The Assassin Hanged.

WASHINGTON, June 29.—Reed wrote Guiteau's will, and Dr. Hicks remained about fifteen minutes longer with the prisoner, but was unable to turn his thoughts away from consideration of his immediate surroundings. When he retired from the cell Mrs. Scoville and her little daughter and John W. Guiteau were admitted. Their interview with the prisoner lasted 15 minutes, the warden and deputy warden being present. Guiteau was at first much excited and roundly abused the President and those "wretches," as he termed them, who had hounded him to the scaffold, "and you too," he cried out pointing his finger at Gen. Crocker and the deputy, "you will both be sent to hell." In a few minutes he calmed down and said he was ready to die and wanted to be hung at 12 o'clock sharp.

At parting he said, "Let me kiss my sister through the grated bars, and let it go on record." After kissing his sister and little niece, he turned to his brother and handing him a dime said, "Here is the ten cents due my washerwoman. I guess you had better settle that balance to-day.

Mrs. Scoville and her brother John then took leave of him, and passing directly to their carriage, were taken back to the city.

June 30th, 9:15 A. M.—Guiteau was very restless during most of the latter part of the night. Towards morning he fell into a sounder sleep from sheer exhaustion. He rose a few minutes after five and breakfasted heartily; told them to bring dinner in at 11 o'clock promptly. Dr. Hicks who remained at the jail at night, was called into the prisoner's cell as soon as he rose and held conversation with him on religious subjects. At 8 o'clock Dr. Hicks saw the prisoner again, when he made a request to have a bath and asked Hicks to go out and see the scaffold. Guiteau desired him to arrange with the warden to have the execution as soon as possible.

About 11:30 preparations began to be made for the execution. At 11:30 a detachment of artillery was formed on the east side of the rotunda, and brought muskets to parade rest. At this time about 200 people were in the tundra. Dr. Hicks was with the prisoner engaged in prayer.

Shortly before 12 o'clock Guiteau seemed to break down completely and burst into tears, and sobbed hysterically. Dr. Hicks sat by his side fanning him and vainly trying to calm him.

After the death warrant was read by the warden the prisoner became more composed, and turning away began to brush his hair. At 12:21 a loud steam whistle was blown at the warehouse, which is near the jail. This whistle usually at 12 o'clock, and by it Guiteau was in the habit of gauging time. The delay to-day was by special arrangement, so that its startling summons might not come before the officers were ready. Two minutes later the iron door at the end of the corridor clicked, and then Warden Crocker made his appearance and a moment later the familiar face of Guiteau was seen. The face was pallid and muscles about the mouth moved nervously; other than this there was no sign of faltering. The procession moved quickly to the scaffold and Guiteau ascended the somewhat steep steps with as much steadiness as could be expected from a man whose arms were tightly pinioned. At the last step he faltered for a moment and was assisted by officers who walked on either side. Upon reaching the platform Guiteau was placed immediately behind the drop facing the front of the scaffold.

As soon as the crowd gained access Gen. Crocker waved to them to uncover and all heads were bared. Dr. Hicks then prayed.
During the prayer Guiteau stood with bowed head. After conclusion Dr. Hicks opened the Bible and Guiteau in firm tones said, I will read a selection from the 10th chapter of Matthew, from the 28th to the 41st verses inclusive. He then read in a clear, strong voice and with good intonation, showing little, if any nervousness. Dr. Hicks then produced the manuscript which was prepared by the prisoner this morning and held it before him. While Dr. Hicks was arranging the manuscript Guiteau exhibited slight nervousness and moved several times from one foot to the other. He soon recovered his composure and looked over the sea of upturned faces.

"I am now going to read you my last dying prayer." He then read in a loud tone with a distinct and deliberate emphasis his prayer.

At several points he paused and endeavored to impart increased emphasis to his words by the peculiar facial expression so often observed during his trial when he was angered at something which was said or done. This was peculiarly noticeable when he alluded to President Arthur and when he declared this nation "would go down in blood." When he had finished reading his prayer he again surveyed the crowd and said with a firm voice: "I am now going to read some verses which are intended to indicate my feeling at the moment of leaving this world. If set to music they may be rendered effective. The idea is that of a child babbling to his mama and to his papa. I wrote it this morning about 10 o'clock." He then commenced to chant these verses in a sad, doleful style.

Dr. Hicks then offered a benediction. Attendants pinioned his legs and carefully adjusted the noose about his neck. Mr. Strong placed the black cap over his head, and as he did so Guiteau called out, "Glory, glory, glory!" Instantly the trap was sprung. The body turned partly around, but there was not the slightest perceptible motion of the limbs.

For at least forty seconds after the drop fell the body hung motionless. Then there was a slight contraction of the shoulders and legs due to muscular contraction. There was decided action of the heart for fully 14 minutes and the pulse fluttered two minutes longer. When the body had hung with feet just touching the ground over half an hour, it was lowered into a coffin which was waiting for it under the scaffold.

Physicians decided the neck had been broken. When the body was lowered the black cap was removed and the face exposed. The features were pallid and composed.
At 1:40 P. M. the lid of the coffin put in place and the body borne to the jail chapel, where physicians who were to make the autopsy were assembled. After the body was taken to the chapel arrangements were made to let Mrs. Scoville view it.

John W. Guiteau said to a reporter just after the execution that he was glad it was over.

"What will be done with the remains?" asked the reporter.
"We will bury him here in the jail, where he will be safe," said Mr. Guiteau. "He will not be taken out of jail."

The Blessings of Protection.

Sixty thousand workmen in the East have been compelled to strike, and fifty thousand more will be compelled to if better wages are not allowed. These workmen belong mostly to the iron and other heavily protected industries, and upon which the whole people are compelled to pay a tax of from 50 to 100 per cent. It would seem from the vast sums the people are compelled to pay these manufacturing monopolist under our high protective tariff, and the small proportion of the cost of manufacture expended for labor, that they ought to divide with their laborers enough of their enormous profits to keep them from starving. If high protection is such a blessing to labor as the benevolent monopolist claim there ought not to be such general suffering and discontent among working men.

DeClark and Samuels propose building a warehouse at Corvallis 40x60 feet. The lower story nine feet high for sacking and storing. The upper story 20 feet high and divided into six bins for storing wheat in bulk. The capacity of the building will be 60,000 bushels, and it will be ready for this year's crop.

There seems, to the Philadelphia Times, to be a disposition in some quarters to dig up the late Roscoe Conkling and do something with him. The present purpose is presumed to be to get him embalmed and then appointed to a place in the Cabinet where President Arthur is understood to be very anxious to have him.

The deepest mine in the world, according to Prof. H. Hoefes of the Academie Imperiale des Mines, in Prizbram silver mine in Bohemia. The lowest depth is nearly 3,300 feet below the surface. At this depth the temperature of the rocks is only 75.90 degrees F.; and the temperature of the air 76.3 degrees F.

Postmaster General Howe, in a letter to Congress, says it may well be doubted if the whole people get as much information of public affairs from volumes gratuitously distributed by the government, as from the newspapers. He recommends abolition of postage on newspapers and magazines.
