While the luxury of the telegraph has become regarded as indispensable Journal speaking on this subject, sen-Eastern [press] agents appear to be afthat the people of the West care not a tinker's obstruction for these affairs. If the space used by these insignificant accounts should be devoted to the details of great events like the destruction of an immense amount of property, a large number of lives, or scandal involving prominent men who are taking to climb to the top of this bluff and roll care of public interests, the people like to read all about it ; but when a dispatch is sent all the way from New York, giving an account of a robbery by a colored boy, the amount being they were aware of it the day was well sigh $1 25, we are made to feel very tired.

A Likely Story.

Ex-Senator Spencer, the recusant very suppery, they might fall in, and the star-route witness, who has been spending some time in Canada, has sailed for knap springs and believed he could find his Liverpool, and there is no probability way there by dark. Another Confession.

Another man has come to see the -terrible effect of the electoral commission crime by which Hayes and Wheeler ed : were counted into offices to which Tilden and Hendricks had been elected by the people. That man is Simeon Cameron. Mr. Cameron said to a N. Y. Herald correspondent in Philadelphia a few days ago: "I have thought how much better it would have been for the Republican party had it permitted Mr. Tilden to take his seat instead of appointing the eight to seven commission in order to put in that man Hayes. I am proud to say I voted against the commission. It was bad business, that commission."

Gloomy predictions over Democratic successes have not come to time. The country has not gone to destruction, valuables have not become unsettled, business has not been demoralized, and even the sensitive stock market does not show any alarm beyond its natural shrinkage at any sudden change.
