Saving the Wheat.

Just when the reapers should have been at work in Michigan it was raining every day, and a dozen times per day, and farmers were a blue lot. Sunday came, and it was a clear, fair day. At Delhi, in Ingham county, a fairsized congregation had gathered at a country church to hold the usual service, when the minister arose and said: "Brethern, the Lord has finally given us a fair day."

He paysed here, and a couple of farmers slid out.

"He has given us six days to work and one to rest; but during the last week you have rested six."

Here four or five more went out, and he turned to the few left and continued:

"A armer who has thirty acres of wheat aching to be reaped, should realize that the Lord knows that no man

The last farmer started for home, and the good man looked over the women and children and said:

"Old Mrs. Radwick is nearly blind, and Deacon Jackson has no wheat out.
