Larrabee Speaks.

A full house gathered at the Court House, Tuesday evening, to listen to the remarks of Col. Chas. H. Larrabee upon the political issues of the day. The Col. confined himself almost exclusively to the records of the candidates, amply sustaining all his statements and and charges by official and veritied record. He had been disappointed when he first heard of Hancock's nomination, viewing him then as a mere military man. Since then his famous order No. 40, the letter to Gov. Pease, the letters to Gen. Sherman and other expressions of his had been given to the public, the utterance of which marked him as the greatest statesman since Washington. The speaker indignantly repelled the assertion that the Republicans alone saved the Union. Had not the Douglas Democracy hastened to its support, the prediction of Secretary Seward that the war would be ended in 90 days would have been verified, Had not Hancock heroically turned the tide of battle at hard fought Gettysburg, Garfield's seat at Washington would have been too hot to hold him. Garfield was under fire in one battle, after which he resigned to take a seat in Congress. His personal health and safety would not permit him to engage farther in the conflict. Hancock fought throughout the war, taking part in many important battles, and sealing his devotion to the cause by shedding his blood and receiving a mangled thigh, upon the field of Gettysburg, at the close of the versity, has gone to Linkville to conduct last day's fight. Gen. Gardeld had introduced a bill, which had it became a law, would have summarially dismmissed the an attack of fever. Mr Abrams has also junior Major, General Hancock, on account of his Democracy. The vengeance of a grateful people would, on the 2d of November, be visited upon the head of Garfield. No honest conscientious man could vote for Gartield after knowing of his disgraceful advocacy of the bill to dismiss gallant Hancock from the army, for petty spite and political reasons. Hancock would be elected and his mean spirited competitor be buried deep in oblivion. The victory in Maine was referred to and occasioned prolonged applause. The Colonel read at length from testimony taken before the Poland committee, proving as clear as the noonday sun that Carrield had accepted the quasi-bribe and then to screen inmself after exposure committed perjury.

Col Larrabee is a forcible speaker, sharp and incisive, and is doing good work in the canvass, awakening the people to a sense of the importance of the situation.
