Democratic Victories.

The Democratic tidal wave which swept over the country last fall, continues to grow in favor with the people, as is manifested by their votes at the recent local elections held in New York, Ohio and Illinois, where the Democracy have again been victorious.

New York shows large Democratic gains throughout, while in Ohio and Illinois, in almost every city where a contest was made on party issues, the Democracy have gained complete victories. In Chicago they elected a mayor and a majority of the aldermen; in Cleveland the mayor and eighteen out of twenty-one of the aldermen. In Jefferson, formerly the banner Republican county of Ohio, nearly every township and incorporated city gave Democratic majorities.

Great Republican leaders and journals, to counteract the effect of these victories on the future of that doomed party, endeavor by lengthy editorials, in which they pervert and mystify the facts, to create the impression that these signal victories are attributable to local causes and have no political significance. The fact, however, remains that the people of these great agricultural sections have become tired of being robbed under the semblance of law to enrich the few bloated aristocrats who know but little and care nothing for their prosperity, further than it serves to enrich their already overladen coffers. Would it not be just as well for the future of their party and far more honorable to themselves to openly admit the truth and confess that the people have grown tired of waiting for the reforms which they have promised but never fulfilled, and that their defeat is chargeable, direct, to the action of their party leaders in the weak and wicked Congress which has recently adjourned, and in the imbecility of a corrupt administration of the accidental President, who uses the executive office in the interest of the moneyed power, against the benefit of the people, by locking up in the vaults of the treasury the gold and silver coin which belongs to the people as their circulating medium—Ex.

The Postage Reduction.

Some calculations have recently been laid before the public intended to show that in consequence of the reduction of postage from three cents to two cents, three-fourths of the postoffices of the United States will not pay. The reduction in question was probably made in furtherance of the policy to conciliate the whole country if possible. Having raked the United States for pensioners until we are now paying more on that account than suffices to maintain the army of Germany, a little douceur in the shape of a reduction of postage was apparently got up for the masses generally. But whatever the motive, the reduction in question was one in the interest of civilization. The only object in referring to it now is to call attention to the circumstance that the calculations mentioned are made on a wrong basis. The true economical fact is that the reduction of postage will largely increase correspondance, and consequently the receipts. The phenomenon has been observed both in this country and England. If there were no grounds to expect an increase of business, as the reduction should not have been made, for it is not just that the whole people should be made to defray a portion of the expense of carrying letters for a comparatively few large users of the mails. The reason that an increase of patronage will compensate for reduction in postal affairs, is that ordinarily it will cost as much to transport one letter as one hundred.

The Daily Standard of Portland, announces that on next Tuesday morning it will appear in an enlarged form with full telegraphic dispatches. The Standard has long been noted for its local and State news, and with full telegraphic dispatches, it will certainly take the lead in the journalistic field of Oregon. The Democracy should give it a hearty support, as the party has long felt the want of a State daily paper.

The Republicans claim that their defeat is caused by the whisky vote. During the years of their success they must have utilized the whisky vote, else how could it so effect them.

Mrs. Stites, of Michigan, is on a visit to her sister, Mrs. Quivey, of Benton county. The two sisters had not seen each other for 37 years.

Better Methods.

The Teachers' Institute for this judicial district and county is to be held in this city during the coming week. We trust our teachers in large numbers will avail themselves of this opportunity for drill and culture. More and more is demanded each year from men and women, a broader, fuller, rounder culture; our colleges, schools and institutes must give this culture. If our present methods of instruction and study are fully sufficient to secure this, then our present educational system is perfect. But in this, as in everything else, there is room for improvement. Our institutes furnish new methods of instruction each year. What our teachers and school officers need, what our people need to know is, that intelligence begets thrift and enterprise, and costs money out of the land, out of the mine, out of air and water and every other element, and that State which educates her children the best is the strongest State, the richest State, the most prosperous and the abiding State. The institute work, although in its infancy, is still an important factor in the advancement of our people, and in providing and preparing for this opportunity of self-improvement and government, our teachers deserve great praise. Thus let us educate our own directive power; the great work of education and not be forced to import so many teachers from other States.

Correspondence from Camp Creek.

It has often been asserted that a rolling stone gathers no moss; but they are, at least, capable of receiving impressions from their surroundings, be they pleasing and beautiful or the reverse. There is much at present in the prosperous little valley of Camp Creek to attract and to form a favorable impression upon any observing mind. Level fields, rolling pastures and timbered hills, all picketed around with tall firs, set high upon the surrounding ridges with its own broad gateway, through which the all-important road leads to the world, and smiling Camp Creek winds its peaceful way.

An important feature here is the large amount of hops grown, there being nearly fifty acres of the best of soil already planted with this vine of varying worth. The hop-growers here pursue the only plan by which they may reasonably depend upon success in the end. They began several years ago with small yards, faithfully cultivating them each year, as well as enlarging their yards from time to time. They were even ready to sacrifice other property when hops were worthless, rather than do as many others did—"plow them up"—and they are now enjoying their well-earned success, and they need not fear but that success will crown their efforts from time to time, as long as they do not depend upon success every year; for that they will certainly fail to have.

The valley is well represented at the district school by an intelligent band of young folks, who have caught the spirit of light-heartedness from their valley, while their fun-loving propensity is simply astonishing. Church is held once each month at the school-house, while regular church and prayer meeting are held in the adjoining district—lower Camp Creek.

Game is plentiful. The deer seem to wonder at the remarkable stillness that has come over the hills. They are often seen bounding over the hills, and even visit the flocks of sheep in the pastures. The valley also boasts a pet deer, which is very docile.

There is one farm here for sale, a place that is capable of being converted into a desirable and beautiful home, and with far more natural advantages than the average home can display.

I find the county newspapers, as well as general selections from the State and Eastern papers common in every household.

On the whole it is a good place and deserves to rank in reputation, as well as in truth, with the best of the small valleys in Lane county.
