STATE NEWS.

The warehouses of Corvallis, contain about 30,000 bushels of wheat of the harvest of 1880.

The various orthodox societies are buying up the stock of the Beaverton Hall and will convert it into a church edifice.

Mrs. Elizabeth Tucker, who had been a resident of Washington county since 1852, died at Beaverton last week, aged 67 years.

During the year ending July 31, there were 625 money orders issued at Hillsboro postoffice, aggregating the sum of $11,428 84; amount of orders paid in the same time, $3,423 55.

The Fowler Bros. at Glencoe, Washington county, have sold over 500,000 shingles this year. More building and improving is being done, take the county all over, than at any previous year in its history.

A warehouse to hold 100,000 bushels of wheat is being built at Lebanon. It is being pushed as fast as possible in order to get it ready to receive this season's wheat. A fine new hotel is soon to be opened in this town.

Washington county has furnished two inmates to the insane asylum this month, a man named Gunter, who lived about three miles from Forest Grove, and Edward Dolan, who lived near Butler's mill. Both are single men.

The Common Council of Portland has thrown out the celebrated ballot No. 200 cast at the city election, deciding that the vote for the two candidates for Mayor was a tie. D. P. Thompson, present incumbent, will keep his seat "until his successor is elected and qualified." How soon another election will be held does not plainly appear as yet.

Extensive improvements are being made in the Oregon City mills. The old wharf has been raised 18 inches and a new extension of about 60 feet is being added, and is built of cribwork filled in with stone. The roadway to the wharf is also being improved, and a new bridge is built. When these improvements are completed, this wharf will be the best landing in the city, having a gradual incline to suit all stages of water.

The Coos Bay murderer, David Higgins, is still at large and is causing consternation on the mountain road leading into that county. A large reward has been offered by the authorities and citizens of that section, but the tempting reward has not induced any one to make his capture. The sheriff of Coos county writes the Governor asking him to make an additional reward of $500, but from the following reply of T. J. Sikes, private secretary to the Governor, no additional reward will be made: "I am directed by his Excellency, the Governor, to acknowledge the receipt of your letter of July 27th with petition asking that an additional reward be offered by the Governor for the capture of David Higgins, and to say in reply that unfortunately the Legislature made no appropriation for such purposes."

Last Saturday two weeks ago to-day, was the hottest day known in Boise during the memory of "the oldest inhabitant." At 10 a. m. the thermometer indicated 98 degrees and at noon it was 102. By 4 p. m. it got up to 106, and at 7 p. m. it had fallen back to 102. At 10 o'clock at night it stood at 98 and a hot wind blew down the river that was almost suffocating. On Sunday morning at 8 o'clock it stood at 92, but about 10 o'clock the sky began to cloud up and a light shower of rain followed, which cooled down the atmosphere and gave scorched humanity another chance to breathe.

The High chief of the Rakik group of islands in the Pacific ocean has issued an ordinance forbidding the sale of intoxicating liquors. The penalty for the first offence is fixed at $100, and a second disobedience of the ordinance is punished by expulsion from the islands. The Chief gives as a reason for promulgating the law that the use of intoxicating liquors is destroying his people. The United States Consul at Apia is lending his support to the enforcement of the decree.

The Roseburg Plaindealer, of last week, has the following concerning the proposed extension of the O. & C. R. R.: There is no longer room for speculation in regard to the course the railroad will take when it is extended beyond Roseburg. Already surveyors are at work locating the road and driving grade stakes, and as nearly as we are able to find out, the course as decided upon will be south from here, to or near Canyonville, but it is not definitely settled whether the road will be located through the canyon, or around by the head of Cow Creek, the cost being about the same on either route. From the head of the canyon, it is supposed that the road will be located through the Cow creek and Grave creek hills as far south as Jump-off-Joe, and from there take a southwestern course through the mountains aiming to strike somewhere about Crescent City. Then down the coast and connect with the Donahue road which Mr. Villard has lately bought, and which runs up the coast from San Francisco about 125 miles.

The road if located on this route, will leave Jacksonville about 45 miles to the left, with a good wagon road to it at nearly all times of the year. Speculation is rife as to the time work will begin on the grade, some being so enthusiastic that they want to bet there will be 500 chinamen here to-night to be ready to begin work on the grade Monday morning. We will wait and see.

It is said of Dr. Agnew that he refused to stay at the White House constantly as he had patients in Philadelphia whom he could not neglect. The President was well cared for, but there was a sailor who had fractured his skull, a machinist who had got injured and three others of the same class. All these were dependent upon him for treatment, and he would not forsake them. Not much of the Bliss or Baxter about such a man as that.

The First Murder.

Portland Telegram.

We published a few days since the account of the killing of William E. Noyes, or "Noyce," as was then given, being the first murder from the Wood river, Idaho, country. The killing was done by the blacksmith with whom Noyes had the difficulty on the day of the murder. The blacksmith's name is Frank Ayers. It seems Ayers was riding home with Noyes and wife, and Noyes being very drunk, was abusing his wife and finally knocked her off the wagon into the road. Ayers, attempted to take her part, when Noyes, who was a powerful man, gave the blacksmith a thrashing and then rode off home leaving his wife and Ayers to walk home. Mrs. Noyes went home, and finding her husband in bed, soon retired with him. Between eight and nine o'clock that same evening, Frank Ayers, accompanied by another young man, both armed with double barreled shot guns, rode up to the station and asked Champagne for his partner, Noyes. The Frenchman replied that Billy had "turned in," whereupon Ayers went to Noyes' cabin and called for him to get up. Receiving no reply, he entered the room, and, reaching over Mrs. Noyes, emptied the contents of both barrels into him, exclaiming as he did so, "There, you'll never box another man around, you ———."

Leaving Mrs. Noyes to take care of her dying husband, Ayers and his pard crossed to Champagne's house, and entering the bar-room called for drinks. After supplying themselves with air-shooters and a rifle, they went down the road to Arco. As the nine o'clock stage of Blackfoot hove in sight, the men presented their weapons and demanded the driver to stop. "I've got away with Noyes," said Ayers, addressing the driver, "and we want some fresh horses to skip the country on." The men coolly helped themselves to the leaders, placed their saddles upon them, leaving their old horses behind, bade the passengers good night without offering to relieve them of any valuables, and vanished in the darkness. This murder took place at a station on the Blackfoot and Wood River stage line about sixty-four miles from Hailey.
