STATE NEWS.

Strawberries have come, says The Dallas Mountaineer.

The Universalist State Convention will meet at Dallas on the 22d of June. Commencement exercises at Pacific University next week.

Several cases of sudden sickness occurred in Hillsboro last week from a disease that resembles somewhat the cholera.

The following are the graduates at the State Agricultural College: W. Y. Masters, Alice Horning, Abbie Right, Eda Jacobs, Nettie Spencer, Bertha Neuggass.

An old man named Jackson Henkle, residing near Corvallis, had a tumor weighing two and a half pounds removed from one of his legs a day or two since.

A petition is circulating at Hillsboro, says the Independent, asking for arms and uniform from the State to arm a company of militia proposed to organize in Hillsboro. Already about 50 names are on the petition.

Miss Eaton, one of the teachers in the Pacific University; or Academy, at Forest Grove, died very suddenly on Tuesday last. She ran up stairs quickly, and it is supposed ruptured a blood vessel, as she fell down and died within a short time.

There will be a ball game at the Dallas band contest, June 28-30. A prize of $100 will be paid to the winner in case three clubs enter the contest. If four or more clubs enter, then there will be two prizes awarded—the first $100 and the second $50. Entrance fee, $20.

The grain in Yamhill county, says the Register, is growing at an astonishing rate. If we could only have a light rain, together with this warm weather, Yamhill county will have one of the most bountiful yields ever harvested. As it is, if the ground does not dry too hard, there will be over an average crop. And judging from the present outlook, based upon the foreign and home market reports, prices will be higher than for several years, which will enable the farmers to pull up about even again.

James A. McKenzie of Kentucky has been accredited by both the Republican and Democratic press of the East with having made the most "taking" speech on the proposed revision of the tariff. The point made by Mr. McKenzie on the practice of admitting bibles printed in Chinese free from duty will strike Californians as being particularly good. Said Mr. McKenzie: Mr. Chairman, with all your sense of fairness, which I am quite ready to concede, I appeal to you as the organ of this committee, if a more laughable absurdity, incongruity and injustice in the interests of the American people ever was presented than the fact that after we prevent the Chinamen from coming to this country, we admit the Bible printed in his language, which no man born of American parentage ever did or ever will understand, at the same time imposing a duty of 25 per cent on King James' translation, which has sent all our ancestors to heaven.

"Yes," Athelwald replied, speaking in low, impressive tones, "yes, I do like dogs, I am fond of them. But I like a shy, coy, shrinking dog, who flies away to the shadowy recesses of the woodshed when he hears the footfall of the stranger, and can only be won to sociability by love, and kindness, and patient pleading. I do not love the bold, forward, unquestioning mass of canine insolence and obtuseness that comes sneaking out from a lilac bush when one is half-way between the gate and the piazza, and nuzzles up to a stranger like an old acquaintance, and drags one all around the yard in a backward attitude, with no thought of one's dignity or comfort." And with a dry, convulsive sob he turned away, and as he walked toward the neckwear department, the bookkeeper noticed that his fawn-colored trousers had been patched in the postern gate with a nine-cornered tail-piece of olive-green.—Hawke.

Good for Salem.

The company of capitalists who own the Capital Mills at Salem have completed all arrangements for the erection of a six-story brick flouring mill on the property purchased of the late E. N. Cooke, which lies on the river a short distance above the present mill. Work has been commenced on the grounds, and will be pushed with vigor to the completion of the building. The contract is made for 500,000 brick, and the machinery will be landed here from the East in three weeks from this date. The machinery is the latest and best for making flour by what is known as the Jonathan slow reduction process, which has had a thorough and satisfactory trial in the present mill and has demonstrated its capability for making finer and whiter flour than any heretofore manufactured in the State. The cost of the machinery alone is $60,000, and the mills when completed will have cost $100,000. Its capacity will be 500 barrels per day, and that of the present building is 200 barrels. When this is completed Salem will boast the two largest and best flouring mills in the State. The same company also own the property formerly occupied by the Salem Woolen Mills, and we understand that they contemplate the rebuilding of the mills on a more extensive scale than ever at no distant date. Salem, besides being the capital, is one of the best laid out and handsomest and most pleasantly situated towns in the State, and we are glad to note these evidences of her future prosperity.

How Prize-Fighters Die.

