T. G. HENDRICKS

An Invasion.
Richard Cobden, in a letter to a friend, speaking of meeting a party of Americans at their consul's in Rome and says: Introduced to several of our most distinguished citizens—a title for a bore." The following story of Yankee impudence he heard at St. Petersburg: Some time ago a Yankee adventurer asked permission to establish a hunting station on the North American territory belonging to Russia, but was refused. A year or two after this occurrence, Baron Meyendorf happened to be calling on his friend, the Home Minister, who, putting a letter in his hand remarked: "Here is something to amuse you; it has occasioned me half an hour's incessant laughter." It was a dispatch from the governor of Irkutsk, describing in pompous language an "invasion" which had taken place in the North American territory of the Russian Empire by an armed force consisting of from eighty to one-hundred men, commanded by an American, and having three pieces of artillery. It was the Yankee fur trader, who had taken French leave and squatted himself upon the most favorable situation in the Czar's dominions for carrying on his hunting operations. The question rose how he was to be ejected. There was no Russian armed force or authority of any kind within many hundreds, perhaps thousands of miles of the invading army. The expense of fitting out an armament for the purpose was then calculated, but the distance and the difficulty of approaching the Yankee headquarters were such formidable obstacles, that it was thought better to allow the Yankee to retain undisturbed possession.

Noble Young Man.
There was a noble youth, says the Post, who, on being urged to take wine at the table of a famous statesman in Washington, had the moral courage to refuse. He was a poor young man, just beginning the struggle of life.
"Not take a glass of wine!" said the statesman in wonderment and surprise.
Not one single glass of wine!" echoed the statesman's beautiful and fascinating wife. "No," replied the youth resolutely, gently repelling the proffered glass. What a picture of moral grandeur was that! A friendless youth refusing wine at the table of a wealthy and famous statesman, even though proffered by the hands of a beautiful lady. "No," said the noble young man, his voice trembling a little and his cheek flushed, "I never drink wine," but here he straightened himself up, and his words grew firmer, "if you have a little good old rye whisky I don't mind trying a snifter!"

SHERMAN, when Secretary of the Treasury, said it would be impossible for the government to place a loan at 3 per cent. He fought the Democratic 3-per-cent. measure, and the Republicans followed his lead. The result was that Congress adjourned without passing a refunding bill, when one was absolutely necessary. Windom solved the question by offering to the holders of the outstanding bonds the right to continue to hold them and draw 3 1/2 instead of 6 per cent interest, or if they preferred it, they could have their bonds cashied. With comparatively few exceptions, the bondholders jumped at Mr. Windom's offer. By the failure of the Democratic 3-per-cent. bill millions of dollars were lost to the treasury, for a 3 per cent. loan would certainly have been successful. In fact, John Sherman has presented a 3 per cent. refunding bill, and is as strongly in favor of it now as he was opposed to it a few months ago. The Sherman family have cost this country a great deal of money.

WORSE THAN THE DISEASE.—Sam Johnsing felt very much aggrieved because an Austin Justice fined him five dollars for disturbing the peace. "Mr.
Johnsing," said the justice, "you can take an appeal; you have a legal remedy." "I know all about dem remedies, sah; dey am werry much like dem udder remedies you gets at de drug store. De more ob'em yer takes de sicker yer gets."

One Legged Pants.
A one-legged soldier walking up the Bowery, was accosted by a clothing merchant with the usual "Sell you something to-day?" Entering the store the veteran was invited to inspect the large stock, but having looked through the array of coats and vests and trousers, he turned to go, saying that he saw nothing there that would suit him!
"Well, vat you want?"
"I want a pair of one-legged pantalons."
"Vos dat all? Yawcob bring me one of dem one-legged gray pants on dot pile in de corner." In a few minutes Jacob returned and reported that the last pair had been sold.
Meantime the partner next door, who had been listening through the thin partition, had wapped out a plan of campaign, against the one-legged cripple.

