

THE EUGENE CITY GUARD.

SATURDAY.....DECEMBER 3, 1881.

Died Game.

Andrew To-w-pe, one of the Indians who was implicated in the murder of the Perkins family, was hanged at Fort Colville on the 15th inst. The execution took place at 12:15 p. m., and after hanging 15 minutes, the body was pronounced dead by Dr. Merriam. A witness writes as follows to the Walla Walla Union: Everything passed off very quietly, including the Indian, there being but very few persons present. He made a request a few days ago to the effect that no Indian be present at the execution. He was attended in his last hours by Father Corwana, who took charge of his remains. The doomed man's dying request to his friends was that they bury all animosity against the Indian who killed his brother at old Fort Colville last winter. To use a slang phrase, he "died game," coming on the scaffold with his head erect, singing a war song. He said he was perfectly satisfied to die for the crime he had committed; that he deserved punishment, and that had his early training not been too much neglected, possibly it would not have happened. It was feared some weeks ago that there might be trouble, as Indians had made many threats, but through the influence of the Catholic priest and To-w-pe's own request, they acted sensibly and stayed away.

The Detroit Post and Tribune furnishes a careful approximation of the losses by the recent fire and forest fires in Ottawa, Allegan, Manistee, Huron and Sanilac counties, Michigan. The total is $2,346,413. There were 1,147 dwellings burned, 28 school houses, 6 churches, 12 hotels, 34 mills, 20 docks, and 130 stores. The insurance on all this was only $628,632, so that an absolute deficiency of $1,722,781 remains to be met. But of course the sufferers do not expect to be nor should they be, put back immediately in as comfortable a state as they were in before this calamity. They must bear their share—and the heaviest share—of their losses. What should be done is to see that their immediate and most pressing wants are provided for. To do this, even on the most limited scale, will require at least six hundred thousand dollars and probably one million dollars. But the total of contributions from all sources is now less than three hundred thousand dollars.

The water in the Columbia has so receded that there is but fourteen and one-half feet of water on St. Helens bar. This news is encouraging. The ships can now take about one third of a load from Portland, and receive the remainder at Astoria. We wonder if such a state of affairs has anything to do with the difference between San Francisco and Portland charters? Sixty-five shillings at San Francisco, and 80 at Portland. Can Portland with this difference against her retain her position as the metropolis of the Northwest? We think not when Puget Sound, as fine a body of water as there is in the world, lies within one hundred miles of her.

The move that is being made by several of our citizens for a County Fair is a good one and deserves the encouragement of the business men of Eugene City. Lane county with her varied resources could present a creditable exhibit of her productions that would draw the attention of emigrants, besides stimulating the farmer to attain a higher quality in his products. We hope to see a good attendance at the meeting next Saturday. Get it once started and it can be made a success.

The Forty-Seventh session of Congress will convene at Washington next Monday. The Republicans will organize the House, probably, although they lack one of a clear majority; they will find among the Greenbackers, Independents, or Readjusters, votes enough to elect their nominee. Mahone and Davis, in the Senate, accepted the glittering bribe, and it will not be hard to find one or more in the the House, who for patronage, will give support to the dominant party.

The Portland Standard found some objection to the manner in which Villard's "benevolent monopoly" was conducted, and in consequence, lost all the advertising patronage of the companies which Villard controls.

The Guiteau trial drags along, the prisoner still interrupting and running the court at his pleasure. From the manner in which the trial is conducted it seems as if anyone except Guiteau is on trial.

GUITEAU says the Lord is responsible for the killing of Garfield. The sooner the people make the Lord responsible for the hanging of Guiteau the better.

SPECULATION.

The Extent to which it is Carried and the Drains its Excitement Brings Up on the System.

A Few Words of Warning and Suggestions to American Business Men.

When Cyrus W. Field returned from his tour around the world he was perfectly amazed at the extent to which stock speculations had run, and the thousand and one "wild cat" schemes which were largely patronized by the too credulous public, even when there was not the remotest probability that they would ever come to a successful completion. He stepped into Delmonico's to dine, and was pained to see the crowds which huddled around the stock indicator, unable even to eat a meal in peace, so disquieted were they under the operations of the fever of speculation. Mr. Field says he bought certain stock for an investment at 1.06 just before he sailed. On his return, finding it quoted at the fancy price of 1.64, he sold. He could see no reason why such an advance should have been made, and fearing a crash in the market he disposed of his stock as soon as possible. This wild speculative mania prevails in London, and Paris and Berlin, and in his opinion when the crash comes it will involve the entire commercial world. Conservative men and the press see these things and warn the people, but many will not be stopped so long as they have a penny to spare or can borrow, or until ruin comes irremediably and awfully.

