Pitiful but Transparent.

Frank James, the noted desperado, surrendered himself to Governor Crittenden at Jefferson City, Missouri, on the 5th inst. In a long letter to the Governor he says he is prompted to the act through consideration of his wife and children and a desire to retire from the world, and to retrieve his name from the shadow which has been cast upon it. He makes the plea that he is not so bad as he has been painted; that an outlaw has the thoughts and impulses of a man and it is his desire to return to the house of his parents, and there with his family pass his days in peace and thus gain the respect of his fellow men. He thinks his sufferings have done penance for his acts. He said that on Sept. 23d he came to Missouri for the purpose of surrendering and that previous to that date he had not been in the State for a year: "I came to Missouri," he said, "to try to regain home and standing among her people. I have been outside her laws for twenty-one years, and been hunted like a wild beast from one State to another. I have known no home. I have slept in all sorts of places; here to-day, there to-morrow. I have been charged with nearly every great crime committed in Wisconsin or her neighboring States. I have been taught to suspect my nearest and dearest friend of treachery. I am tired of this night riding and day hiding; of constantly listening for foot-falls, cracking twigs, rustling leaves and creaking doors; tired of seeing Judas on the face of every friend I own, and goodness knows, I have none to spare, tired of the saddle, the revolver and the cat-edge belt, tired of the hoofs and horns with which popular belief has equipped me, and I want to see if there is not some way out of it. I think that I can give the State substantial return for what I ask, and I think that the dignity of the law will not suffer. I shall prove myself worthy of mercy."

This plea is certainly a pitiful one. But coming from a bandit like Frank James it is to be taken with a great deal of allowance. Such men, who have dared to face nearly every crime known to man, are not so suddenly and willingly brought to the alternative of begging for mercy without some sinnet end in view. To a brave man like him it is a great humiliation. We have all along thought well of Gov. Crittenden and we do not believe he is foolish enough to set Frank James free. Although Frank denies it he undoubtedly thirsts for the blood of his brother's slayers, and how easy it would be after he had been granted full amnesty, to avenge his death and then retire to his former life. Frank James is the bold-outlaw of his day; murderer, robber and cut-throat, and there is no punishment known to man which would be adequate for his crimes; but the worst should be meted out to him.—Dayton Journal.

Annie Surratt.

[Cincinnati Commercial]
Annie Surratt, the poor girl who suffered so terribly as to make her old while yet young in years, lives near her brother John. She is the wife of Prof. Tonry, who is now the leading chemist of Baltimore. After her mother had been hanged, and her own mental faculties were shattered by the agonies she had undergone, the innocent girl was ostracised and persecuted to such an extent that this is a disgrace to our so-called Christian civilization. Years after, when Mr. Tonry—then a government clerk—dared to marry her, he was dismissed from office for the offense. For a time they were very poor, but being turned out of the government grind proved to be the making of him after all. They are now prosperous enough in a worldly point of view, but the once blithe and beautiful Annie is a wreck, both physically and mentally, with her hair as white as the driven snow, though but thirty years of age. She never recovered from the shock of that awful day, the last of her mother's life, and is subject to fits of extreme nervousness, bordering upon delirium.

Hon. Grover Cleveland.

We clip the following from a Republican exchange concerning the Democratic candidate for Governor of New York:
The gentleman nominated at the recent Democratic convention held in Syracuse, New York, for the first position on the ticket, is a native of New Jersey, born at Caldwell, Essex county, March 18, 1837. His father was a minister, and the candidate has living relatives prominent among the clergy; not to speak of his numerous clerical ancestors. After receiving such instruction as was procurable from the common schools in various places of the parental residence, young Cleveland was sent to the Academy, Clinton, Oneida county, New York. Upon leaving this seat of learning, he went to New York City, where he filled for some time the position of clerk in an institution of charity. He is next heard of making his way west, in company with an enterprising young man, with Cleveland, Ohio, as his objective point; but visiting while on his way, an uncle residing in Buffalo, he was induced to remain in that city, as clerk in the store of his relative. He was eighteen years of age at the time, an ambitious young fellow possessed of the earnest desire to become a successful lawyer. His uncle favored his aspiration, and he soon found the youth a clerk in the office of a prominent law firm, and at the same time enjoying the comforts of a good home at his relatives house. He was admitted to the bar in 1859. His first political office was as Assistant District Attorney for the county of Erie, under C. O. Torrance. He held the position three years, until the end of his superior's term of office. When he was nominated for District Attorney on the Democratic ticket, but defeated. In 1870, five years after this failure, he was elected Sheriff of Erie county, and in November, 1881, was elected Mayor of Buffalo by a decisive majority. His incumbency of the office is successful and popular. Mr. Cleveland is a bachelor.

The Pure Man Like the Lily.

The following letter from Oscar Wilde to a gentleman in Chicago is of interest as a literary curiosity:
FAITH COTTAGE, NEWPORT, 9, 17, 1882.

MY DEAR SIR: Replying to your questions, I would say that the pure man, like the lily, is unsullied by the mire in which he may grow. The blossom of the tree never looks to the soil about its roots, but is sustained by the trunk and the branch until it has offered up its incense, diffused abroad its fragrance, and accomplished its work. The perfect fruit is garnered by the husbandman, the other falls to decay and dust. This is the divine order of development: First, the germ of life; then the leaf, and then the ripened ear. First, the vegetable, then the animal, and then the spiritual. First, the natural man, born of the flesh, and of the earth earthy; then the spiritual man, born of the Spirit, the Lord of heaven, and not to be again brought into bondage to his own desires. Man's first duty is to bring himself into subjection to the King, and swear eternal fealty to Him, winning others by his law of love, never coveting to govern them by the sword. Caesar, Brutus and Nero used coercion, and their kingdom is always divided; but the kingdom of God is all in all, and the Prince of Peace is on the throne. His Kingdom is one. I am, most respectfully your obedient servant. O. WILDE.
—Chicago Inter-Ocean, Sept. 27th.

A bullet invented by a German chemist is made of a powerful anesthetic, which breaks on striking a person, who is made unconscious for twelve hours, and while in that condition can be taken prisoner. The inventor puts forward his device in all seriousness.
