

Grant not yet Dead.

The following dispatch, which is a special from Washington to the New York Sun, indicates as though Grant is not as much out of the political field as our half-breed friends would like to have him, and there is a probability that he may give them trouble yet.

A movement is making to bring out Grant as a Presidential candidate again in 1884. The correspondent says the managers think the third term clamor, as they call it, has died out. They claim that new conditions have arisen since 1880, and that the prejudices against Grantism has also ceased to exist.

It is alleged that the railroad and manufacturing corporations, banks, rings, speculators, jobbers, contractors, shoddy princes and adventurers, that swarmed about the White House from 1870 to 1877, will rally and put forth all their power to elect Grant.

No Cause for Grumbling.

Mitchell's followers have no reason to complain, even if the former was defeated for senator.

- Ward is appointed appraiser; Simpson is postal inspector; Tuttle is postal agent; Steele is postmaster; Chittenden is deputy; Lotan is inspector of boilers; Will Steele is a postoffice clerk; Carwright is revenue collector; Dave Steele is a deputy; Morgan ditto; Tolman is surveyor-general; Stowell is draughtsman; Kilbourne, gauger.

Evidently, the influence of the senator with the administration is not to be sneezed at. — Welcome.

In all true educational work the attention should be fixed, first upon the thought, second its expression. The study of any branch of science requires a clear understanding of the ideas recorded, and the words become useful only as they fully express these ideas.

Editor Richard Smith's newspaper never hit the mark more squarely than it did when it says that "unless Congress shall enact a substantial reduction, such as the argument of the commission was for, and a true simplification of duties, and these the lowest on the materials and lower forms of industry, and on the articles of consumption by workmen and the masses, its work will be done over by a Democratic House, with a vim augmented by this failure."

The average overcharge to the American farmer on what he buys, because of "protection," is estimated at 40 per cent, and it is probably nearer 50 per cent. That is to say when a farmer makes a purchase of 60 cents worth of goods he pays $1, the 40 cents additional now and then going into the government treasury, but usually into the pocket of some rich manufacturer.

FIRE IN PORTLAND.—Two fires broke out in Portland yesterday morning at 4 A. M. One consumed Corbett & McCleary's large store and damaged Knapp, Burrell & Co., Fleischer, Mayer & Co., and the loss is very large.

JUNCTION CITY NEWS.

Our Reporter Sends us a Readable Letter.

JUNCTION, Jan. 15, 1883. ED. GUARD:—Your correspondent pulled on a pair of No. 14 boots, made of India rubber, a pair of mittens donated from the Christmas tree, and with a borrowed overcoat, started out in search of Junction items for the GUARD. The first man we ran across was worthy Marshal Castle, who, thinking we were an "escape," showed us on every turn. We finally compromised the matter with him by assuring him that we were a resident of the city of Junction, and promised him our hearty support for Justice of the Peace at the next election.

The death of Rev. A. Hardison has cast a gloom over our little village. He was cut down suddenly, and thus a good man has passed away, and his place cannot be easily filled. He was buried to-day with Masonic ceremonies at Tangent. He was a member of the Good Templars, who escorted his remains to the depot.

Prof. Campbell has a splendid private school in this place. Prof. Campbell is a fine scholar, and is deserving of patronage.

The public school of this place opened last week with Mr G V Boggs as principal and Miss Mattie Lee as assistant. With such an able corps of teachers, Junction City's education will not be neglected.

We boast of a lyceum in this city, and many difficult questions have been discussed, and we have heard of a reverend gentleman here that has put himself on record on the woman suffrage question. He was last seen going towards home at "two-forty rate," singing.

"Rock-a-by, baby, don't be in a fury, For mama has gone to sit on a jury."

This same gentleman has been enjoying excellent health since the holidays, as he was the recipient of a bottle of vermifuge at the hands of Santa Claus.

Mask balls, sheet and pillow case parties are announced for next month.

Several weddings are on the tapis. Will send you some cake.