The supreme effort of our people should be to cultivate moderation. Two things have united to make the struggle for existence in this country the most exacting and exciting found in the world: 1st. The ease with which successful men appear to amass fortunes. 2d. The impression their success makes on those who immigrate hither. As soon as the intelligent foreigner arrives on our shores, he becomes seized with the desire, not only of a comfortable subsistence, but of a fortune, and every ambition and energy of his being is directed to this one purpose. This explains why our business men give so little time to physical recreation, why they pay so little heed to the essential details of politics—their business and their families exhaust their energies, and they have time, strength and inclination for nothing else, except when an imminent physical or political danger stares them in the very face and eyes. The result of all this is, that twenty years is the limit of a man's business activity and success. It will take him ordinarily ten years to accumulate his first thousand dollars surplus, and in the remaining ten years, if he be prudent and energetic, he may amass more or less of a fortune. But in the majority of cases, when he has gotten his fortune, he has ruined his health, and finds no comfort whatever in that which he had so fondly hoped would complete the sum of human happiness for him.

The exhaustion which follows the inordinate pursuit of wealth, we are told by the very best of authorities, proceeds from impaired digestive organs. The brain has drawn upon them for all they were worth so long that they suddenly give away and the whole system falls into a miserable collapse. The organs so susceptible to nervous excitement are the kidneys and liver. The offices of these organs are to discharge poisons which are collected from all parts of the body by the veins, the kidneys eliminating them in a liquid form, and the liver transforming part of them by a chemical process into digestive fluids, and utilizing the remainder as a purgative. Both these organs demand a large share of nervous force. If this force is all exhausted by the brain, they become feeble, colds settle in them, congestion follows, the poison cannot get out of the blood, digestion is impaired, the bowels become inactive because the liver fails to furnish the natural cathartic, the bladder becomes fearfully inflamed, dropsy comes on; strange disorders visit the head, heart, lungs, and ere the person is aware of it, he is a victim of chronic kidney and liver disease, and a candidate for death by Bright's disease of the kidneys.

And this is the end of all commercial life which is pursued at the sacrifice of every other social, political and physical consideration! "Oh," exclaims the man of active life, who does not feel as well as he used to, "I haven't any Bright's disease! I'm only used up from so much work, worry and excitement!" Precisely! You do not feel as well as formerly. Your head aches oftener and your eyesight suddenly proves faulty. The verdict of a celebrated authority on the subject is: "These symptoms are a sure precursor of Bright's disease." You have had a recent and mysterious attack of asthma.—"A sure precursor of Bright's disease." You have had a hard cold on your lungs which you have been unable to dislodge—you have spit up bloody mucus.—"A sure precursor of Bright's disease." You have felt a new and singular sensation of heaviness in the region of the heart.—"A sure precursor of Bright's disease." You have felt great depression of spirits, without any known cause.—"A sure precursor of Bright's disease." You have found it suddenly impossible to eat whatever and whenever you wish. Your stomach has been very lame, your appetite very feeble, your bowels irregular.—"A sure precursor of Bright's disease." A mysterious weariness comes upon you; your muscular system seems utterly helpless.—"A sure precursor of Bright's disease." Suppose you "have no pains in the region of the kidneys or liver" this is no indication that you have not Bright disease. Suppose you "have no albumen or casts," that is no indication that your kidneys are all right.—That you have not Bright's disease.

This, of course, puts an entirely new phase on one of the most vital questions of the day. We have made a special inquiry and we find high medical authority for all of these additional conclusions:

FIRST—That more adults are carried off in this country by chronic kidney disease than by any other one malady except consumption. [Thompson.]

SECOND—That deaths from such diseases are increasing at the rate of 250 per cent a decade. [Edwards.]

THIRD—That they have no symptoms of their own and may long exist without the knowledge of patient or practitioner, as no pain will be felt in them or their vicinity. [Roberts.]

FOURTH—That in the fatal cases—and most cases have hitherto been fatal—the symptoms of diseased kidneys will first appear in extremely different organs of the body as stated above.—[Thompson.]

FIFTH—That only when the disease has reached its final stages, with the usual symptoms of albumen and casts appear in the water, and will great pain rack the diseased organs. [Thompson.]

SIXTH—That Bright's disease, which usually has three stages of development, is a universal development in this country. [Roberts and Edwards.]

SEVENTH—That there is but one remedial agent in the world which has ever cured a pronounced case of Bright's disease and has thus inspired the confidence of the physician, the patient and the public, namely: Warner's Safe Kidney and Liver Cure. [Craig.]

You may search medical works in vain to find any formula for the cure of Bright's disease in any of its three stages. With some patients, the disease runs slowly and for years. With others it comes as a thief in the night but were it not for the power of the remedy we have mentioned, in whatever form it comes, or however long it afflicts, the human race would be absolutely and pitably a victim of its terrible fangs. This is a most serious question for any professional man or man of business. It confronts him with the fact that unless care is taken, the vital forces of the body will degenerate and pass from the system before he is aware. It warns him to guard carefully even slight symptoms and check the great evil before it has an opportunity to grow. The remedy above mentioned is the extract of pure tropical plants which act both as a food and restorative to the wasted kidneys and liver. It is used more extensively to-day than any known remedy, and thousands of people in all parts of the land owe their present health and happiness to its power. Upon a subject so vital no one can afford to hesitate, and especially men of business who realize the evils of delay.
