Not a Clergyman in Fact.

In regard to the so-called Rev. W. F. Willard, accused of various misdoings, Mr. S. G. Irwin writes to the Walla Walla Journal as follows: Some time last Winter, in Boise City, he, then a notorious gambler and drunkard professed to be converted and made quite a confession, stating he felt it his duty to preach the gospel immediately. To meet his wishes he was granted license as local preacher and allowed to exercise his gifts. He was also very desirous to join the Columbia River Conference and become a regular minister. With this purpose seemingly in view preached in Boise Valley, and in the meantime proposed marriage to an estimable lady of Boise City and urged their marriage to take place at an early day, and they were married last April. She had a little property which he took charge of and soon converted into cash. All this time he was representing his varied resources and great wealth. His actions were such as to give rise to suspicions and at the late session of the Columbia River Conference held in Colfax, the opposition became so strong he saw it needless to apply, and so he really never became a Methodist clergyman really and in fact. You have stated his infamous. career while here, and on which career too much condemnation cannot fall. But let it be remembered his was the career of a scoundrel and fraud of the deepest dye, assuming all this role to gratify his villainous purposes. He is not a rascally minister, but a rascal who took the garb of a minister.
