Wall Street's Next Dictator.

We clip the following from a New York correspondence of the San Francisco Bulletin: After the exhaustive account which you printed a few months ago of Wm. H. Vanderbilt's life, it is scarcely necessary to echo the obituaries which have appeared in our daily press since his retirement. The brokers are highly delighted at the change, for any change is welcome to them just now, and the Vanderbilt boys are noted as bold speculators, who will now be in better position than ever to know what they are about in speculating upon their own property. Wall street is looking around for a successor to the retiring giants, Gould and Vanderbilt, and Henry Villard is talked of as the coming dictator of the "street." He is unquestionably a strong man and, moreover, is liked personally by the members of the financial menagerie. His wealth at present is estimated at $30,000,000, all of it made by judicious and honest stock operations. He began as Gould did, with nothing, running away from his family in Germany on account of some boyish escapade, and roughing it here until he became a correspondent of the Chicago Times.

His name was Henry Hilgarde, the present distinguished superintendent of the coast survey, Julius Hilgarde, being of the same family, but he liked the nom de plume of Villard so well that he retained it after leaving newspaper life. He began to make money in earnest when his German friends sent over various sums for him to invest in American enterprises. In this work he showed so much judgment that the business increased rapidly, and Villard's commissions were large, beside which his control of large blocks of stock bought upon his advice made him a power in the railroad world. When he acquired control of the Northern Pacific road he loomed up as an important figure in Wall street, and his reputation grows every day. He is a large hearted, clear-headed man, who works hard and makes few mistakes. His individual wealth of some twenty millions does not represent his weight in Wall street so much as the influence which his advice has upon the German and Dutch investors who have at least one hundred millions in our roads and Western enterprises.

A Large Turtle.

Captain Augustus G. Hall and the crew of the schooner Annie L. Hall vouch for the following: On March 30, while on the Grand Bank, in latitude 40° 10', longitude 33°, they discovered an immense live trunk turtle, which was at first thought to be a vessel bottom up. The schooner passed within twenty-five feet of the monster, and those on board had ample opportunity to estimate its dimensions by a comparison with the length of the schooner. The turtle was at least 40 feet long, 30 feet wide, and 30 feet from the apex of the back to the bottom of the under shell. The flippers were 20 feet long. It was not deemed advisable to attempt its capture.—Scientific American.

The best sign board is your card in the newspaper, even if you state only your name and the business you are engaged in. This not only pays the advertiser, but it lets people at a distance know that the town you live in has a prosperous community of business men. As the seed is sown so the fruit recompenses. Never take down your sign while you expect to do business, for it indicates that your business is poor and you are losing your grip, commercially speaking. The judicious advertiser will receive ten dollars for every dollar invested in the columns of a live newspaper.

The Chicago Tribune (Rep.) says that there should be a stiff larger reduction on everything that has a tendency to oppress the laboring class; as the tariff is to-day it protects capital in every department.

J. B. Harris has resigned his position as superintendent of construction on the O. & C. railroad extension south. Mr. Volk, principal assistant engineer under Chief Engineer Morris, has been appointed to succeed him.

OREGON AND WASHINGTON.

Boise City's $10,000 school house is ready for occupation.

The citizens of Somerville are raising money to build a town hall.

A. J. Splawn has recently purchased 400 head of cattle in the Yakima country, ranging from $40 to $50 per head.

A great amount of freight is being hauled from The Dalles to Ellensburg this spring. The country is rapidly filling up.

Mr. Durr is contemplating the construction of a toll bridge across the Natchez river, just above its junction with the Yakima.

The liquor license at Waitsburg will be raised to $500 per year, which, it is thought, will close every saloon in the town.

Governor Newell has been requested by numerous citizens of Spokane county to provide them with arms and ammunition.

Millers are offering 70 cents per bushel for wheat at Walla Walla, and are not eager buyers at that. It is thought there is 50,000 bushels in the hands of the farmers.

Mr. Polington, who resided in the Palouse country, was killed by a tree falling on him. The night before one of his little children awoke and told his mother, "Mamma, I want papa to come home. I don't want him to die." The father then being absent, and met with his death next day.

The Chronicle says a cave has been discovered at a point of rocks about four miles below Celilo, by workmen who were blasting off the face of the cliff to obtain rocks by rip-rapping the O. R. and N. Co.'s road. The entrance allows a man to walk in erect, and the passage has been explored for some distance.

Walla Statesman: The grain throughout the country never looked better than at present, nor the prospects of our farmers brighter. We have received some samples of white wheat well headed and nearly five feet in height. Some bald barley on the ranch of H. P. Isaacs will be ready for the reaper in about two weeks. It is now over three feet in height.

On Monday, May 5th, near Winlock, at the camp of J. M. Clark & Co., a man by the name of John Tranberg was instantly killed by a falling tree. He was off some 200 yards from the other men, and had just felled a tree which, in falling, struck a dead tree close by and broke off the top, which fell upon him unawares and broke his neck, death ensuing immediately. His friends reside in Chicago, and were notified at once of the sad accident. He was buried in the graveyard at Winlock.

Albany Democrat: Last Wednesday W. L. Lyle arrived in this city direct from Prineville after a trip of four and a half days. There is now only about nine miles of snow, which is about two feet deep. While on his way across he passed six wagon teams coming this way, and not one going to Prineville. So that it may safely be said that wagons can cross the mountains now without much trouble. Mr. Lyle was accompanied as far as Brownsville by Luce Nichols and will return in a few days by the same route which he came.

In cleaning up the rubbish in the court-house at Nashville recently there was found the bond of Samuel K. Polk, father of James K. Polk, who gave bond in the sum of £500 to marry Miss Jane Knox. The bond was dated December 24, 1794, and Robert Knox, the father of the bride, affixed his name to the bond as surety. This was clever in the old gentleman. Not many prospective fathers-in-law would do this sort of thing nowadays. This giving of a marriage bond was a queer old law, and its object was to insure that the man was able to support himself, and to prevent the possibility of his family being thrown to the public bounty. As a result, county commissioners in those days were not troubled with supporting paupers.

The great bridge between New York and Brooklyn has been finally completed. It was formally opened several days ago.
