Judge R P Boise, Master Oregon State House, Saturday, upon the Grange and other subjects that affect the farmer. The week. speaker expatiated upon the merits of the Grange; its social aspects, and the advantage to be gained by the farmers meeting together and freely discussing the best modes or farming, thus benefitting each other by giving their experience and knowledge de rived from observation. Judge Boise adverted to the monopoly question that is forcing itself upon the laboring classes of the country, by reason of the money kings buying up and controlling all competing railway lines and telegraph lines, thus leaving the country at their mercy. He advocated restrictive legislation, limiting their extortions to fair and just rates. The lecture was attentively listened to by a fair audience.
