Brief Items.

The Virgil class has begun Livy. Sallust recites at eight o'clock hereafter. Plenty of time for extra sessions. Last Friday the Eutaxians appointed #

The maples planted along the University sidewalk are beginning to show signs of life, and it is to be regretted that there are not more of them.

During the late sessions of the Teachers' Institute we noticed the familiar faces of many of our former schoolmater.

This (Friday) evening the Estaxiens debate the question, "Resolved, that the right of suffrage should be affowed' to women." Of course it will be decided in farbr of the affirmative.

New is the time when the seniors may be seen looking very important and carefully guarding rolls of paper, which they carry under their arms, and their awed schoolmates whisper to one another, "It's their essays."

In olden times teachers used to give cakes to their scholars (so says Horace) to induce them to get their lessons. Now they give "extra sessions." We think that this is one of the cases where time has not improved

Work has been commenced on the foundation of Prof. Straub's new house, to be built on his property on Eleventh street. He expects to have it finished about the last of the Summer, and it will be quite an addition to the eastern part of the town. It is said that a certain junior has become so charmed with one of his lady sequaint- St. Helens wagon road or by mail to ances, that he has determined to make her name as well as the lady his own, and that he has already proceeded so far that he writes "Me" before his name that the change of names may be more gradual.

"She slid, she slid, and on she slid, And sideways gave a whirl; A guide she good and then she glode, That heave but foolish girl.

Harrah! Hoopla! Who ever saw A'girl that could do better! A'girl that could do better?

A flock, a crosbe 'two awful rash,
But the roller scales upset her."

The looking glass in the eastern part of the hall was taken from its place one day last week, and rumor says that some of the Laureans took it. We are corry of this, not that the girls want the glass particularly, for they rarely use it, but we don't like to see the Laureaus getting so vain. We think the matter ought to be looked into and the offender brought to justice.

A False Report.

Will wonders never cease? The seniors heard not very long ago that they had had a fearful quarrel among themselves, originating out of the jealousy which the Scientifics and Classicals held toward one another; that in electing the officers of the class the Scienown way.
