the Inoffensive Countman

The advocates of the Chinese in the East have assumed that the Chinese of such virtues that they have drawn upon themselves the hatred of the wicked white inhabitant of this slope. For some inexplicable reason to them the French, Dutch, Spanish and English colonies-particularly the latterhave passed most stringent laws against them. In short, in whatever country, he is, the people think his presence a curse; it is only in countries that he has not blessed with his presence that he is known as a perfect paragon of purity.

A few weeks ago a man more emi nent for superficial knowledge than original research was in Portland lecturing on subjects that had been more ably and exhaustively treated by other al sarcasm, that if the Chin man drank whisky, chewed tobacco and voted the Democratic ticket there would be no objection to his presence here. The past week in Eugene has proved that the Chinese have their quiet vices. A young white man and woman have been arrested for smoking opi um in a Chinese den. Of all drugs that are habitually used, it is considered the most wasting, degrading and debasing. It takes such a hold on the system that once in its grip, there is no hope of reform. Such is the terrible, deadly habit that wherever a Chinaman goes he introduces. And the fact is known to every one that if through curiosity he wishes to try the effects of the poison he may obtain it at the Chinaman's. To fully under-stand the effects of this poison, it may ing is believing. Come and see. F. B. So farreaching is the custom in China that the Chinese Government is making vigorous though futile efforts to sup press it. The immense increase of the importation of opium into the United has given alarm to men who have paid any consideration to this matter, At least one young man may curse the day that he was tutored by the artless Chinaman in the mysteries of opium and grades at F B Dunn's. smoking.

It seems that a wonderful change has of late taken place with Mt. St. Helens since she has been hidden from sight during the long mocky period.

The snow has entirely disappeared from the north side and partially from the south side of the cone. This to are destitute of vices, and are possessed the oldest settlers, is something they never witnessed before. By taking observations through a powerful glass, steep precipices and dark chasms can be seen upon the north side, and the mountain seems to have a changed appearance .-- Oregon Mist.

> "The fleecy" has already begun to spread its winter mantle over the northern part of Maine. Although in nearly the same latitude, the hills and valleys of Oregon have scarcely felt the touch of frost and we are, indeed, just rejoicing in the first rain of the season. While the industrious loggers of the "pine tree state," in mufflers and mittens, are drawing their first logs over the snow, the farmers of the land of webfoot, in their shirt sleeves, are turnmen. He said, probably meaning it as ing their first moist furrows for the fall season.

> It is pleasing to note that one household in Oregon will be supplied with Oregon butter this winter. The trustees of the insane asylum have purchased thirty milch tows and will bid defiance to the oleomargarine factories of California. Truly, it seems, life in the Oregon hospital for the insane has its compensation.

> Joaquin Miller has just completed five plays, all of which have been paid for, and will pay him a royalty, he thinks, from $10 to $25 a night.
