

The Curse of Opium.

Do you see that dismal young man leaning against the corner of the building yonder? His face is a pale, saffron color and his eyes, ugh! They look as those of dried herring! Just contemplate that miserable creature for one minute. Did you ever see anything more completely broken up? I never did; and I once saw a man who had had a hand to heel encounter with the rear structure of a mule. I may say that man was somewhat disfigured. But he was no comparison to this object. The young man to whom I have called your attention once moved in the highest circles of Portland society. He was the especial pet of all the ladies and the envy of all his male acquaintances. Now, alas! he is but a sad wreck upon the highway of life—an object of shuddering pity and an outcast from decent company forever. Do you know what has caused this, terrible condition? I will tell you. Opium. Not many years ago he began the use of this deadly weed, the habit grew upon him by degrees until he is now what you see—a standing skeleton upon the street corner.

What, are there opium dens in this city? Plenty of them. You can find them in nearly every block in the thickly populated part of the city. In every many so-called respectable lodging houses the victims of this debasing appetite nightly, yes daily, satisfy their unnatural craving. It is no secret among those who are full posted upon the ins and outs of this city, that opium smoking and eating is one of the most extensive vices with which our metropolis is cursed. The number of victims is continually on the increase. There is no escaping from the embrace of this appalling habit. To tamper with it means certain destruction. I have often wondered why our officials do not make some effort to eradicate this evil. But it appears what is everybody's business is nobody's, and so the matter rests. Meanwhile I suppose young men will continue to indulge in the deadly narcotic, until, like poor Charley Ball, they are some day carried from their besotted beds upon a stretcher.—Portland Sunday Welcome.

Have they been disgraced?

It is alleged that 15,000 saloon keepers each controlling one vote besides his own, making an aggregate of 30,000 voters, bolted the Republican ticket in Ohio this year and voted with the Democrats, and because of this, says the Washington Post, alleged "free run vote" the Democratic victory in that State is declared to be "tainted with disgrace," or, as one enthusiastic and truly good editor blandly remarks, is "redolent of the odor of infamy." For the sake of argument with these unhappy brethren of the Republican press, we will suppose that their story of the "free run" bolt is true. These saloon keepers, then, hold the balance of power in Ohio. When they and their 15,000 friends vote for a ticket on either side of the political fence, that ticket is elected. When they leave a party it is defeated. Well, the Republican party in Ohio is generally successful, the Democratic party usually in the dumps of dire defeat. This logic demonstrates that Hayes carried Ohio in 1876, and Garfield in 1880 by these "rummies." Was the victory of Hayes, therefore "tainted with disgrace"? Was the victory of Garfield in his own State, therefore "redolent of the odor of infamy"? The brethren can see where their logic lands the "grand old party," and they will, let us hope, sit down in the shade and calmly reflect on the folly of their wild talk. We have no notion that the Ohio saloon keepers constitute a compact body, and transfer their votes from one party to another. We are, however, confident that the fanaticism of Smith, Foster & Co., repelled a good many thousand voters this year, including men who are more consistent friends of temperance than any of the fanatics.

ACCORDING to the estimate of the ablest writers on political economy, the people were made to pay, as bounties to the manufacturers, $2,542,000,000 during Grant's term, in addition to the enormous sum collected from them by the Government. Since the close of Grant's term this transfer of the earnings of the working classes to the coffers of the rich has amounted to not less than $1,790,000,000.

DEMOCRACY TRIUMPHANT!

New York Redeemed! Gov. Cleveland's Maj. 160,000.

CORRUPTION AGAIN REBUKED.

Poor Little Oregon Playing a "Lone Hand."

The Next President Sure to be a Democrat.

The election returns given below, show the sentiment of the better class throughout the United States. This is only a repetition of the election of 1874, with increased force, which elected Samuel J. Tilden President at the following election in 1876. If the Democrats take advantage of the present victory, we have no doubt but that they will elect the President in 1884, and we would not be surprised if his name should be Cleveland, the newly elected Governor of that grand old Democratic State, New York. This election conclusively proves that the worst element of American politics has complete control of the Republican party, and that the only possible way to rid our government of these leeches, is the election of some such man as Governor Cleveland, of New York, or Governor Pattison, of Pennsylvania.

SAN FRANCISCO, Nov. 8.—Midnight.—Gen. Stoneman's majority in the State will be 15,000. The balance of the State ticket will have 10,000 majority and upwards. The entire Democratic municipal ticket is elected. The Examiner, in an article this morning, points out brazen attempts at fraud by the Republicans tampering with the vote, etc. Six Democratic Congressmen are elected.

Carson, Nev. Returns show the election of the Democratic State, congressional and legislative ticket.

