In the senate on the 4th immediately after reception of the president's message vetoing the anti-Chinese bill, the president pro tem suspended operation of business to lay the communication before the senate, and directed it to be read. Reading of the message was listened to with marked interest by the senate. The vital objection of the president is to the twenty years' suspension of immigration, which he construes as virtually prohibitory, and therefore a violation of the spirit, if not the letter of negotiations on which the treaty was based, and as a breach of national faith. The message calls attention to the proposition made by the U. S. commissioners on this point, and a counter proposition on the part of China to show that the understanding of the latter country concerning the agreement ultimately made was carefully guarded. Without naming any specific period of suspension, the president suggests the length of term should be experimental. The message and bill were temporarily laid on the table and ordered printed. The president said Chinese labor had been of great value in this country, and that monuments of their industry existed. They had largely built the Pacific railroad across the continent, but it might be wisely considered now whether limitation may be put on immigration of this labor. But if there be too much of it in one section of the country the same labor may be needed in another section, and the law should consider this matter and make such limitation as would permit this labor to go where needed. Immigration should be limited or restricted to a reasonable period. The president then points out other features of the act which in his opinion can be modified to advantage. The system of personal registration and passports is specifically mentioned as undemocratic and hostile to our constitution, and he alludes to the omission of an act to make any provision for transit to China of Chinese subjects now settling in foreign countries, to which subject, the president adds, his attention had been called by the Chinese minister. The message referred to alleged benefits to industry derived to the Pacific slope by the presence of Chinese heretofore, and expresses apprehension of the injurious effect upon American commerce with Chinese legislation of the character of that proposed by the United States.

A Kansas City dispatch of April 3d states that the notorious outlaw, Jesse James, was shot and instantly killed at St. Joe by B. Ford, of Richmond county. Jesse, it appears, had been living in that city since the 5th of last November under the name of Thos. Howard. Robert Ford, the slayer of James, and his brother Charles, had been shadowing Jesse James for many months past, following him from place to place, their purpose being to kill him the first opportunity that offered, but never succeeded in finding him unarmcd until this morning. The boys went to St. Joe about a week ago. Previous to this they had ingratiated themselves into the confidence of James, claiming they were robbers and horse thieves. For once Jesse was caught napping, and he seems to have believed all the Fords told him. The Fords immediately upon their arrival in St. Joe went to the house at the corner of 13th and Lafayette streets, where Jesse was living, and remained there until the tragedy occurred. This afternoon Jesse and Ford were talking together and Jesse had just laid his pistols on the table for a moment when Ford pulled out his revolver and shot Jesse. The ball entered the head behind the left ear and passed over the forehead, death being instantaneous. The identity of the robber is beyond question. He perfectly answers the description heretofore given of Jesse James, and the assassin described him perfectly, even to marks on his person. Even the clothes were removed from the body. Jesse James' wife was living here with him at the time. She says it is Jesse, and tells the story of their recent movements in detail. In May a year ago they located in Kansas City, where they resided until November last, when they removed to St. Joe. Since they arrived in St. Joseph they have lived in three different places. Mrs. James is a handsome brunette, about thirty-six years of age. She was handsomely dressed, and seemed to feel Jesse's death keenly. On Jesse's person were found a heavy plain gold ring marked "Jesse," two gold watches, one a stem winder engraved "A. S. B.," which is supposed to have been taken from a former governor at the Sweet Springs robbery. The other watch is a key winder and was taken, together with a solitary ring, at the time of the robbery of the Mammoth Cave line in Kentucky a few years ago. There were also found a set of jet studs and a lady's coral breastpin. Jesse's arms consisted of a 45 caliber Smith & Wesson revolver, a 45 caliber Colt revolver, a Winchester rifle and a double-barreled shotgun. The Ford boys claim that they had no object in view but to obtain the reward offered by the state government for Jesse James, dead or alive. They recently had two interviews with him at the St. James hotel in Kansas City. The governor was informed of their plan of action and approved it. The boys have been in constant communication with Suerff Kembley and H. H. Craig, and acted under their instruction. The assassin is twenty-two years old, and his brother twenty-five. They are fine looking, intelligent young men. After the shooting they promptly gave themselves up to await judicial action. Mrs. James is under advice not to talk any more. She says, however, she will prosecute the Ford boys to the bitter end. Her maiden name was Miss Miller.
