General Hancock at Yorktown.
Secretary Lincoln has done a fitting and graceful thing in inviting Major-General Hancock to take charge of the military display at the Yorktown Centennial celebration. General Hancock is not only one of the most distinguished and capable soldiers in the army, but his bearing as a candidate for the Presidency, both before and since the election, has been in the highest degree creditable to him. The cordial relations established with President Garfield shows a mind superior to disappointment, and above mere partisan resentments. In addition to the propriety of General Hancock's selection in recognition of his standing as an officer and his character as a patriot, the further consideration of his acceptability to the Southern people, among whom the celebration is to be held, was not, we trust, lost sight of. The gallant hero of Gettysburg is popular anywhere. In defeat in the field of politics as well as in victory on the battlefield, he is the same modest, unassuming, yet brave and noble minded patriot.—S. F. Examiner.

MARRIED and SETTLED.
The Walla Walla Journal, of the 15th inst., says: Another scene in the life of Nannie Thomas has just taken place, but this time it is one of a different nature from the varied scenes she has been passing through. Instead of the grim judge passing sentence, we find a minister of the gospel. In place of the mocking gallows a chancel and pulpit are substituted. Nannie Thomas has been married to a farmer of the Palouse country, a man well fixed in worldly goods and calculated to make a good husband. May she appreciate the change and in the future live a life that will dispel the horrible phantom, which has followed her for so long a time. The above announcement, is certainly proof of the courage of men who live on the border; it is probable that the iron nerves of this bridegroom would not be shaken at the appearance even of the ghost of Amanda Shanks.

A serious cutting affray is chronicled at Hubbard, taking place one day last week. The assailant, a young man named Killin, made an onslaught on an elderly man named Knowles, with a pocket knife, the reason assigned being the opposition of Knowles to the marriage of the former with his daughter. A correspondent says: Killin had been about this premises threatening all day, and Knowles' patience at last becoming exhausted, he ordered Killin, away, when the latter assaulted him, with a pocket knife, inflicting a severe cut from above the collar bone and immediately back of the jugular vein; also a slight wound on the back of the head, besides badly crushing him about the shoulders. The wounds are not necessarily dangerous, though quite painful.

There are now 187 prisoners in the penitentiary most of whom are employed. Twenty of these are at work on the insane asylum, 15 are working for Patterson & Duval in their foundry; 55 are employed by George Collins in making brick for the asylum; 3 work in the tannery; 12 are employed in a chair factory; and 4 are at work in the blacksmith shop making anchors to be used in the brick work of the asylum. There are employed at the penitentiary a 1st and 2d warden, 6 day guards, 2 night guards, a teamster and a turnkey.
Nimrod Price of Linn county has just harvested 60 acres that has averaged a little more than 40 bushels to the acre. It was raised on fallowed land, which has been cultivated for 26 years, and this is the 22d crop of grain taken off it. In that time it was in meadow twice and fallowed twice. The wheat raised was the Golden Chaff and Kinney varieties, and two acres sown in the celebrated White Russian ran the average down by yielding only 25 bushels per acre.
R. H. Scott, of Scott's mills, Clackamas county, intends to commence the manufacture of starch this winter.
V. S. Ralls, an old settler of Jackson county, died of heart disease one day last week.

HOSTETTER'S CELEBRATED STOMACH BITTERS
MALARIA IS AN UNSEEN VAPOROUS Poison, spreading disease and death in many localities, for which quinine is no genuine antidote, but for the effects of which Hostetter's Stomach Bitters is not only a thorough remedy but a reliable preventive. To this fact there is an overwhelming array of testimony, extending over a period of thirty years. All disorders of the liver, stomach and bowels are also conquered by the Bitters.