"Yohn," he whispered to an attendant, "cut me off de leg of one of dem gray pants. Send him up quick." By the time this had been done the soldier had hobbled out of the first store only to be inveigled into the second. Again he went through the inspection of odds and ends, and again demanded one-legged trousers, intimating that he did not believe the trader had them.
"Not haf one-legged pants? Fadder Moses, vat you takes me for? Yohn bring me one of dem one-legged gray pants in dot pile in de back of de de-store."
The newly altered trousers were produced, and the waggish soldier gave himself up for lost. But as he spread them before him he became conscious, as did the dealer, of something wrong.
"Mein Gott! Fadder Abraham!
Yohn, you haf ruined me! You haf cut off de wrong leg!"

If the Baroness Bardett-Counts survives her marriage ten years she will have paid, without interest, $3,750,000 for a husband, taking her loss consequent on marriage at $75,000 a year—an expensive luxury, but she could afford it.

Prospector's Luck.

Three years ago M. Dunkin located at Leadville the mine which still bears his name. He was poor, but he worked faithfully and hard in the hope that he would strike mineral, but his money gave out and he sold his interest for $2,300. The purchasers, after spending quite a large sum in sinking another shaft on the property, which failed to disclose mineral, returned to that in which Dunkin had buried his hopes, and in sinking seven feet farther struck pay ore. The mine was sold a year later for $375,000.
An old-timer who was among the early arrivals at Rosita located the Pioneer, and sank a shaft 123 feet deep. He subsequently located the Chieftain, adjoining the Leavenworth, and sold it for $5 in twenty year's time. The sum is not yet due. Before selling he offered to give it to Captain Lambert of the Pueblo Chieftain, from which paper the mine derived its name, but the captain declined the gift. The same prospector discovered the Humboldt, Pocohontas, Leviathan and Invincible mines, all of which he gave to a man to whom he was indebted in a paltry sum. The first three named have since yielded $700,000, and bid fair to produce twice that sum in the future, while the old-timer is rich—prospectively—in the ownership of several lodes in the San Miguel Mountains.

Women and the Public Offices.

An announcement of considerable interest is authoritatively made with regard to the appointment of women to office. The president has determined to make no such appointments in future.
This rule will apply to such offices as post-offices, and pension agencies, etc., and will not, of course, have any bearing on positions in departments. President Arthur's reasons, as given by one of his friends, are that the post-office department has had a great deal of trouble as the result of appointing women to office, and that such appointments have caused a good deal of dissatisfaction to the party. This rule will affect a number of post-offices, the pension agency at Chicago and other places.

Playing Poker for a Bride.

Kansas City Times.
Two bloods of Salina, Kansas, were rivals in love, and decided upon a duel to settle the question of possession.
They selected their seconds, got a surgeon, and retired to a sequestered nook where they spread a blanket and the deadly work began. At the first deal one of the two rivals got two pairs, jacks and deuces, and failed to fill. His rival showed down four kings and took the queen. The surgeon got $10, the seconds got disgusted and the loser got drunk, while the winner got married.

A FABLE—A small boy once saw a pin lying on the sidewalk, and picking it up, he placed it carefully in his jacket. His action was seen by a rich banker, who took the boy into his service, and in time he was made cashier of the bank and stole all the money.
After he had restored half his plunder, and he was getting ready to go to Europe for his health, the banker said to him: "Why did you pick up that pin unless you were the honest boy I took you for?" "Because I had read that story when a child, and was looking for a sucker to play the game on."

It is said that since telegraph wires have been carried throughout Norway wolves have disappeared. It is stated that a wolf will not dare to pass under a rope or line stretched between poles, and that the farmers of Norway were in the habit of taking advantage of this to protect their property from the attack of wolves in the winter months.
Of course, a telegraph system would be a positive boon to the farmers if those curious facts are true, even if the lines were not used for communications.

There are twenty thousand women in Massachusetts, paying state and county tax $3,456,830. In Boston, two hundred and three women pay fourteen per cent of all municipal taxes.
