

Unjust Representation.

Wasco county, says the Sun, is as large as Clackamas. It has a wider scope of territory, as large a population and as much assessable property. Yet Clackamas has two State Senators and four representatives in the Legislature, while Wasco, its peer in wealth and population and its superior in territory has only half a Senator and two representatives. Clackamas is a Republican county which gives an average majority of 300 in every election for the Republican ticket, and Wasco is a Democratic county and this may explain why the representation is so disproportionate. As long as a Republican Legislature is elected this unjust and disproportionate apportionment will be continued. The record of every such Legislature is the preference of party success to justice and fairness. As long as Wasco continues to be thus deprived of her just representation her wants will not be properly attended to nor her voice properly heard. If the Republicans of this county would have justice done to themselves and fair play for their county, let them at the next election support a Democratic Legislature, as then they will be sure to receive justice in the apportionment of representation to their county.

As long as a Republican Legislature rules, fairness and justice to Wasco are impossible. A party that will gerrymander Pennsylvania and Ohio in such a manner that the Democrats are given on a vote of two-fifths of the whole vote cast only one-tenth of the representation due them would not scruple to do any act of injustice, when party ends could be subserved in Oregon.

The Yaquina Railroad.

Says the Corvallis Gazette of July 8th: The one public enterprise in which Benton county is more deeply interested than any other is the construction of a railroad from the Yaquina Bay to the eastern part of Oregon; and Benton county is not alone in this, but the whole Willamette Valley, for it will shorten the route to the sea, cheapen freight and transportation, and add a greatly increased value to every species of produce in the state. Early last fall the Oregon Pacific Railroad Company was organized in this city, and shortly afterwards Col. Hogg, its President, went to New York, and the general impression obtained belief that this company would construct its road in time to carry away the crop of 1881, but obstacle after obstacle was imposed in the way by enemies of the road until hope almost failed in minds of many friends of the enterprise, but these difficulties have at last been overcome and the early completion of the road is now a fixed fact. On next Monday two corps of Engineers will commence the permanent location of the road and as soon as the location is completed the grading will commence, and we are confidently assured that the road will be completed to this place by January 1st, 1881. The road will be a standard grade and the track laid 50 lb steel rails.

The President's Condition.

The latest dispatches indicates that the recovery of President Garfield is assured. The ball has not been probed for and in all probability never will be. The American people may be thankful that the stain of President killing does not attach to them the second time.

According to Mahone the public obligations of Virginia on the 25th of February, 1879, were $32,977,000; on the 28th of March 1881, they were $19,665,176, and that although not a single dollar had been paid off in the meantime, by some happy process of elimination known to himself, a reduction of $13,311,941 was effected in two years and one month. At this rate, how long will it take this skillful financier to extinguish the whole debt! And this is the kind and degree of repudiation which the Administration gives countenance to.

The fight in the New York Legislature continues. Conkling declares that he will not withdraw from the fight but the Democrats are becoming restless and threaten that if the Stalwarts do not seek adjournment they will permit the election of a Half Breed.

The Governors of twenty states propose having a general Thanksgiving when the complete recovery of Garfield is assured.

A Party of Office-Seekers.

The half-breeds are saying just now, "You can see how little Conkling amounts to without patronage." Very true. But what does the Republican party amount to without patronage, eh! Take the offices from that corrupt organization and it would vanish like a soap-bubble. Here is an authority on the point:

Mr. Blaine is reported as saying that there are less than 100,000 offices of every grade, and that there are on file in the departments over 1,000,000 applications.

The foregoing appears in an editorial in that good Republican paper the Louisville Commercial. It may be taken for granted that the applicants are Republicans. At the last election Garfield received something over 4,000,000 votes, so that on the average every fourth man in the Republican party is on record as seeking office at Washington. How many more there are who are not on record, it would be impossible to tell. One thing is certain, that without the offices there would be little of the Republican party left. What ever else may be said about the wicked Democrats, they have stuck to their opinions and their party, and when all chance of reward was hopeless.

A Probable Candidate.

"Rise up, Samuel Tilden, and come along with us" may be the Democratic demand in New York a year hence, to be succeeded by a national cry to same purpose in 1884. The Springfield Republican has this suggestive paragraph: "The ex-elected is in admirable health, with a head as clear as ever, and a grip on public affairs that has not weakened. He is three years younger now than Gladstone when he led the Liberals last year, and in 1884 will reach the age at which Disraeli won his fight in 1874. He is twenty-three years younger than Sophocles was when he wrote 'at 90 the Aedipus Tyrannus,' to be played after two thousand years on a continent then unknown and among a people whose language did not then exist. Two years as governor of New York, if he got it, would give the Democratic party a new platform, a new cry and a hope of victory as his last administration did." It is only in election time and in the opinion of his opponents, that Mr. Tilden is a weak old man. There is a world of grip and grit in him yet.

King of the Blood.

Is not a "new oil." It is a blood-purifier and tonic. Impurity of blood poisons the system, deranges the circulation, and thus induces many disorders. Known by different names, it distinguishes them according to effects, but being really branches or phases of the same great general disorder, Impurity of Blood. Such are Dyspepsia, Biliousness, Indigestion, Constipation, General Debility, Heart Disease, Dropsy, Kidney Disease, Piles, Rheumatism, Catarrh, Scrofula, Skin Diseases, Ringworm, Corns, Scalding, etc. Dr. King of the Blood prevents and cures these by attacking the cause, impurity of the blood. Curative and preventive action in calling it "the most genuine and reliable preparation for the purpose," said Druggists, $1 per bottle. See testimonials, directions, etc. in pamphlet.