Ben Hogan, the reformed pugilist, lately told a Chicago News reporter that "prize-fighters die prematurely of weakness and disease brought on by their injuries. In fact, they die at or before the time when, if they had not been prize fighters, they would have been in the prime of life. Charley Gallagher died at the age of 30, of consumption, caused by an injury received in his fight with Davis. Davis fell on him, planting his knee in his upper left breast. Brandy bears the name of killing Tom Sayers, but in my opinion he died of the injuries inflicted by John C. Heenan. Heenan jumped off a train and hurt himself, and some lay the blame of premature death on that accident, but he died of consumption, produced, in my opinion, by over-training and by the punishment he got in his fights with Sayers and King. John Morrissey's death is laid on Bright's disease, but he stood beating enough to kill ten men, and I believe that is what killed him. Yankee Sullivan is said to have been killed by a vigilance committee, but the truth is that he went crazy from the injuries to his head he had received, and committed suicide by opening an artery. Patsy Riordan, one of the grandest men, physically, that ever lived, died at thirty-six years of age, a complete physical and mental wreck. Bob Riddle died the same way, the very flesh dropping off his fingers. Joe Womble died in a Montreal insane asylum.

When Kemble played Hamlet, the gentleman who personated Guildenstern had a feeling that after all the real interest of the drama settled in himself. Hamlet said: "Will you play upon this pipe?" "My lord, I can not," was the reply. "I pray you." "Believe me, I can not." "I do beseech you." At this point Guildenstern felt the temptation too great to be withstood, and with a feeble apology took his position before the footlights, and bowing to the amazed audience, played "God Save the King."

Astronomers are everywhere watching the approach of the Wells' comet with great interest. They all admit that it will take the belt as the champion monster of the sky, and will give the sun a close brush sometime in the fall, if it keeps on its present course. It is generally believed to be an entire stranger, a sort of independent bushwhacker in the starry circles of politics, and nothing certain can be predicted of its movement, though it is billed for a grand pyrotechnic display.

Steamer Yaquina Burned.

The steamer Yaquina, Captain Deteny, arrived from San Juan Island yesterday morning with a cargo of 1800 barrels of lime. On opening the hatches about 6 o'clock it was discovered that there was a fire in the hold, caused, as is supposed, by water coming in contact with the lime. An effort was made to remove the cargo, but it was found to be impracticable, and the hatches were then battered down and cemented, in order, if possible, to smother the fire. An alarm of fire was sounded and a couple of engines were soon on hand, but it was deemed inadvisable to throw any water, as it would do more harm than good. It was proposed to scuttle the vessel, but finally decided to endeavor to extinguish the fire by means of carbonic acid gas, and preparations were being made, but before completed flames burst out about the smoke-stack, and in a few minutes the upper works were in a blaze. A steambot towed her across to the other side of the river, above the Stephens place. The ferryboat Veto cast off her cable and steamed to the burning craft, but after a short time spent in trying to extinguish the flames with the fire apparatus on board, gave up the attempt. After her bow grounded a number of persons climbed on board and saved the jibs and a lot of hawsers and running rigging. The Veto also returned and laid by her several hours, and in a measure subdued the fire, which seemed confined to aft midships. Toward evening the stern sank and the vessel heeled over, and the water flooding and slacking the lime caused an intense heat. The vessel and cargo will prove a total loss. The Yaquina was valued at nearly $40,000, and was owned by Mr. Z. J. Hatch. There was no insurance on her, owing, we understand, to her having to call at ports which have not been surveyed, the insurance companies refusing to take risks in such cases. It is reported that the Yaquina had been sold to the "Gospel Ship" Company of Seattle, and was to have been put on the route to Sitka to carry the mails. The loss will be a severe blow to Mr. Hatch, who is an enterprising business man, and much sympathy is felt for him.—Standard.

Schoolmarm in Idaho.

When he had finished with the climate, soil, and productions of Idaho, one of the group asked:

"How about education facilities?"
"That's the only thing we lack," replied the old man, with a mournful sigh. "We've got schools enough, but we can't keep no teachers."

"What's the trouble?"
"Well, take my school, for instance—only two miles from the nearest house, eminently situated on the top of a hill, and paying the highest salary. We can't keep a teacher over two weeks."

"Do they die?"
"Some do, though it's no place for dying. We had a young fellow from Ohio, and he met a grizzly and whistled for him. The grizzly cum. We had another, and a widder run him down and married him inside of a month. The third one was lame, and the injurs overtook him. Then we tried women folks. The first one got married the night she lit down there; I took the second about the middle of the third week, and the next one was abducted by a stage robber."

"Why don't you get the ugliest, homeliest woman you can find, some perfect old terror, like that lantern-jawed, razor-faced female over by the ticket window?"
"Why don't we? Stranger, you Eastern folks will never understand us pioneers in the world—never. That's my wife—the identical school teacher I married, and she was the handsomest one in the drove!"—Detroit Free Press.

It must be pleasant for Mr. Robeson, as he sits in the House of Representatives, to take up the leading newspapers of the country and find himself day after day called, in the plainest of nonpareil type, a "public robber." And how delightful it must be for the Republican party, of which Mr. Robeson is the Congressional leader.
