

THE EUGENE CITY GUARD

EUGENE CITY, OREGON.

The Next House.

The exact state of parties in the next House of Representatives will probably remain a puzzle until after it meets. The Washington Gazette gives the names of all the members elect, and figures up a Democratic majority of three. In this calculation the Rev. J. Hyatt Smith of Brooklyn, N. Y., is claimed as a Democrat. He was elected by Democrats and Independent Republicans over Chittenden, regular Republican. Then it is claimed that all the Congressmen elected as Greenbackers in Missouri will vote on party questions with the Democratic members. Whether the Gazette's calculations be strictly accurate or not, it is certain that the two parties will face each other with nearly an equal number of members. If the Republicans should happen to secure a small majority, that apparent advantage will be more than offset by the greater experience and superior ability of the Democratic leaders. It is already an acknowledged fact that there is a great want of anything like able and experienced statesmanship on the part of Republicans in the House elected to succeed the present one. Not one of the new or old members is admitted to possess the requisite qualifications to fill the Speaker's chair, providing the House is organized by the Republicans. The once recognized leaders of that party seem to have died out, or been removed, or have left the organization. The Democrats, on the other hand, number several skillful parliamentarians, with Randall, who is a host in himself, at their head. The management of the respective parties in the next House is likely to be of such a character as to strengthen the Democracy with the country.

A Lesson.

While our ships have been disappearing from the ocean until nearly seven eights of the grain-carrying trade of the country is in the hands of foreigners, a little fourth rate power like Norway has been increasing her shipping in a way that may well teach us a useful lesson. In 1879 she had no less than 7,493 sailing vessels and 396 steamers engaged in foreign commerce. The greater number of the Norwegian vessels are employed in the American trade. During 1878 they drew from this country 34,732,000 crowns on freight. The New York Maritime Register says, with considerable truth, they have taken advantage of our misfortune and have done the work which we should have undertaken, and they will continue to do so unless we take some lessons from them in the art and management of running a ship.

"All the twaddle and prophecies," says the St. Louis Post "about the solid South, and the dissolution of the Democracy, to the contrary notwithstanding, we venture humbly the opinion that the political parties will remain the same as they are now; that 1884 will see the Democracy once more united and fighting for success; and the Presidency in 1884 will again depend on the vote of Indiana and New York, as it did in 1880. Political parties do not break up as quickly in reality as in newspaper articles, and Indiana and New York are still very close States. A first class row between Garfield and the Grant gang, or Garfield and the Schurz-Curtis-Henderson wing, would settle both states very promptly.

It has transpired that a number of Department officials who went to Indiana to work for Garfield had all their expenses paid by their respective Departments, the amount being charged up to various appropriations for special service. This is what comes of having a pure Administration. Poor Mr. Hayes abandoned Washington rather than witness such things. In what forgotten pigeon hole is that famous Civil Service Order of his stowed away?

What ought to be considered evidence of guilt since Garfield's election? If a Committee of your own party swears that you are guilty, if your party press unanimously declares the same thing, and your constituents, by resolution, affirm the judgment, is it evidence of innocence that Republicans make you President nevertheless?

The Columbia river is frozen up and communication, with the vast country of which that is the outlet, is suspended. A railroad from Portland to the Dalles is a necessity.

Grant to be Provided For.

Grant is in the ascendancy now. All manner of schemes are afloat to inure to his benefit. Philadelphia has made him a present of a cool $100,000; the New Yorkers propose to raise a fund of several hundred thousand dollars, and apply the income to his benefit; Conkling and the imperialists would make him a life Senator, while another wing headed by President Hayes thinks he should be made Captain General of all the armies of the United States. And all this is actually proposed for the benefit of the man under whose administration corruption, jobbery and thieving attained a pitch which has had no equal in the history of any civilized nation. Republicans should be above hero worship, especially when that object is made of very common mud. It is soberly stated that the poor man has an income of "only" $7,000 a year. Think of it poor men who can hardly earn a pittance sufficient to support life; think of it and throw your influence against the Republican party, which would build up an aristocracy on the ruins of the republic.

Mahone and Davis.

S. F. Examiner.

The Senate of the United States after the 4th of March next will apparently be controlled by Mahone of Virginia and Davis of Illinois. There will be 37 straight Democrats to 37 Republicans, with Davis and Mahone, independent Democrats, holding the balance of power. This, it is perhaps right to say, is the classification made by Republican papers. Why Davis and Mahone should be called "independent" any more than that all Democrats are independent we hardly know. Davis was elected to the Senate by Democrats; he has acted with that party on all political questions, and was one of the ablest and most pronounced supporters of General Hancock. The same thing is equally true of General Mahone, who in addition is a "Confederate Brigadier," whom the Republicans would scorn to act with. He represents a strongly Democratic State, and can have no future save in that party. If the Republicans are counting upon the vote of either Davis or Mahone we think they are reckoning without their host.

Brumfield's Butcher.

On last Saturday morning, A. J. Thomas, the murderer of S. W. Brumfield, was brought into court at Walla Walla to receive his sentence for the crime of which he had been found guilty. Thomas as he came into court looked as unconcerned as possible, not showing any apparent anxiety as to what was to come. Judge Wingard sentenced him to be hung by the neck until dead in the enclosure known as the jail yard. The time of the execution was not named and will not be until the death warrant is issued, which will be in a few days. While being conducted to the jail after the sentence Thomas remarked that it was a queer way to name the place and not the time and he said he thought the Judge was more excited than he (Thomas) was. He also expressed the opinion that "he did not like being strung up in that little yard that he preferred it being public where all could witness the execution."—Standard.

THE Vermont House of Representatives, with only four dissenting votes, has passed the bill for School Suffrage for women. When the bill came to a third reading, and only four men stood up for the negative, there was a laugh, audible all over the House, causing the Speaker to call for "order," and that being restored, he "reminded the House, that no man was to be laughed at for voting alone any more than for voting with a crowd.

Downey, the Wyoming bard, whose genius shines forth on the pages of the Congressional Record, has been rebuked by his constituents, who sent him there to stand by the old flag and an appropriation—not to write poetry about immortals. His successor is a man who thinks he knows the wants of the Territory, and who is sure that poetry, good or bad, is not one of them.

They have found a way at last to break up Grant's strength. It is well known that the quickest way to disperse a crowd is to pass round a hat, and they are now passing one among his admirer to take up a collection for his benefit. They are scattering already, and the collection will not amount to much.
