State University.

The impression has been created throughout the State that the indebtedness which Mr. Villard paid off on the State University was created since that institution has been turned over to the State. Such is not the case. The Regents have met every debt since it became a State institution, but the $7,000 was due and owing at the time it was turned over to them by the University Building Association. We are also informed that the money had been subscribed but was not collectable by the Association, hence it was unable to meet its obligations. The liberality of the Lane county people had made up the amount when Mr. Villard came in and settled the whole debt. The University is in excellent hands, and will become one of the leading institutions of learning not only of Oregon, but of the Union.—Portland Standard.

When General Sharpe was made Marshal of the Southern District of New York in 1869, Mr. Conkling was Senator. When General Sharpe was made Surveyor of the Port of New York in 1872, Mr. Conkling was Senator. When Gen Sharpe was sent to the assembly in 1879, Mr. Conkling was Senator. When General Sharpe was made Speaker in 1880, Mr. Conkling was Senator. When Gen. Sharpe was made Speaker in 1881, Mr. Conkling was Senator. When General Sharpe dropped Mr. Conkling, Mr. Conkling had ceased to be a Senator.

Prayer for Wood Pulp.

Senator-elect Warner Miller is the Superintendent of a Sunday-school in the village of Herkimer, New York. A local paper tells the story that shortly after his appointment he was accosted by one of his scholars with the statement: "Mr. Miller, I have prayed for papa, for mamma, for brothers and sisters, and I have prayed for myself. What shall I do next?" With that nice sense of business enterprise on divine encouragement which eminently characterizes him, the pious preceptor promptly answered: "Pray for wood pulp!"

What a voracious monster New York City must be! Down into her insatiable maw are weekly driven fifteen thousand calves, five thousand calves, forty thousand sheep and lambs and twenty-five thousand hogs. To complete this enormous meat pie, ship loads of game and poultry are thrown in to complete the cracks. More than a hundred live animals are slaughtered and hauled each week into her capacious, and never satisfied stomach. She roars and bellows for more. Herds from the bunch grass region, from Texas, from the corn growing west, from the north and from the south are swallowed up and yet she cries for more. She is an ever consuming demon of live things. Night and day the carnival of death goes on ceaselessly on that this huge monster may live.

A leading Virginia Democrat, who recently had an interview with Mahone on the political situation, was some what surprised at the Senator's declaration that he was still a Democrat, heart and soul. Maybe Mahone means it. If he does, it would be curious to know just what Republicans like Dawes and Hoar think about it. We incline to the belief that Mahone does not know the meaning of the word Democrat.

It is "Conkey" now, with several of our Republican exchanges. A few months ago it was the "brilliant statesman" and "courageous leader," who saved Indiana, carried New York and elected Garfield. Thrift and fawning.

It is reported that the Douglas Independent will soon appear as a full-fledged Democratic sheet. "God save the mark!" How such a transformation can take place is past finding out.—Jacksonville Times.

Republican Congressman Jorgensen of Virginia says of Mahone that "there is not an honest hair on his head." This is evidently a correct diagnosis of the great repudiator's case.

There is a Chicago house which supplies to indolent clergyman copies of lithographed sermons prepared especially by the firm.

Editor Horace White is said to have made $500,000 through the aid of Villard.

Impossible.

The Boston Transcript comes manfully to the defense of the Republican party and Mr. Dawes' letter in support of Mahone, which is being widely circulated as a campaign document in Virginia, by this little argumentum ad hominem: "That the Civil Service under Democratic control in the National Government, would reach a far lower depth of bossism, favoritism, cliquism and corruption than it has yet ever touched, is doubted by no one." Now this, we maintain, is impossible, in the very nature of things. Read the history of the fraud, bribery, corruption, bossism, favoritism, nepotism, cliquism, peculation and plunder which have characterized the Republican party's control of the Government since Grant's first term, and then but this one consolation remains: That we have struck hard-pan, and that no party can get down lower. The party which has Hancock, Tilden, Bayard, Thurman, Hendricks, and other scarcely less noteworthy men for national leaders, offers guarantees that it will not stoop to the methods by which the Republican party seeks to perpetuate itself. They decline utterly to resort to such methods to obtain power, which is the best possible answer to the allegation that they would adopt them to retain it.

Speaking of the Democratic party in Ohio, the Philadelphia Times (Independent) says in a recent issue: "The management of the Democratic party in Ohio seems to have been taken from the old stock politicians and put into the hands of the younger and more progressive element."

A candidate for governor is a successful business man, who has not before appeared in politics, but whose acceptance of the leadership will do much to modernize the party in a state where it has been very much in need of a little of that sort of thing. The platform is far in advance of what Ohio Democratic platforms have been, and after excepting some clap trap about the tariff, which is intended to be used any way, it is a common sense declaration of principles calculated for application to the concerns of people now on earth."

During a recent Montana flood a daring but unsuccessful effort was made to get the United States mails across a river where a bridge had been carried away. After a cable had been stretched across a river where a bridge had been carried away, a basket was adjusted, and the carrier with his mail bag stepped in. When in the center, immediately over the seething boiling waters, the basket tipped, and both the mail and the man were lost to sight forever.

It is a somewhat singular fact that no President for the last forty years, who has got into a fight over the New York Custom House, has ever been re-nominated. Jackson's difficulties occurred during his second term, but Tyler, Pierce, Buchanan and Hayes all tried it and went into obscurity at the end of four years. Mr. Garfield promises not only to go into retirement himself over it but to take his party along with him.—Times.

No party can remain long in power without becoming corrupt. It is inevitable. It is natural. What the country most needs, what our official establishments must have to keep them pure, is frequent renovation. Parties are a necessity, but it is a fatal mistake to give either of them a perpetual lease of the Government.

The President's pastor wants the manufacture and sale of pistols abolished, on the ground that they are useless for war and hunting, and only available for making the Fourth of July hideous and committing murder.

Rev. Dr. DeWitt, a neighbor of Senator Lapham, recently prayed God would spare his State the disgrace of being represented in the United States Senate by an inebriate.

Uncle Sam comes in the "well-to-do" category. He manages to keep a little balance of $236,878,190 in the Treasury—a comfortable sum.
