A Child Confronted.

The New Northwest rather weighs lightly reviews the actions of a couple of educational institutions, in the lower part of the valley, in refusing to admit a child because of the mother's faith. It says:

The illegitimate son of a prominent and respectable white man and promoter of women was sent some time ago to the Pacific University at Forest Grove by his wronged, betrayed and abandoned mother, who desired to bring up her son in the ways of Christianity, which is a moral home. It is well known to the readers that the Pharisees of that University, who compass sea and land to make one proselyte from the ranks of degraded Kanakas, Indians or Chinese heathen, refused to receive admittance of a Christian gentleman into their ranks, in direct defiance of the heavenly injunction, "Whosoever will, let him come," for fear the gospel grace of the Divine Teacher would be inadequate for its salvation. It was not charged that the child was bad. They were only afraid he would become bad. So he was remanded back to Second street. His mother, in her strong desire to bring him up properly, recently rose to place him in the Catholic school in this city, but met with no better success than at Forest Grove. We ask the professed followers of the son of Mary to pause and inquire what would have been the conduct of the Master under like conditions? Do they not believe that the blood of Jesus Christ cleanseth from all sin? We have no words of censure for the present life of the wronged and outraged mother of a degenerate Christian. Illegitimate sin. But we cannot refrain from severest censure of the hollow hypocrisy that respects and honors the father, but condemns the child, because of the mother's sin to a life of ignorance and destitution. The mother's wrongs cry out in the interest of humanity, Christianity and justice. It speaks for itself.

The Imperial million Oregon city are being thoroughly overhauled, and the machinery repaired. A new flume is being built, and improvements in general are being made. The mills are expected to be running again in about two weeks. The main building has received a coat of white paint, which improves the appearance very much.
