregone conclusion is kind enough to nominate the following gentlemen for positions in his Cabinet:

Secretary of State—Thomas F. Bayard, of Delaware.

Secretary of the Treasury—S. J. Tilden of New York.

Attorney-General—Allen G. Thurman of Ohio.

Secretary of the Interior—Thomas A. Hendricks of Indiana.

Postmaster General—W. R. Morrison of Illinois.

Secretary of War—S. J. Randall of Pennsylvania.

Secretary of the Navy—J. E. English of Connecticut.

Uncle Ed. Delashmutt, of Dallas, had a mare lost or stolen from a pasture near the Fair Grounds while attending the State Fair.
