Rhea's death: "You have probably heard by this time all about the death of Mr. Rhea, the ollest settler of this place. The first reports were that he had committed suicide, but now the general belief is that the taking of so much laudanum might have been accidental. I believe it is sometimes used to sober persons when intoxicated. Mr. Rhea is said to have taken a small doze for that purpose, and that not having the desired effect, took more, which proved too much. It was a very unfortunate circumstance for the family, making the recovery of the money on his life insurance in the North acific rather doubtful."

A BUCOLIC "BREAK."

We clip the following interesting bit of news from the Portland Sunday Welcome of April 15th. Who are they?-

"Three bloods from Eugene City, whose knowledge of the "haut ton" has been confined to the occasional descriptions thereof by drummers, found themselves, after a severe struggle with fortune, $3000 ahead of Portland. These young men (whom we shall call Clay, Cal. and Doc.,) are of a magnanimous kind, and as they made the "killing" in Portland, they determined that here it Danl. Donnoly are on Chickshomony trying should be spent. The first thing they did was to order a big dinner at Eppinger's, with high-priced wines at every course, beginning with chablis and raw oysters and ending with finger-bowls and champagne. To the finger-bowls is attached a tale; Like the backwoods Congressman who saw a pieceiof lemon floating in one of these glass globes in front of him, and who, after drinking some of the water, pronounced it the weakest lemonade he had ever tackled, these three that Mr. Chrisman's fence on the south side young rustics sampled the contents of these hght-blue finger-bowls, and then in dismay line. exclaimed to each other, "What is it?" "The water has had the chill taken off, sure enough," said Doc.; "but it is the thinnest soup I ever tasted. It smacks of the elecmosynary kind referred to by Dickens." "Hay! Waiter, what is this luke-warm stuff case of Hamilton vs Eugene City, and see in glass bowls, anyway? Let the chicken what can best be done in the matter, with wade through it again. Do you think you can give us any funny business because we are Lane county boys?" When they heard what a mistake they had made from the line of the amused gargon, a silence fell upon the hilarious youths like a pall, and they slid out quietly through fear some one had heard them and would see them, taking a solemn street. vow never to breathe of the await affair to a living soul."

THE ABRAMS CASE

Postponed Until May 7th.

The grand jury last Tuesday brought in a bill against H. W. Abrams charging him with murder in the first degree, and he was immediately arraigned and took one day to plead. Wednesday morning he was brought into court and plead not guilty to the charge. His attorneys then stated that they would take some time to procure their attendance. and asked for a continuance of the case, After arguments by both sides, Judge Bean concluded to hold an adjourned term of court to hear the case, Monday, May 7th, The following attorneys will appear for the prosecution: Prosecuting Attorney Hursh, Rufus Mallory, Geo. B. and G. A. Dorris, and Geo. S: Washburne; for the defense; Strahan & Bilyen, Richard Williams, Weatherford & Blackburn, John Burnett N. B. Humphrey. and J. W. Wright.
