The Mexican Horror.

Details of the Morelos railway casualty in Mexico are at hand in correspondence. A gentleman who escaped from the wreck of the first car said to the correspondent: Dante's description of hell conveys but a faint idea of the horrors I witnessed. The thunder peals seemed to me like the voice of an inexorable fate. The fortunes of that doomed mass of human beings were made so distinct, first flames of the alcohol, and afterwards by the flashes of lightning, that my soul sickened. I managed to clamber up the sides of the ravines, and could only pray: "Christ pity them!" then I fainted. No guard had been stationed at the bridge, nor even had a lamp been placed there; the heavy freshet had brought down the debris which had pressed against the two piers and carried them off; the headlight of the engine shone only upon the rails, which remained, and the engineer being unable to see that these steel threads were unsupported, the train instantly plunged into the abyss, precipitating its human freight into the foaming water. The ravine being narrow, the cars were piled on each other, crushing and mashing all; then the eighty barrels of alcohol rolled out, many breaking open as they fell; next the lime poured over the victims, and finally came an additional horror. As the rear engine was dragged into the ravine its live coals fired the alcohol, and in a few seconds this agonizing mass of humanity was enveloped in flames. Imagine their sufferings, in a dreary place, far from any human habitation, and as the storm had prostrated the telegraph wires there were no means of communication with city or town; therefore the victims remained several hours without help.

STATE NEWS.

Some rust has been discovered in the late sown grain near Oakland, but it will not do much damage.

The attendance at the Umpqua academy during the coming year promises to be much larger than it has been for a long time.

After investigation the O. R. & N. Co. have made an estimate of the amount of wheat they are likely to move this fall from the entire country east of the Cascades. The footing up is 100,000 tons for the entire crop, of which 75,000 tons will be exported. This shows 30 or 40 per cent more than last year. A healthy increase.

The farmers on the line of the narrow gauge road between Silverton and Lebanon have formed joint stock companies and are engaged in building several warehouses in which to store their wheat until such a time as they may wish to sell it. They find that when they have placed their grain in a mill or warehouse they are practically at the mercy of the owner thereof and have concluded to have buildings of their own.

A water-spout or cloud-burst was seen near Lakeview Tuesday, July 26, that attracted the attention of the people of the valley for some time. About half an hour after this one had passed away a second was seen much nearer town. The first was a short distance west of the summit mills and perhaps ten or fifteen miles from town. Apparently a large volume of water poured from the clouds in an unbroken stream for nearly thirty minutes after discovered. A storm cloud was gathering in the west and a thunder shower portended. The second was seen only a mile or two north of town and apparently moving toward it. Parties in town visited the scene of the latter soon after the clouds had cleared away and discovered that it had unoccupied an unoccupied dwelling house, demolished considerable fence and tore up the ground generally. Those who visited the track of this cloud-burst concluded that it must have been a whirlwind.

Steamer on Klamath Lake.

Ashtland Tidings.

The steamer on Klamath lake has been christened Gen. Howard. The Gen. Howard cost about $5,000. It is sixty-eight feet long, twelve feet beam and draws about five feet of water; it is built in regular tug style, and would ride the seas of the Pacific with safety; the engine is of thirty-horse power, and the boat will make twelve miles an hour with ease. Joe Beach has command, and John Burnett is pilot. The steamer was launched on Tuesday, and Wednesday made her trip to the mouth of Wood river, thirty miles in three hours. This is within four miles of the agency. At present the entrance to Wood river is closed by a narrow bar, but a channel will be cut through and the stream made navigable to within a mile of the fort. The steamer will make regular trips between Linkville and the reservation, carrying passengers for the agency and the fort. The scenery along the picturesque mountain shores is described as grandly beautiful; and pleasure parties from various portions of the county, and from Jackson and Siskiyou counties will be visiting Linkville through the summer for steamboat excursions—a new feature of life in the interior of southern Oregon.

Rattlesnake.

The Corvallis Gazette of last week tells the following snake story: A rattlesnake was killed on John Wyatt's farm, two miles west of Corvallis, a few days ago, by a boy of eight and a girl of 4 years, under the following circumstances: The little boy and girl first discovered it between the house and a shop near by. The boy ran to get the axe while the little girl remained to keep watch over their venomous discovery. While the boy was gone the snake started to make its exit, and crawled under the edge of the shop, and when he returned the little girl had followed it under the building and was about a foot from it when the boy struck it with the axe, cutting it in pieces. The only way that Mr. Wyatt accounts for neither of the children being bitten was that during all this time the small terrier dog was also in pursuit and kept running up and back and constantly barking at the reptile, which probably attracted more of its attention than did the children. The snake had upon it seven rattles, and was two feet and eight inches long. So far as is known, this is the first of these unwelcome visitors to this part of Benton county.

The principal New York sugar refiners have agreed to restrict the production of refined sugar to 20,000,000 pounds a week, or one-third less than the weekly amount heretofore produced. The object of the movement, of course, is to advance the price, and it is another example of the prevailing tendency of monopolists arbitrarily to use their opportunities whenever it serves their wishes or interests to do so.

Persons who believe that good luck never goes with the number 13 should no longer adhere inflexibly to the superstition, especially in the matter of horse races. It is recalled that last year the winner of the Grand Prix at Longchamps bore that number, and that Foxhall's place on the list this year was number 13, too. One would hardly plead that two exceptions in succession are required to prove a rule.

HOSTETTER'S
CELEBRATED
STOMACH BITTERS

MALARIA IS AN UNSEEN VAPOROUS Poison, spreading disease and death in many localities, for which quinine is no genuine antidote, but for the effects of which Hostetter's Stomach Bitters is not only a thorough remedy but a reliable preventive. To this fact there is an overwhelming array of testimony, extending over a period of thirty years. All disorders of the liver, stomach and bowels are also conquered by the Bitters.