Indianapolis, Ind. The Democratic State ticket has a majority of about 6,300; with a gain of four congressmen.

Chicago, Ill. The State is conceded to the Republicans, State, congressional and legislative. The Democrats are given 7 members of congress and the Republicans 13.

Philadelphia, Penn. Patterson, Dem., is 30,000 ahead. The Democrats claim 16 congressmen out of the 27.

New York. Cleveland's majority foots up to 172,000 so far. The entire Democratic State ticket is elected. Both houses are Democratic with a majority of 50 on joint ballot. Majority of the congressional delegation is Democratic.

Denver, Col. The Democratic State ticket is elected by about 3500. The congressional ticket by 1000. The legislature is Democratic.

St. Paul, Minn. The Republican ticket entire is probably elected by reduced majorities.

Tucson, Arizona. The returns indicate the election of the entire Democratic ticket.

Yankton, Dakota. The Democratic ticket is elected.

Cheyenne, Wyo. Post, Dem., is elected to congress, and the balance of the Democratic ticket has a majority.

Richmond, Va. Late returns show the Readjusters vote growing smaller. The congressional tickets are even.

Charleston, S. C. The returns thus far give the Republicans one congressman and the balance Democratic. Negroes who felt any interest in the election voted the Democratic ticket.

Austin, Texas. The entire Democratic ticket is elected.

Nashville, Tenn. The Democratic State, congressional and legislative ticket elected.

Hartford, Conn. The State Democratic ticket is elected. The legislature is Republican. The Democrats elect 3 congressmen, the Republicans 1.

Mobile, Ala. The Democratic tickets are elected by a large majority.

Atlanta, Georgia. The Democrats have elected everything.

Dover, Delaware. The Democratic ticket is elected.

Louisville, Ky. The State Democratic.

New Orleans, La. Democratic.

Jackson, Miss. Everything Democratic.

Raleigh, N. C. The State, congressional and legislative tickets elected by the Democrats. The Democrats will have eight congressmen; Republicans 1.

Madison, Wisconsin. The Republicans will carry the State ticket. The Democrats elect four Congressmen, the Republicans five; Democratic gain.

Des Moines, Iowa. The State is Republican by about 20,000. The party elect nine congressmen.

Topeka, Kansas. The Republican ticket is elected by small majority, with the possible exception of St. John for governor. Democrats claim the governor and one congressman.

San Francisco, Nov. 9.—1 A. M. The returns now indicate a Democratic majority in the next congress of over 40. The senate will be close, probably Republican.

Detroit, Mich. The vote is close and the State is claimed by the Democrats.

New York. The Tribune's summary of the election gives the Democrats an overwhelming majority.

The Times charges the defeat of the Republican party on Conkling and Arthur.

New York City. Edson, Dem., is elected mayor by 25,000 majority. The entire citizens' ticket is defeated by the regular Democratic candidates. All the city congressional districts return Democrats.

Philadelphia, Penn. Beaver, Rep., is defeated by about 40,000. Republicans lose 6 congressmen. Simon Cameron's old home gave a large majority against his candidate.

Boston, Mass. Gen. Butler's plurality is about 25,000. Democrats gain four congressmen and many members of the legislature.

New Haven, Conn. The Democrats elect their governor by 5000 plurality and gain two congressmen. The legislature will remain Republican.

Trenton, N. J. The Republicans elect Wm. Walter Phelps to congress. Robeson, Rep., is defeated.

Concord, N. H. The Republican ticket is elected by a small majority.

Baltimore, Md. The indications are that Montgomery Blair is defeated, and the Republicans gain two congressmen.

St. Louis. The Democratic ticket will be elected by at least 60,000 majority.

San Francisco. It is conceded at the Republican headquarters that the Democrats will have about 30 majority in the next congress, but that the Republicans will control the senate by a small majority; that the Democratic plurality in Indiana is 8000, and that New York, Pennsylvania, Massachusetts, Indiana and Connecticut are overwhelmingly against the present administration, with New Hampshire close.

No capital has within twenty years carried out greater works than Berlin. A municipal statement lately made shows that since 1875 nearly eighteen millions have been spent on drainage, which the extreme flatness of the site rendered exceptionally costly. The municipality bought large estates for sewerage farms, and has spent on them $5,000,000. Since 1878, nearly $3,000,000 has been expended on bridges, and $1,500,000 is to be expended on the Central Police office. Three new infirmaries will cost about $800,000. The enlargement of the water works will cost $650,000; $2,750,000 has already been spent on the Central Cattle Market, but it will cost considerable more, and $2,500,000 is the estimate for the first appropriation for new and extensive market halls. These facts were adduced when the Burgo-master proposed the issue of a new 4 per cent municipal loan for $11,250,000. The population now 1,200,000 increases about 30,900 a year.
