TILDEN AND HENDRICKS. Probability of the Renomination of the Ticket of 1876.

NEW YORK, July 13.—The Democratic leaders of this State are earnestly putting forward efforts to have the next National Convention of their party held in Saratoga, and it is rather significant that the rather simultaneous sentiment in favor of the renomination of the old ticket "Tilden and Hendricks" is making rapid headway.
What was scouted as ridiculous three or four months ago is now spoken of as rational and expedient. Leading Democrats in New York, Albany, Syracuse, Buffalo, and other points of the State, are fast coming to the conclusion that renomination of the old ticket is the easiest, if not the only practicable way of escaping many difficulties that the National Democracy will have to encounter in their next convention. The selection of a candidate on whom all factions could cordially unite would be almost impossible in view of a numberless rival aspirants, while the adoption of a platform on which they could all agree would be equally difficult; but when the "old ticket" is in the field rival candidates could at least console themselves with the reflection that they had all been treated with impartiality, and as for platform, none should be needed.
The great fraud of 1876 should absolve all other issues, and the rectifying of that wrong would furnish incentive to action. This, at least, is the way the advocates of the old ticket argue.

It is conceded by all New York Democrats that if any candidate from the Empire State is to be presented to the next national convention it must be Tilden, and serious doubt is entertained by a large portion of the Democrats whether any candidate but Tilden could be sure of carrying the State, but would Tilden accept? This is the question that continues to be asked by many who have read the account of Watterson's visit to Greystone, and who are not aware of the change that has come over the dream of the sage, and which has been wrought, as his friends say, by an entire change in the situation.

Your correspondent interviewed an old and intimate friend of Tilden as follows:
"You are aware that a wide discussion has arisen as to Mr. Tilden's willingness to undergo the strain of a presidential contest. What do you think are his own convictions?"

"I am satisfied he views his public career as a matter so absolutely in control of public decision that he will tacitly abide the event of renomination.
In regard to the idea of excessive strain upon his physical condition, he has been fully prepared for any contingency of this kind, not merely by his rapid restoration to health and vigor, but by his changed relations to such a campaign, should it occur.

At one time, not long since, even his immediate followers abandoned the idea of his further leadership and went to seek their fortunes in other directions. Many of them are now somewhat alarmed at the prospect of his re-nomination, as they have it set up for themselves, or have joined adverse interests, but that Tilden will respond in the affirmative to a proper demand by his party and the people there is not a particle of doubt. It is also his conviction that the time, opportunity and necessity for his identity with a movement for renomination of the ticket which was elected by the people but denied by their tribunals in 1876 is now at hand. The recent course of Hendricks has perhaps given this idea more positive vitality than it seemed to have a few months ago. The refusal of Hendricks to recognize this historical justice, as well as the popular expediency of the renomination of the old ticket by the last Democratic convention, caused the nomination of Hancock and I regret failure for that experiment. This last remark you will please take as an expression of own opinion."

On July 5th, at New Pine creek, Lake county, Ben Cloud shot and killed his brother-in-law, Charles Goodmar.
It was a family quarrel, and young Cloud was discharged upon examination.

How it was Done. (From the N. Y. Times.)

While Mr. James was collecting evidence of the ring's work, and cutting off the fraudulent service which Brady had erected, the dismissed chief of the ring was busily throwing up intrenchments behind which he proposed to defy the law. At the outset he bought three Washington newspapers, and bitterly fought in them the administration and all who engaged in the work of uncovering his offenses.

The annual pay for a useless route in the Indian Territory was raised from $6,330 to $150,000. The mail amounted to two letters a month which, a solitary horseman carried over the wild prairies. The annual pay for four routes in Oregon, in the indictments recently tried, was raised in this way from $16,732 to $164,189.

The testimony of Price who held thirty-six routes, upon six of which he secured "expedition" that raised the annual pay from $48,070 to $169,813, and who had rich contracts could not be more explicit. He bought his "extra allowances" by large bribes, paid in postal drafts in one case to Senator Kellogg, and to Brady. Links here and there have been supplied by other testimony, and the chain is complete.

The service in nine Western and Southwestern States and nine territories was let at the beginning of the term for $2,009,280 per annum. In these states and territories were the rings route. In one year Brady raised the pay for this service to $5,706,997, mainly by "extra allowances" to ring contractors, amounting to $1,700,000 per annum. In the first half of the second year he added almost $800,000 more to the members of the ring, and gave them "temporary contracts," without competition, which yielded nearly $1,000,000 a year, many temporary routes being useless.

The baker's dozen who, with Brady composed the ring, were bleeding the treasury by frauds that were notorious.
On only 415 routes held by these men and their representatives Brady added $2,095,558 to the annual pay, raising that pay from $1,262,505 to $3,367,- 763, and at the same time decreasing the number of miles on which the mails were carried. The inquiry was narrowed until it related to ninety-three of these 415 routes, and it was found that the annual pay for the ninety-three routes had been raised by the addition of nearly $2,000,000, from $762,858 to $2,723,165. These figures show how the frauds were limited to a comparatively small number of routes, and that nearly one-half the annual appropriation was given by Brady to only thirteen out of a large body of contractors. These thirteen were divided into several groups, each group having its agents and its lines of influence. The members of one of these groups who were led by a Senator of the United States and a powerful politician, have been on trial (with Brady) and have been acquitted. This group's share of the "extra allowances" was nearly $500,000 a year.

True Pizen.
(Arkansas Traveler.)
The other day when the train robbers under sentence of death arrived in Little Rock, a large crowd of people gathered around to look at the celebrated murderers. One old fellow with long hair and a face that told of free indulgence, paid no attention to the train robbers but stood inspecting another criminal.

"Why don't you look at the train robbers?" some one asked.
"Oh, blame the train robbers," he replied. "I'm plastering my gaze on this fellow."

"What did he do?"
"Stole a horse, that's what he done.
You fellows act like you ain't got no judgment, goin' wild over a train robber when that's a horse thief in the neighborhood. It don't take nothin' these days to draw a crowd, an' it's the young bucks the boss thief is sorter gone down, but with the old timer he's true pizen, lemme tell you."
